"With Ellis Island it is not so much a question of international law as of international manners. If the United States government does really hold that being divorced abroad implies moral turpitude of a degree to make even a short sojourn a source of spiritual danger to American citizens, then it is that country's business to make it known clearly that all divorcees will be denied admission unless they previously satisfied the American embassy or consulate in their own country that special indulgence may safely be extended in their particular case."

SULLFIGHT BROADCAST FROM SPANISH ARENAS

In Spanish wireless the latest effort has been to broadcast a bullfight. The ring, by its circular construction in which the seats rise, tier on tier, to the roof balconies, forms an admirable sounding box. Then the bullfight is a stereotyped affair, a repetition of a short drama, which rarely lasts more than 20 minutes, and is divided into five phases.

First is the brief one of the entrance of the bull when he bounds into the plaza and rushes for the men waving large cloaks. Next is the longer act, during which the bull must be brought to charge the horsemen three times and receive three lance-thrusts; then the short phase of the banderillas, when three pairs of barbed darts are stuck into the nape of his neck; then the culminating moment of the death-stroke by the matador, and finally the last brief phase when the dead bull is dragged out of the arena by a team of janglingly harnessed mules. The spectators, numbering sometimes 15,000 punctuate every phase with their shouts. Only very brief indications by the speaker near the microphone are necessary to guide the listener-in, who can follow the fight from start to finish, and feel some of the emotion the spectators express in the mighty shout-waves that rock the microphone.

Dr. Henry T. Bray, for years one of the leading physicians in New Britain, and a veteran member of the board of health, left an estate valued at $242,453.

POETRY

A VALENTINE

"Sweet and Twenty"

Whene'er I think of you
I think of roses red and white,
Suffused in soft Auroral light
And g'istening with morning dew,
Whene'er I think of you.

Whene'er I think of you
I think of violets hid from sight
Withdrawing from the garish light,
Outvying Heaven's cerulean blue,
Whene'er I think of you

Whene'er I think of you
I think of morn in early June,
The woods enthralled by every tune,
When living sapphires round me flew
Whene'er I think of you.

Whene'er I think of you
I think of joy and light and life,
Wondering to whom you'll be a wife,
Sure he will prove both brave and true
If he has you.

—William Russell in Boston Transcript.

To St. Valentine

St. Valentine, though wide your fame,
You don't deserve your pious name,
And this the reason of my plaint—
Your conduct misbefits a saint.

From yourtime up to middle age
I've catered for your patronage,
But ever since we've been acquaint
You haven't acted like a saint.

For when comes round, as fixed as fate,
The day which you appropriate,
You give me cause for new complaint
In manner most unlike a saint.

I long have sued for Mabel's smiles
And yielded to her costly wiles,
But ardent lines or baubles quaint
Alike are spurned,—ungrateful saint!

Your halo's rimmed with many a dart;
Your symbol is a wounded heart;
Fond swains you lure with artful feint
Such actions don't become a saint!

Your name no longer should ma[illegible]
In saintly calendar 'tis clear,
For I affirm, without restraint,
You're more a sinner than a saint.

PLUNGED INTO RIVER TO RESCUE FELLOW WORKER

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—A 25-foot dive from a railroad trestle into the icy waters of the Charles river outside the North station resulted in the rescue of a drowning workman today. David E. Philbrook, of Medfield, employed by the Boston and Maine railroad, as a snow shoveler, made the plunge after his fellow worker, Patrick Higgins, of the South End district, had fallen into the river from the slippery trestle. Philbrook swam ashore with the rescued man and both were taken to a hospital. Their condition was not serious.

DANIELSON

MOTOR COACHES RESUME THEIR SERVICE TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Feb. 13—Likely the subject is getting wearisome to readers, but it is a matter of public interest that breaking out of highways continues to be a big adventure in this corner of New England, particularly over the border on what is known as the Danielson pike to Providence.

With motor coach service suspended over this route Thursday and Friday, or at the best with only an occasional coach getting through, it was said Friday that service will be resumed this morning.

Two heavy snowstorms within a period of seven days proved too much for the highway crews of Rhode Island assigned to the Danielson pike to keep it continuously suitable for travel. It was opened a week ago today (Saturday) after the storm of the previous Thursday, but opened only to the extent of making it possible for big coaches to get through. Progress was being made in clearing it and making it something better than a plowed field to ride over when the storm of last Wednesday came along and messed things all up again.

During Friday some machines tried to negotiate the route and got through, but their experience in doing it cannot hardly be recorded as a pleasure trip. Valiant work was being done Friday and will continue today to make this important travel artery serve as it was intended to serve.

All through this section of Connecticut no difficulty is experienced by motorists in going where they want to go, provided their destinations are on state highways. Venturing off these hard surfaced roads spells trouble for anyone driving a car—and will for some time to come.

Interesting to many people here and in Putnam, for various reasons, is the project of the Canadian organization of Goodyear Tire and Rubber company to purchase the Canadian Manhasset company. The recently published summary of the financial statement of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company for 1925, showing earnings of $31,000,000 for the period, a surplus even greater and a marvelous recovery from the depression of 1930, serves to center attention on this new-est expansion plan of the great Akron corporation, with a subsidiary, the Goodyear Mills, Inc., in this town.

Circulars have come into this territory, to stockholders of Canadian Manhasset, setting forth the plan of Canadian Goodyear to take over Canadian Manhasset.

Canadian Manhasset was a branch of the Manhasset Manufacturing company, now dissolved, but which was one of the great tire fabric concerns of the country during the war and until a slump hit the industry in 1926. Its main mills were at Putnam and it had other yarn mills at Taunton, Mass. Like the Connecticut Mills, Inc., of Danielson, it stepped over into Canada and established plants. The wreck of the major concern did the Canadian organization no good at all, so it is of interest just now that Goodyear plans to take it over. Goodyear does a tremendous volume of business in Canada and, by manufacturing fabric and tires across the border is relieved from paying the customs duties on tires manufactured in the United States that eventually would find their way into the Dominion.

Members of Killingly grange have a treat in store for them next Monday evening. "Uncle" Joe Shippee champion fiddler of New England, has agreed to come up and play for them, providing the weather is not too stormy and traveling conditions so difficult as to make his trip here over arduous. The affair is exclusively for members of the grange.

There are days when men whose memories hark back through the years talk among other things of floods. The stage is all set for a bad mess, they will tell you, if the weather should happen suddenly to run warm. There is 20 inches of snow and a dozen to 15 inches of ice on the rivers. This is the kind of a combination that existed when warm weather and rains came unexpectedly, after severe winter weather about 40 years ago and took out the Quinebaug bridge here and other bridges along the river between this place and Norwich. It is not an experience that one would like repeated. But it can happen as things are right now.

For the Civic federation, Mrs. James M. Paine reports that $412.07 was received from the sale of Christmas seals last December. This amount is slightly less than was reported for the sales of the Christmas season of 1924. Practically all sections of the town of Killingly and sections of the town of Brooklyn figure in accounting for this total. The Anti-Tuberculosis association of the state gets 15 per cent. of the money obtained here from the sale of the stamps. Eighty-five per cent. remains in Danielson for use by the Civic federation in carrying on the works of mercy in which it has been engaged for a number of years.

Practical Law for the Law Woman will be the subject of an address before members of the Killingly Woman's club at the auditorium of the high school next Wednesday afternoon, by Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, of Boston. Mrs. Barron recently was selected a member of the school committee of Boston, and will return there immediately after her Danielson lecture to attend a testimonial dinner in her honor.

Dr. Hugh Campbell, of Norwich, will on Tuesday next, omit his usual monthly clinic in Danielson, but will be at Putnam as usual. Circumstances have forced the cancellation of his usual monthly visit here.

In schools of Killingly Friday there were observances of Lincoln's birthday, with appropriate exercises recalling the achievements of this outstanding American.

A derailed freight car at Norwich, Friday morning, delayed the arrival of the boat train, with mail and newspapers, in Danielson until about nine o'clock.

There are days when there is real exciting after road conditions by people motoring from one place to another and not anxious to get stalled by the way. Unfortunately some who are in possession of such information have been dreadfully crabby about giving it out. It is strange how those who serve the people and are paid by the people get exaggerated ideas of their importance.

Mrs. John LaBelle, 93 Elm street, West Side, nearly collapsed on the street Friday morning while on her way to the office of a physician to have a badly gashed hand given attention. Chief John McFarland called a taxi for her. Mrs. LaBelle slashed her hand with an axe while cutting wood and five stitches were required to close the wound.

The matter of feeding game birds is now urgent. It is a matter that should interest all sportsmen who like to go afield with dog and gun. Grain for distribution is available through Secretary Harold R. Atwood, of the Danielson Bird and Gun club, to whom information may be given about flocks of game birds that need attention.

Danielson's main street was brilliant with flags on Friday, Lincoln's birthday brought the first opportunity for bringing out and displaying the flags used in what is known as the Shenandoah decoration. The effect was very pleasing and creditable to Danielson's thoughtfulness in observing such events. An extension of the display would make it even more impressive and effective, and such an extension is likely to come in the not distant future.

One reads of Henry Ford offering $5,000 for a lantern in original use on the famous U. S. S. Constitution. It so happens that a lantern from that famous frigate is owned in Danielson—a lantern made to hold a candle. The owner is averse to publicity, so his name does not appear here, but he admits that $5,000 of the automobile magnate's cash might take it away. This is no hidden advertisement of an antique dealer. The Danielson man who owns the lantern in question has it as an heirloom.

Mrs. Wilfred Thomas, School street, is recovering at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, after undergoing a surgical operation.

Crews of men employed by the town, operating with horses, sleds and shovels, were engaged Friday in breaking out highways in the outying districts of Killingly.

Among the pre-Lenten affairs, this one postponed from earlier this week, is the Alumni association dance at the high school Monday evening.

Progress is being made on work incident to enlarging the banking quarters of the Danielson Trust company so that it will include practically all of the ground floor of the building.

Warmer weather Friday brought relief in more than one way to this corner of the state. The higher temperature served to settle the snow banks and probably to prepare the populace for another storm.

Miss Miriam Boomhower, visiting nurse of the Civic federation, is confined to her home for a few days.

The three act farce, "His Uncle's Niece" was given before a large audience in Memorial hall Friday evening. The show was for the benefit of the Universalist society. Many people from the Springs attended.

Friends of Miss Margaret Pariseau gave her a reception at Society hall Friday evening. Miss Pariseau will leave town in a few days to enroll as a student nurse at a hospital in Hartford. At the reception Friday evening she was presented a beautiful wrist watch.

The drive for funds for the Tolland County Y. M. C. A. will begin February 23rd and continue for the remainder of the month. The goal has been fixed at $6,100 and Stafford Springs quota is $500. Gardiner Hall of Willington is general chairman and also local chairman for Stafford and Willington.

PUTNAM

GAHAN EMBEZZLEMENT CONTINUED TO FEB. 27TH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 13—John Gahan was arrested Thursday evening on a warrant signed by the judge of the city court. The complaint alleged the embezzlement of a sum of money, between four and five hundred dollars, from an insurance company of which Gahan was formerly agent. The arrest was made by Sergeant George Laird, and a bond of $2,000 was furnished by the defendant's father and mother.

Gahan appeared in court Friday morning but no action was taken, the case being continued under the same bond until February 27th.

J. F. M'KENNA SEEKS DIVORCE FROM HIS WIFE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 13—James M. McKenna who has attained a state reputation as a lightweight pugilist has gone to Reno, Nevada, ot reside temporarily, while seeking a divorce from Mrs. Helen C. McKenna, now living with her parents in Webster.

The writ was served on Mrs. McKenna this week by a deputy sheriff of Windham county. The papers were sent to the Connecticut deputy sheriff as the family had its former residence in Mechanicsville.

The allegations of the complaint specify several of the acts of alleged cruelty on the part of the wife. One allegation is that the defendant broke a milk bottle over the fighter's head. Another that she took hold of her husband's coat tails and ripped his coat up the back, and tore the boxer's shirt off his back.

The couple were married in Webster some four or five years ago. They have one son, James, Jr. It hah been said that Mr. and Mrs. McKenna separated a year or more ago but it was not until the papers in the divorce action were received that it became generally known that the former boxer had gone to Reno, to get a divorce from his wife.

McKenna, since the separation, has been living with his mother in Mechanicsville and worked in the Mechanicsville mill. He is best known in this section through his appearance in the ring in Putnam and Webster. For some years he has not been seen in action in Putnam because the game has not flourished here.

Over in Rhode Island there is a revival of an effort to have the state build a new trunk line from North Scituate westward to the Connecticut line near East Killingly. This route has been in the road building programme of Rhode Island for quite some time and it is hoped that it may be built this year. Connecticut has plans to meet this route and run a trunk line through Killingly to meet the Willimantic-Putnam trunk line at Pomfret. This is an old stage coach route.

HOPEVILLE FAMILY HAD SIEGE OF SICKNESS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Feb. 12—The Peppin family in Hopeville have had a serious time with illness and Dr. Jennings the same in trying to get to them. Maxim Pepin was very ill with acute indigestion, and Theophile had diphtheria and acute kidney trouble, with chicken pox in between spells. He now has a congested lung, but is better. The doctor drove his car Wednesday to the icehouse, where he was met with a sleigh and had to go through lots to get to the house. When he got back to the ice house he had to shovel his way several times in order to get home. The Pepin sleigh tipped over three times going back. The terrific wind filled the tracks up so quickly that it was a case of shovel five or six times going to Hopeville.

MOOSUP COMMERCE CHAMBER FAVORS INCORRORATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, Feb. 12—At the meeting of the Moosup Chamber of Commerce this week, steps were taken to get the general opinion of the residents of the village of Moosup, in regard to incorporating it into a fire district. The president of the Chamber of Commerce, Thomas J. Seaton, was empowered to appoint a committee to interview those involved, and as yet, has the matter under consideration. The question of sidewalks, lighting systems, and public service matters pertaining to the village proper would then be in control of the village itself, rather than the township. As it is now, with the town comprised of four separate villages, school matters, questions of roads, improvements and expenditures of money proposed by any one section generally finds opposition from the remaining sections. A fire district as proposed would give Moosup a town government, similar to a borough, but much simpler and power to conduct its own affairs according to its needs.

Monday evening the Sunday school will hold a social party, the committee in charge being Ray Greene, Alfred Royle, Mrs. Carl Matheveson, Mary Baldwin, and Mrs. George Babcock. Refreshments are to be served.

Miss Mary Dougherty, 63, of Pleasant street, who has suffered with illness for several months, died at her home Thursday morning. Miss Dougherty was born at West Greenwich, R. I., but for the past 25 years has been a resident of Plainfield. Burial is to be in Providence.

In regard to a statement made on Monday's Bulletin, it was Fred Greenhalgh who appeared in court for selling liquor and maintaining a gambling place, not James Greenhalgh.

COUNTESS AT ELLIS ISLAND; EARL AT HOME OF UNCLE

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—(AP)—While the former Countess of Cathcart awaited at Ellis Island the result of her appeal to the secretary of labor for entry to the United States, the Earl of Craven was located tonight at the Park avenue home of his uncle Bradley Martin.

The former countess was refused admission on grounds of moral turpitude because she admitted her love affair with the earl which resulted in their elopement to South Africa and the granting of a divorce to the earl of Cathcart.

The Earl of Craven reconciled with his wife, arrived here recently with her for a visit. No question was raised as to his right to enter because of his elopement with the countess.

The countess spent the day alone, no visitors being allowed because of the holiday.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

News About Women In Europe

LONDON, Feb. 12. (AP)—After having made many unsuccessful attempts to give concerts in Great Britain this season, Tetrazzini has surrendered to her shattered nerves and now is at the Italian Riviera for a long rest.

"I shall not return again except as the old Tetrazzini," the prima donna said as she was leaving London. "I hope that will be in the spring. I shall be joined at the Riviera by my sister and shall do nothing but rest and recuperate for two months."

The great singer has shown unusual kindness to Luella Paikin, the English girl who substituted for her whenever she was unable to appear. On many occasions she went to the hall and introduced the young singer to the audiences, and this has given rise to the belief that she has selected Miss Paikin as her successor on the concert stage.

Princess Astrid, the beautiful Swedish girl who may become Great Britain's crown princess, in no sense is a modern flapper.

She has long dark hair and a camellia-like complexion and flashing dark eyes. She is slender, of medium height and dresses with simplicity. Like the Prince of Wales, the princess is an accomplished dancer. She is an adept at all outdoor sports and is especially fond of ice-skating.

The modern standard of feminine beauty is healthier and more natural than formerly, in the opinion of Miss Gladys Cooper, the actress.

This is due to the fact that present day women do more work on the whole than their forbears, she said, and therefore, keep as healthy and natural as possible.

H. G. Wells has aroused the displeasure of women aeroplanists of this country.

Recently, the author was asked for an article on the future of flying, but instead of writing it he replied that "judging by existing service, which has been found unpunctual, untrustworthy and inconsiderate to passengers, there is very little future for aviation."

Whereupon, Mrs. Sophie C. Elliott-Lynn remarked that "H. G. is getting old" and added that it is a pity a man "who has always been a plunger, farsighted and possessed of clear vision, should enter the ranks of the commonplace and everyday conservative doubters and skeptics of all that is new."

Supporters of the Imperial Airways also disputed the author's charges.

It is news to many music lovers to learn through "Musical Opinion" that Mendelssohn's Spring Song originally was called Camberwell Green.

The journal says Mendelssohn visited England in 1847 and stayed at Denmark Hill with his wife's relatives. A drive to Windsor had been arranged but Mendelssohn pleaded ill-health and elected to stay at home with the children.

He went to the piano and began to think. The children resented this breath and when he began searching for a chord pulled his hands from the keyboard.

The composer had to play some notes as best he could, which gave a particular character to the music and led to the introduction of the hurried triplets in the largeto melody. He named the composition "Camberwell Green but later changed it to Spring Song.

BISHOP BREWSTED FAVORS VOLSTEAD ACT MODIFICATION

HARTFORD, Conn. Feb. 13—(AP)—Bishop Chauncey B. Brewster of the Episcopal diocese of Connecticut, favors modification of the Volstead act to make light wines and beer legal, he said today. The statement was made in commenting on the action of the action of the Church Temperance society (Episcopal) in declaring for modification of the "dry" law.

Bishop Brewster characterized the Church Temperance Society as a voluntary organization, stating that its announcement does not commit the church.

"Personally and speaking for myself alone," the bishop said, "I have often wished a distinction had been and might now be made between the stronger liquors and light wines and beer. This I had desired especially for the sake of our foreign born folk, to whom the use of light wines is as innocent as tea drinking is. In Italy, for instance, I do not remember of ever seeing a drunken person.

"For this reason, and because of the apparent failure in large measure to enforce the law as it is, such modification of the Volstead act I should like to see, if possible."

THEATRICAL PRODUCERS OPPOSE DRAMATIST GUILD

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 13—(AP)—Theatrical producing managers wintering in Palm Beach held a conference today and vigorously denounced the minimum basic agreement adopted by the dramatist guild of the Authors' League of America.

"We will never sign it," was the consensus.

The most objectionable feature from the managers' viewpoint is the clause which would give the author full censorship in technique of the production. The producer would not be permitted to change a line or situation in a play without the author's consent. The motion picture clause also was objected to by the producers.

NASHVILLE HAS SUNDAY BLUE LAW INDICTMENT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 12.—(AP)—W. C. Thomas, filling station proprietor, arrested in the Sunday blue law round up recently and whose case is to be a test case, was indicted today by the county grand jury on a charge of maintaining a nuisance, "in the sale on Sunday of certain of his wares so as to disturb the public peace, be a prejudice to the public morals and set an evil example to the good citizens of Davidson county."

The case will be taken to the supreme court.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISE FOR POLICE IN ROME

ROME, Feb. 12—(AP)—The practice of providing religious exercises for the Roman police, which was discontinued in 1870 at the time of the breach between the vatican and the Italian state, has been revived. This is interpreted in Rome as another significant indication that a reapproachment between church and state is impending.

THE COAL STRIKE

During the early days of the coal strike a statement was made by the president of the mine workers to the effect that the public was due for an awakening. From the developments that have taken place the impression is gained that the real awakening has come to the head of the miners' organization.

That there will be a ratification on the part of the miners of the settlement of the coal strike is practically certain. According to the terms of the agreement the miners are to go back on the same terms that they quit. There is to be a five year contract and each year either side can bring up the question of wages and if they cannot agree their differences are to be submitted to what amounts to arbitration.

That means that the miners are going back to work on the terms of the operators, terms that were offered last August and terms that have been offered repeatedly since then. They have brought themselves to the verge of starvation, imposed a loss of something like $18,000,000 in wages on themselves to say nothing of a much larger loss on others directly and indirectly concerned and caused no end of distress in the coal mining region. For this they must thank Mr. Lewis.

From such of the agreement as has been made known the victory is for the operators and public, the advantage to the public lying not only in the fact that the raising of the price of coal through increased wages is eliminated and the yearly danger of a coal strike for a five year period disappears. The public has been deeply concerned in the strike but it has nevertheless recognised that it was no longer necessary to submit to the holdup and it has had no small influence in bringing about the settlement through its resort to substitutes.

That the record breaking strike is over is good news, but it remains to be seen whether it is going to be a lesson to those who have blindly followed such leadership as has been responsible for all the distress, trouble and losses that have piled up since last September. The great wastage is enough to prevent anything of the kind in the future.

THE BREAD TRUST

There are trusts and trusts. Not all trusts are alike and the attitude toward trusts, or combinations, has changed within the last decade. Where combinations were frowned upon a few years ago they are being urged now. They are regarded not only as economic but as beneficial to the people. Such a radical right about face is to be noted in connection with the railroads, which are now being urged to consolidate.

Even under such conditions, however, it is not to be expected that combining cannot be carried too far. It is to be realized that the laws against trusts of a harmful nature are still in existence and it is to be expected that they will be enforced. That of course accounts for the suit which the government has brought against the bread trust. This has gotten to the point where it is regarded as dangerous to the interests of the people and in violation of the law. It is noted of course that the housewives can make their own bread and cake if they desire and that the head of the combination of large bread concerns has indicated his willingness to have the big concern thoroughly investigated.

From such a study as the department of justice has made it has reached its decision and decided that the big organization oversteps the law and that it ought not to be permitted to proceed on the lines planned. Combinations up to a certain point may be justified but in this instance the government believes that the merging business has gone too far and it serves notice to that effect.

By bringing suit it proposes to have the matter tested out in the courts. If it can be shown by the head of the bread combination that there has been no breaking of the law the court will so decide. On the other hand if it is shown that it has no desire to give its approval to what is regarded by it as a monopoly. The government isn't responsible for it and doesn't propose to sanction it by doing nothing about it.

FIGHTING CANCER

For a long time there has been a recognition of the need of a persistent and harder fighter against cancer. There are those who have given their lives to the study of this disease, and for the purpose of relieving the victims. It cannot be said that no progress has been made but such as it is it hasn't gotten to the point where it can be said there is a cure.

Taken in its early stages there are means of dealing with certain forms of it that produce satisfactory results, but it is unfortunate that there is so great a disposition to cover up suspicions, or to wait too long before seeking treatment, with the result that little or nothing effective can be done.

In recognition of this situation it seems not improbable that good results will be obtained from the cancer clinics which have been established in certain cities through which it is hoped to get in touch with a larger number of cases in the stages where there are chances for help and where it is possible to make a better study of the disease.

There is nothing about cancer that calls for secrecy. Rather is there need for giving the doctors a chance to fight it before it obtains a hold which can not be shaken. There is every reason why there should be full cooperation between the afflicted and the medical authorities. This should be greatly encouraged by the clinics and therefore should be of decided benefit.

In days gone by there was the feeling that a person who contracted tuberculosis had no chance. That idea has disappeared. The fight against tuberculosis has been increasingly successful. It doesn't hold the terrors it did because of the manner in which the fight has been waged and the cooperation that has been given by the public.

The accomplishments in that great fight against disease strengthens the belief that through persistency there will yet come as gratifying results in the fight against cancer.

A ZONING ORDINANCE

If zoning laws could be enacted when a city was being laid out, or soon after, there would be little difficulty experienced. They might not be perfect then and it can be appreciated that they would be subjected to the changes as conditions changed. But whether it is a new city or an old one the value of such ordinances cannot be too thoroughly appreciated.

Within the past few days Hartford has adopted a zoning ordinance. It is the result of much study and a number of hearings. Consideration has been given to the conditions that prevail and those which it is desired to restrict. There has been a disposition to carefully weigh the objections that were raised concerning proposed regulations with the result that alterations were made and it is believed that there now exists an ordinance that not only meets the requirements of the city but which can be complied with without decreasing the full use of property.

Hartford has faced much more than the problem of a new city and yet it has from all indications successfully met the situation. At least it starts off with the impression that the test will be satisfactory, though changes the same as in any ordinance may be required from time to time.

Repeatedly has it been shown that Norwich needs the benefit of just such an ordinance. The manner in which Hartford has dealt with this matter is worthy of careful attention on the part of those who have the local situation in hand. From the experience and acts of others there is much of value to be obtained. Zoning would be of as much relative value to Norwich as to Hartford.

PROTESTS TO MEXICO

When this country makes a protest to Mexico it is invariably the case that our neighbor to the south takes the view that because we are larger we are trying to get Mexico to do something unreasonable. Repeatedly it has been intimated that we were trying to interfere in Mexico's affairs. This has been the attitude in connection with the petroleum and land legislation which has recently been enacted in that country.

The United States has maintained that the legislation was unjust to the subjects of other countries who were involved, and against the promise made by President Obregon when he was at the head of that government, which promise had much to do with the recognition extended by this government.

Whether Mexico will take any different view of the matter as the result of the protest that has now been made by the British government against the same legislation remains to be seen. It is not improbable that other countries will express themselves in the same way as a matter of protection to their subjects.

These additional protests are of course strongly supporting the position taken by this government. They show that we are actuated not by any feeling against Mexico but for the purpose of properly protecting Americans who have acquired territory in Mexico and stand in an insecure position because of the new laws. Since protests indicate as plainly as anything could that Mexico may well stop, look and listen.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

I wish every boy and girl in the United States who has come to years of discretion could read the following words about the use of spare time, and be guided accordingly: "There is no finer basis of fellowship between God and Christ and man than honest work, contributive to the welfare and happiness of the community and the world. Work comes first of all. Next to work, as I have said, is the use that a man makes of his spare hours, and especially is this true of young people. They may use their spare hours in a way to undermine health, soundness of mind, truth of character. That is what dissipation means; it means spending one's spare hours in such a way as to make certain the early collapse of the body, the mind, and the character. Spare hours should be so spent, or may be so spent, as to increase vitality, to develop the intellect, and when the intellect is pervaded with human sentiment it is always spiritual in its exercise, and necessarily brings into existence a noble character."

In a little booklet, recently published, there is a short, snappy essay, or better still perhaps, sermonette, entitled, "Do It Now." The author applies it chiefly to business where it is as applicable as anywhere. But does he not go too far when he says that it "is the first rule of success in business?" In other words the "first rule of success in business" is to act on the spur of the moment; whatever action one deems it necessary to do in his business act just as soon as the idea springs into one's mind. There may be times when one's first thoughts are the best thoughts. But are there not other times when several courses of action present themselves when it is necessary to make a choice between them? Some matters are so important as to require mature deliberation. "Do it now" needs to be taken with some caution.

If the foregoing point is well taken, that even along business lines it is not always advisable to "do it now," it is also true along other branches of activity. Where would one come out if, in a moment of fierce anger, he should "do it now?" If he acted on the impulse of the moment probably some other worthy citizen would be nursing a black eye, or a broken nose. Let it be admitted that there is some just cause for his boiling wrath. If his personal right or his personal honor has been assailed he is supposed to have protection in the law. He can resort to the law for legal satisfaction, and as we are all aware the law does not have for its motto, "do it now." There are a multitude of ways in which we are tempted to go by this nefarious philosophy where we must strictly guard ourselves from yielding. There are other directions where it is an excellent guide to go by. If a boy is facing unlearned lessons he ought to "do it now" before he goes skating. Work should have the right of way when play is the alternative.

"How much then is a man better than a sheep?" This was spoken by our Lord at the conclusion of an argument showing man's superiority. If men are better than sheep why don't they treat themselves better than they do sheep?" To put it more strongly, why don't they treat themselves fully as well as they do sheep? It is a cold matter of fact they simply don't. Of course the word "sheep" here stands for the lower animals generally. The following suggestive sentence which has recently been published, brings out this idea exactly: "I once knew a man who owned a dog of which he was extremely fond. Every night he reprimanded his wife and his servants if the dog had not been exercised during the day. He knew that the dog required a three-mile run every day and proper feeding for health." But this man over fed and did little exercise.

Does not a blinding snow storm of blizzard proportions—such as we had on Thursday of last week—reveal to man what a mere toy he is in the grip of the elements? Wails, or rather wailowing, in snow knee-deep will soon exhaust a man however physically strong. And horses of even greater muscular strength are readily overcome in deep snow. We are oftentimes amazed at the tremendous mechanical power of motor vehicles, but a good healthy snowdrift is their Waterloo. A violent snowstorm of 30 or 40 hours duration has been known, time and again, to paralyze all railroad traffic within its area. A scientist has said: "If by some strange freak of natural phenonenom, New York city should be visited by an Alaskan snowstorm, the damage to both life and property would be simply unspeakable." Very likely this will never happen, but Nature has done things fully as strange. In the face of such possibilities we ask, "Lord, what is man?"

There is nothing in this world more important, and at the same time more perplexing, than prayer. Prayer is both a mental and spiritual complex. Prayer rises from the human heart when it realizes its need, and needs are as widespread as humanity itself. There is no authoritative promise that we shall get everything we ask for, and probably it would not be best for us if we did, but the sincerity that lies back of prayer is always rewarded. One boy who wants to go on a Sunday school picnic prays that the following day may be pleasant; another boy who has planned to go fishing prays that it may rain. Both prayers are foolish, but God loves both boys, and in some way they will not be the losers by praying. What a great prayer is this:

"Guide me, O thou great Jehovah,
Pilgrim in this barren land;
I am weak, but thou art mighty,
Hold me with thy powerful hand."

We shall always connect the Emancipation Proclamation with the great career of Abraham Lincoln. As it declared the bondmen free it ought to be regarded as an act of religion. The glory of the deed lifts it above the mere domain of politics. I believe the call of Abraham Lincoln to the presidency of the United States in 1860 was just as truly the voice of the Almighty as when Moses was called out of Midian to lead the Children of Israel from the lime pits of Egypt to the Promised Land. Of course we call the Emancipation Proclamation a great state paper, for so it is—one of the greatest—but it is likewise a great religious document, and if a Bible were now in the process of making, we should find the spirit and the life of the Great Emancipator filling the same place as Moses fills in the Bible we have. Men of such moral fiber whether they are named Abraham and Moses, or Washington and Lincoln never die!

There have been many schools of philosophy, but probably that of dualism is the most plausible, as it better explains observed phenomena than any other. Its twofold base is mind and matter, hence its name. That school of philosophy claiming that everything in the universe is mind, and there is no such thing as matter, is called idealism. The school directly opposite this, claiming that all is matter and no such thing as mind exists is called realism. The greatest scholars reject both schools claiming that the fact of the universe cannot be explained apart from the co-existence of mind and matter. These two form the fundamental basis of all phenomena that has thus far been discovered, and upon the proof that these two can live apart hangs the scientific acceptance of the doctrine of immortality.

A radio-operated safety device that checks speeding locomotives automatically when danger looms ahead has been invented.

A SPORTING CHANCE

Mr. and Mrs. Diggs Brown walked all the way from the little hamlet to the farm left Margaret by her uncle. It was six miles and might be called part of their wedding journey. They had been married 17 hours, and this coming six miles was the end of the 50 from the city which both had tried and been glad to leave.

A talk with the lawyer had caused the ignominous end of the wedding journey.

"It did not seem wis to tell it all to you in the letter, Margaret," he said. "I know something of your character, and the truth might have caused you to reject the inheritance altogether. And yet it is to his very impulsive obstinate trait in your character that I look for possible success. If you will excuse me, it is just like your uncle."

Margaret scowled, then grinned.

"Oh, I'm down here, Mr. Ben, and I'll stick," she said. "And I like bacon and ham and roast pork and spareribs. But whatever possessed Uncle Jim to buy fancy pigs, pedigreed stock, at high price; to mortgage the farm for $3,000; to borrow the money of all things from old Scrogge, his worst enemy, and then to get it for only eight months? It's perfectly crazy!"

A confirmatory chuckle sounded in the lawyer's throat.

"I agree with you," he said. "But it's your uncle. In spite of his shrewdness and his closeness — you see I am speaking plainly—the old gentleman had a good deal of sporting blood. So he got the money from the worst man he could, and one whom he most despised, on about the shortest possible time and with no chance of the time being extended. It sort of appealed to him, I think. Then he was a very sanguine man. I've often heard him repeat the phrase 'Pig is money,' and he was quite a student of farm papers. I feel sure he anticipated going to Mr. Scrogge with a big handful of money, peeling off a small part of it to pay the mortgage, and then walking away, monchalantly. What I can't understand is the buying of pedigreed stock when gutter price pork brings just as much per pound. And —er, I'm glad you married a husky fellow, Margaret," grinning to Digga.

But Diggs grimaced. "I have only $63 as my share after taking out expenses coming down," he said ruefully. "I'd an idea of renting a few acres near Margaret's old home, thinking she'd like it. Then her uncle died. And —er, I don't know a thing about pigs except that they eat and squeal."

"Scared?" Margaret peered, tenderly.

"Scared, nothing. I'm game. But I'd thought to finance our start, and it's you——"

"Handicap, you mean. Wait till you hear ther co-operative squeal. I suppose you've had someone looking aft the pigs since Uncle Jim died?" to the lawyer.

"Old man Kester and his six sons. I've paid them $50 of the $200 your uncle left for incidental extras in feeding. I will let you have the difference. You'll stay?"

"Guess so," considered Margaret. "It's what we may call a sporting chance. But we'll have to hang on to every cent with both hands in order to meet a hundredth chance of making that $3,000 good in eight months."

So the end of the wedding journey was finished on foot and the last mile of it in an increasing welcome or protestation from the porcine dependents. It was nearing dusk which doubtless meant suppertime.

Old man Kester and his six sons met them at the boundary of the farm.

"Seen ye comin' an' took hope 'twas the owners," began the old man hurriedly. "An' I'm glad t'see 'tis."

"But aren't you going to stay with us and help?" shouted Margaret, to be heard above the squealing, "or at least for a few days to show us about——"

"Nary a day more," firmly. "Lawyer Ben paid us up till night, an' the night's done come. Now we're goin'. That squealin' don't mean nothin'. They've had their supper, good an' plenty but if they had 10 suppers they'd keep on squealin'. It's their pig way. All you've got to do is to scuttle into the house an' stay there till mornin', then skin to the barn, shet the door quick an' feed out through some openings we've made."

"Aren't there pens or fields in which they are kept away from the barn?"

"Course. But my boys left the gates open careless one night an' it's been too much trouble to shet 'em back ag'in. Outside fence is good and strong, though; can't get away. But they take full rights everywhere in. I've hunted fleas on a dog"—impressively—"an' drove sheep an' geese to market, but I never acted as guardeen to 248 pigs afore. I ain't goin' to do it any more. They're too like humans, bad an' some worser. I've tried to keep the house doors and winders shet, but they've got in. You're liable to find a few in there now, two or three gone to bed in the spare room, mebbe. One day after we driv 'em all out we started to build a fire an' happened to open the stove door. Only fer that we'd had roast pig. But ye'll find it all out, an' more," ominously. "My advice jest now is for ye to keep outside the fence ta the nearest house p'int, then look towards us. Me an' my sons we'll sashay across the lot corner ahead to 'tract their 'tention, n' then you jump for the fence n' scuttle to the house. Ye're new yet an' not used to their scamperin' ways of follerin'. 'Twould likely discompose ye.'

But by that time the pig feeding had become the least of their troubles. Two months and the big mortgage would become due. Markets had been visited, dealers interviewed, local capitalists badgered, but to no purpose whatever. The best offer fell short of the mortgage and with Scrogge one cent short would be as all.

In answer to an advertisement of farm and pigs, ridiculously low, there were several letters and one answer in person. Diggs borrowed a wagon and went to meet him. But the man suddenly seemed sorry he came, though he offered two cents more than the local market per pound. The farm itself he wouldn't buy at all.

As they approached the squealing, crowding masses in their various lots, however, the man grew animated.

"Whew! but what a mess you have got. I like pigs, and if I do say it, I knew about as much of 'em as anybody in the state, I guess. I—hello! Pedigrees?" his gaze sweeping from point to point—"all of 'em? Say, these aren't the porkers you're trying to sell by the pound?"

"Yes, but it's no good, I told you about the mortgage and—"

"But bloodied stock—for pork! Man alive! Look at that one with his snout through the fence. He's worth a cool $200 if a cent. I know by his looks and the spots. And the others—say, you boob, do you know a thing about pigs?"

"Everything," fervently. "Ive been living with 'em seven months."

"Just commencing on your A B C's. Three thousand dollars! If I were a crook I could do you out of $10,000 right now. But I'm not. More than that, I've got a nice little farm and would like a dozen of these purebreds, picking them out myself. It's a chance of a lifetime for me from such a lot. I can afford top prices, picking 'em out."

"But the mortgage," anxiously. "Think I can do it in time."

"W-ell, that is pretty short," the man admitted. "What you want is to put notices in swine and breeders' papers and magazines that reach fancy stock growers. Then you sell out all but 30 or 40 of the best. I'll pick 'em out for you. That nifty uncle was a right sport, but he overshot as lots of folks do. All that swarm would likely call in hog cholera and every other disease in a year or two. Just cut down to not more than three or four dozen and keep 'em clean and you've got a big money business right here in your pocket. And it's so dead sure that I'll advance the $3,000 and take out an extra pig for straight graft. How's that?"

"Take a dozen,—twenty," urged Diggs.

"No, one's plenty and sort of fair. I'll write that check at once, then go over with you to Scrogge and witness it's being paid."—Detroit News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Nothing the Matter With Norwich Compared with Others

Mr. Editor: Although almost a stranger in your city (having been here since Dec. 1st only) in re question that has been asked in recent issues of your valued publication, I can say that during my short stay in your city I have been quite observant and cannot see anything the matter with Norwich when compared with other New England cities of like size or even larger. You have varied industries working steadier than in most eastern cities, better educational facilities than any city of its size in New England, magnificent churches, good and efficient police and fire departments, your places of amusement are clean, and good programmes are offered you biweekly and rents, groceries, etc., are among the lowest procurable and your citizens appear prosperous and well educated. What more can one ask of any community? Yours as a booster of Norwich

Sunday Morning Talk

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

"I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob." Matthew 22:32.

God stood by Abraham of old at the most critical and trying time in his life, and Abraham rung true, and the Lord wonderfully led him in a way that at the time he did not understand but he trusted God. He has been the same down through the ages. Moses, Joshua, Caleb later Paul with his great work for Christ, and so He stood by our great and noble Lincoln in the time of need and trouble when no other help could avail. His trust was in the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and He delivered him for He is the same yesterday, today and forever.

In his younger days his Bible was his companion. He did not have access to the many books of the present day, but his knowledge was the kind that made him great and helped him over the hard places. The last clause of his second inaugural address shows the nobility of his character.

"With malice towards none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on, to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphans, to do all, which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Prof. Floyd H. Black who has been selected by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to be president of the American school in Sofia, Bulgaria, has traveled extensively through the Near East and Europe and is especially well acquainted with the political, educational and religious history of both Turkey and Bulgaria. In 1911 he first took up work as an instructor in Robert College, of which institution he since has served as acting dean and acting president. Prof. Black is a native of Illinois. He received his education at Carson-Newman College in Tennessee and at the Harvard University Theological school. He has a speaking knowledge of French, a good foundation in Bulgarian, and understands both Greek and Turkish. The institution in Sofia of which he becomes the first president is incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts.

A rare specimen of earliest Gothic wood sculpture, a crucifix from a village of northern Spain, has just been presented to the Art Institute, Chicago, by Miss Kate Buckingham, of Chicago, for the Lucy Maude Buckingham Memorial collection.

Stories That Recall Others

Was He? Yes

He was being questioned by the prosecuter, who asked the following question:

"Were you ever convicted or acquitted on any charge before?"

"No, suh; no, suh. Nothin' that sounded like dat."

"Now, listen. I mean were you ever convicted or acquitted of any crime?"

"Well, suah, boss, de jedge he say, 'Go on along' an' I does, an' I gets picked up agin. Yes, suah, I guess I was."

Once the "Father" Tongue

Being the husband of a prominent woman isn't the easiest role to fill. No matter how proud a man may be of his wife there are times when he might wish to share the laurel wreath.

Mrs. Blank was known as a prominent speaker so when a member of the publicity committee, of a certain organization was called and told that Mr. Blank would be the speaker at the next meeting he replied, "You mean Mrs. Blank."

"I mean Mr. Blank," came in firmer tones.

"There is no Mr. Blank. It's Mrs. Blank," informed the publicity man who was none too well acquainted with the situation but had been impressed with the fact that Mrs. Blank was a prominent speaker.

"I am Mr. Blank, and I am going to give the talk," the voice thundered and the indignation at the other end of the line could almost be felt.

From Small Beginnings

Thomas L. James, a Great Bank President.

Four dollars a month was the magnificent salary that Thomas L. James president of one of the greatest banks in New York city, was first able to earn. That was in the office of a printer in Utica, N. Y. The boy, who was to grow into a man who should direct others in handling of great stacks of paper money, had for his job the handling of newspapers in order to prepare them to be sent through the mails. How it would have surprised the lad if he could have been told that he was not only to be a bank president but that he would also become postmaster general of the United States, and have charge of all the mails in the country!

The printing office was a liberal education for the young man. It supplemented in a most practical way the little that he had been able to learn in his high school course of study. He saw that there was not only money to be earned in printing but that there was opportunity for useful service. He moved upward from the merely mechanical work of folding papers and setting type to the higher work of writing. At the same time that he was gaining experience in all the work of a printing and editorial office he was saving the money that he earned. Then, with that money, he gained control of a little country newspaper published in the village of Hamilton, N. Y., the seat of Colgate university. Here he came in contact with men of culture and learning, and he made his little paper have an influence that was beyond its size. He became a force in political life, and made himself felt in national elections.

As a result of the work that he had done and of the reputation that he had built up he gained the appointment of postmaster in the city of New York. In that position he developed such business ability and showed himself such a master of the situation that he won high favor. Later President Garfield made him postmaster general. Once again he showed remarkable executive power, an ability to understand and master details, and a comprehension of financial affairs that was remarkable. He was called to the presidency of one of the great New York city banks, the Lincoln bank, and there again showed the ability that he had developed so steadily from the days when he first worked in the little printing office in Utica.

IN DAY'S NEWS

WHY EGYPT LIMITS COTTON PLANTING

Cotton, Egypt's chief crop, is to be restricted during 1926. According to recent dispatches from Cairo, a law has just been placed in effect in Egypt which will prohibit the planting of more than one-third of the arable land with cotton this year.

"The statute directs attention to peculiar physical features of the land of the Pharaohs," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society: "For, although Egypt cuts a big notch in the map of northern Africa, only a narrow strip along 960 miles of the River Nile is arable or habitable. In an area which is about equal to that of Maryland, more than nine times Maryland's population, or some 13,000,000 people, must be fed.

"It is necessary, therefore, for the government to enact stringent regulations concerning the use of this land. Tobacco growing is prohibited. Farming land is much too precious to be used for luxuries, especially for such soil-enervating luxuries as tobacco. Egypt has many cigarette factories and its cigarette makers are skilled in curing and blending tobacco, but the leaf is obtained elsewhere, generally from the Levant, or from the islands of the Aegean archipelago.

"Egypt, as has so often been said, is the 'gift of the Nile.' The life of the country, its trade, its foreign contracts, and even the character of its inhabitants have been molded to meet the capacities and the whims of this great stream. No country in the world is so dependent on a river. Without the Nile Egypt would cease to exist as a fertile country. It would be only a desolate depression in the vast expanse of desert that stretches across northern Africa from the Atlantic to the Red Sea.

"The desert, however, has been a co-star with the Nile in the Egyptian spectacle of the ages. Cloudless blue skies, powerful sunlight, and dry, warm air have given Egyptian climate a uniformity especially suited to the formation of definite types. Domestic animals, in particular, give proof of its transforming influence. Oxen, often exterminated by murrain, have been replenished by foreign breeds from every part of the globe, and in a few generations almost invariably assume the well known Egyptian type, familiar from the paintings and hieroglyphics of ancient tombs and temples.

"The natives, too, have changed little. Despite a turbulent political career in the last few centuries, during the course of which Egypt has been jockeyed from one European power to another, the great mass of the population is little different from the builders of the Pyramids. Today, they speak Arabic and profess Mohammed as their prophet, but they still revere the Nile, and they still irrigate their fields with its waters after the same fashion as the subjects of King Mena, 4,000 B. C.

"While the Nile brought many gifts to the ancient Egyptians it was far from a perfectly behaved river. Usually it spilled over its banks once a year, flooded the adjacent lowlands and left new layers of highly fertile soil for the year's crops. Then the Egyptians brought thanksgiving offerings to their gods. At other times the river was low. Crops were burnt up by the pitiless glare of the sun before the life-giving fluid could be brought to them. Still again the Nile was a raging flood driving all before it.

"Irrigation works developed by the English, however, have made large-scale plantings possible today. Great dams and barrages thrown across the Nile valley hold the spring rains of the southern mountains, and distribute them more evenly throughout the year. Under European leadership and ingenuity Egypt has progressed agriculturally from a rather forbidding land, farmed only when naturally fertile, to a smiling ribbon of farms and plantations. Each year additional fingers of water encroach on the sun-glazed domains of the desert, fingers which transform it at a touch into luxuriant growths of green and gold and russet vegetation.

"The area watered by the Nile is thus being increased from an original acreage of a little more than 5,000,000 to nearly 8,000,000 acres. Tendrils of steel are following in the wake of those of water, in order that crops may be marketed readily. Egypt already possesses 3,000 miles of railroad, extending along the Mediterranean coast and up the Nile to the First Cataract. It is connected with the railway systems of Europe and Asia by a line across the Sinai Peninsula, the route of the famous train known as 'The Milk and Honey Express.'

"Cotton, the commercial staple of the country and the subject of the new regulatory law, is the foundation and backbone of the prosperity which the English Administration brought to Egypt. The Nile Delta was found to be one of the most favorable cotton-growing regions in the world. Enthusiastic cotton planters and retailers of Egypt claim that their product is the finest in the world. Egyptian cotton is cream-colored or brownish, while American is white. It is said to be more silky and more easily mercerized than that of the southern states. However, the seeds of many of the best Egyptian types are developed from those of American plants, including the celebrated Sea-Island variety."

SUITS AGAINST FOUR ON CLAIM THAT AGREED PAYMENTS NOT MADE

Suits against Herbert M. Lerou, Edwin W. Higgins and Charles D. Foster of this city and James Graham of Lisbon have been brought in the superior court by Angus Park of Hanover on the claim that they have refused to pay their proportionate parts, according to an agreement in writing made by the directors of the Bankers Trust company, to keep that bank solvent when the capital and surplus had been wiped out by the defalcations of the former treasurer, George A. Finn.

Papers in the four suits have been served by Deputy Sheriff Oscar H. Main of this city. In the cases of Mr. Lerou and Mr. Graham the amount which is claimed from each is $4,965.80. In the cases of Mr. Higgins and Mr. Foster the amount in each case is $2,482.90. The larger amounts, it is understood, represent the proportion of the total that was due from directors holding 20 shares of stock and the smaller amounts for 10 shares.

The suit is brought by Mr. Park as an individual and not as president of the trust company, since, it is understood, he personally advanced the amount needed to prevent the closing of the bank and the agreement made by the directors was to reimburse him.

The suits are instituted individually, but contain the same allegations against each defendant. The allegations as alleged in the complaint, drawn by Brown and James, counsel for the plaintiff, follows:

On or about Oct. 24, 1924, the plaintiff and the defendant and others were members of the board of directors of the Bankers Trust company, a corporation located in said town of Norwich and engaged in the banking business.

On said day the capital and surplus of said trust company had been impaired to the extent of more than $131,164.69 by reason of the defalcations of its treasurer, and the bank commission of said state had notified said board of directors that he would issue an order to restrain said trust company from further conducting its said business unless its capital and surplus was restored with 24 hours.

On said day at a meeting held by the said directors, the directors present at said meeting agreed in writing to bear the expense of such restoration in the same proportion as to the number of shares of stock owned by the said directors present thereat, including the defendants, requested the plaintiff to advance the whole of said sum so required to be advanced and the defendant then promised to the plaintiff that he would within a reasonable time repay to the plaintiff his said proportionate part of said sum, which proportions part amounted to the sum of $4965.80 (or $2,482.90).

The plaintiff replying upon the promises of the directors present at said meeting, including the defendant, did advance and pay into said company said sum including the defendant's said proportionate part.

The defendant though often requested by the plaintiff has failed and refused to repay his said proportionate part of said sum.

HELD AUCTION SALE OF ALLYN RUBBER CORP.

Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock on order of the superior court the machinery, two patents and office machinery of the bankrupt estate of the H. H. Allyn Rubber Corp., of this city, was sold at auction by Hibberd R. Norman, trustee of the estate, William H. Wakeley, of New Haven, acting as auctioneer.

The property was sold in two lots, the first lot including the machinery and two patents and the second lot the office fixtures, desks, typewriters, etc.

The bidding on the first lot was started at $200 and inside of a few minutes had been raised to $1,000. William Mileski of this city and The Surplus Trading Corp., of Newark, N. J., were the chief bidders. They kept raising their bids from $5 to $100 at a time. The bidding finally brought to a close with a bid of $2,000 by the Newark corporation and the property was knocked down to them at that figure.

Goldman and Zwicker of New Haven bought the office furniture on a bid of $265. It was one of the most spirited auctions held in Norwich for some time and Trustee Norman expressed himself as being very much pleased with the result. The auction was held at the plant of the bankrupt concern.

CLEARED AWAY SNOW TO ACCOMMODATE FUNERALS

In spite of the fact that the recent heavy snow storms have kept Street Commissioner John C. Donovan on the jump well over a week he found time to clear the snow from in front of several houses where funerals were being held. On the morning of the storm of a week ago the street commissioner obligingly ploughed out a good part of a side street on the West Side so that funeral arrangements there could proceed on schedule. In another case the street commissioner sent a gang of shovelers to Greeneville and cleared away the high snow bank in front of a house where another funeral was being held.

FIERY CROSS BURNED NEAR LISBON BRIDGE

The evening of Lincoln's birthday was marked by the burning of a fiery cross about 9:30 on high land across the river at the Lisbon bridge leading from Taftville to the Newent road. Lisbon Fox Hunters Score

Fox hunting is in its prime at the present time with the ground covered with a thick layer of snow, and many sportsmen take delight in hunting this wily animal. The most recent catch that has been reported was that bagged by Herman Krauss in company with Carl Krauss of Lisbon, Friday afternoon. The specimen was a gray fox which was shot without the aid of a dog.

The United States and Great Britain again are engaged in discussions as to methods of stopping shipments of liquor to American territorial waters by Englishmen.

OPENING CLUB ROOMS AT ST. JOSEPH'S SCHOOL

The announcement is made by Rev. F. A. Iciek, pastor of St. Joseph's church, that club rooms and bowling alleys in the new St. Joseph's school building are to be formally opened this (Sunday) afternoon.

The pool tables, four bowling alleys, and magazines, newspapers and different games are among the equipment provided for the club room, which will be one of the finest in the city and will be open not only to the general public regardless of creed or nationality. It is announced that any one who wants to spend an evening in clean, wholesome sports and congenial company will be welcome.

Wednesday evenings will be ladies' nights at the club rooms and it is hoped that there will be a number of ladies' teams who will come there to bowl on Wednesday. They can come to the club any other evening if they so desire. On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Fridays teams and match games will have preference. If there will be no match games or after a match is finished everybody is welcomed to use the alleys. Saturday afternoons and evenings are for everybody. Sundays are reserved for ladies' parties only. The club rooms will be opened in the public every evening at 7 o'clock, Saturdays at 1. During Lent on Wednesday and Fridays the club will be open at 8.30 instead of 7 on account of the Lenten devotions.

Clubs and bowling teams can reserve the alleys for any particular night by getting in touch with Father Iciek or Joe Panek, president of the St. Joseph club. Arrangements can also be made by bowling teams for certain evenings and alleys for the entire season. The young men of the St. Joseph parish are organizing several good strong teams and will soon be out for matches with outside teams.

In connection with the club rooms a nice, well stocked cigar and candy stand is conducted for the benefit of the players and guests. Coffee, light lunches, soda and refreshments will be sold.

Last fall, said Father Iciek, the people of Norwich gave me over $10,000 toward the completion and furnishing of a social center—a place where the young and old can come, and spend an afternoon or evening in wholesome and pleasant surroundings. I am keeping my promise. We are going to have the finest club room in the city and we will keep it clean and in first class shape. Intoxicating liquor or people under the influence of intoxicating liquor or roughnecks will not be allowed in the place. We want the parents of grown-up boys and girls to feel that their sons and daughters will always be in a respectable place and in good company when they are in the St. Joseph school club rooms.

The new school will be completed shortly. Just as soon as everything is finished the public will be invited to inspect one of the city's finest grade schools. When the children are transferred from the old school to the new building, work of remodeling the present school will commence. The class rooms will be remodeled into a meeting hall, domestic science room and a club room for girls. On completion that will also be available for meetings, lectures and cooking classes. For the present just the club room bowling alleys and pool tables are opened for the public. We may not have a big welcome sign on the door, but you will feel it when you come in.

NEW LONDON WOMAN'S SUITS FOR $300,000

HARTFORD, Feb. 12—(AP)—Mrs. Ellen B. Hull, of New London, widow of Hadlai A. Hull, former state's attorney of New London county, has brought two suits for $300,000 damages against Sage, Allen and Company, Edward N. Allen, vice president of the store and former police commissioner, and Florence Kenefick, store detective for alleged false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, and slander by Allen, following her arrest on December 16, 1925, on a charge of shoplifting. Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Lord served the papers on George D. Bloomway, secretary of the company, today.

The initial step was taken Wednesday when on petition of her lawyers, Arthur M. Brown, of New London and Herbert W. Rathbun, of Westerly, R. I., Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court, sitting at New London granted Mrs. Hull an injunction which restrained the corporation of Sage, Allen and Company, and Edward N. Allen from transferring the stock of the corporation until the suit has been decided in the New London county superior court, where it is returnable on March 2.

One of the suits is for $250,000 damages and is against Sage, Allen and Company, Allen, and Miss Kenefick now resident of Springfield, Mass. Its chief allegations are malicious prosecution and false imprisonment on the part of the corporation and Allen, and assault and battery on the part of Miss Kenefick. The latter count is based on a charge that Mrs. Hull was assaulted by the search to which she alleges she was subjected by Miss Kenefick.

The second suit is for $50,000 damages against Allen and is based on the allegation that he slandered Mrs. Hull in the presence of Miss Kenefick by the questions which he asked of her and the statements he made of her after her arrest and presentation before him in his office.

Allen could not be reached today. Asked if he cared to make a statement on behalf of him, Brockway said he did not, that it was a matter that should be taken up with Allen, who was in New York city.

Mrs. Hull sets out in her suit for $250,000 damages that while she was engaged in the store of Sage, Allen and company in making purchases, Miss Kenefick accosted her and took her to the office of Allen. Miss Kenefick ordered her not to move while she got Mrs. Hull to Allen's office and there searched her against her will. Allen called in Detective Sergeant Nicholas R. Gallichio and with Miss Kenefick told the detective that Mrs. Hull had committed the crime of theft.

The next step of the defendants it is alleged, was to get a warrant issued by Prosecutor John L. Bonee charging her with stealing four women's undergarments, four pieces of jewelry and one handbag, valued at $8.26. She was then booked and held under bond and compelled to plead against her will.

"The plaintiff pleaded not guilty and the suit continues, and was then and ever since has been ready and anxious to stand trial on said complaint and was present in court with counsel and witnesses who insisted upon her right to trial," but the prosecutor after an investigation nolled the charge on December 29, 1925.

Mrs. Hull alleged that she is a woman of refinement, honor and integrity who has been actively engaged in welfare work in New London, a woman of wide acquaintance, and widow of State's Attorney Hull, whose reputation and health has been permanently injured by the prosecution instituted by the defendants, and the resultant publicity throughout the states of New England.

She charged that Miss Kenefick arrested her without warrant or pretense of warrant, forcibly seized her in the store, took her outside and down a side street to Allens office and there assaulted her by the search to which she subjected her.

In the suit for $50,000 damages against Allen, Mrs. Hull said he slandered her by the following statement made in his office in the presence of Miss Kenefick and that each statement meant that she, Mrs. Hull, had committed the crime of larceny:

"Well, you made a good haul this morning."

"Why do you steal?"

"Your husband is nothing to me. You ought to have thought of that before you stole the goods." (When arrested Mrs. Hull said she pleaded that she was the widow of State's Attorney Hull.)

"If you steal the goods to use yourself or give away as Christmas gifts—"

"How long have you been stealing?"

"Don't lie. Tell the truth. It will be better for you."

HURCHISON HOPES TO BE ABLE TO RACE TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—(AP)—Believing that he has sufficiently recovered from the tendon strain which cut short his winning streak in Newark on Wednesday night, Loren Murchison plans to resume his indoor track campaign tomorrow night at the annual indoor games of the Wilco A. A.

Announcement was made today that the Illinois A. C. flyer's right leg has responded to treatment, and he will attempt to win his twelfth consecutive dash event in the season in a test over the 100-yard route against Louise Clarke of Newark, N. J., DeHart Hubbard of Cincinnati, Frank Hussey of New York, R. H. Bathelomew of Penn State, Cyril Coaffee of the Illinois A. C., Al Leconey, former Lafayette star and Chet Bowman, former Syracuse athlete. Coincident with word of Murchison's recovery came announcement of the withdrawal of Adrian Paulen of Holland from a 500-meter race. Paulen has contracted a cold which may confine him to his room for several days, A. A. U. officials said.

Several records will be under fire, including Louis Clark's mark of 9 4-5 seconds in the 100 yard dash. Attempt will be made to lower hurdle records at 40 yards over both the high and low timbers, with Carl Christenson, Newark star, facing Ray Wolf of Pennsylvania, Charles Moore of Penn State and Hubbard.

Willie Ritola, Jimmy Loucks of Syracuse, Verne Booth and Russell Payne will seek a lower mark than Paavo Nurmi's figure 8 minutes 26 2-5 seconds, for 3,000 meters, while Joie Ray's record of 2 minutes 29 3-5 seconds for 1,000 metres will be subjected to an attack from Ray Dodge of Chicago, Schuyler Enck, former Penn State star, Eddie Kirby, Jimmy Connolly, Abel Kiviat, Bill McKillop, and George Marsters.

Charley Hoff of Norway aims to soar to a new indoor pole vault mark, while a field including Alan Helffrich, Vincent Lally, Cecil Cooke, Pincus Sober, Johnny Holden and Bayes Norton will meet in a 600 meter test

BRILLIANT TENNIS FEATURES FIRST DAY OF TOURNAMENT

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—(AP)—Spectacular tennis by European players in their initial appearance here and an exciting battle which extended the national champion, William T. Tilden to escape defeat at the hands of an infrequent entrant in tournament competition today furnished unexpected thrills in the opening day's matches of the Heights Casino men's invitation net fixture.

Erratic stroking by Tilden, attributed in some measure to his attempt to combine tennis and a career on the professional stage this winter, cost the champion the first set of a match with the West Side club veteran, W. J. Gallon. Serving a terrific first ball and carrying his fight to the net, Gallon took the first five games and the opening set, 6-2.

He then matches service game for service game with Tilden in the second before the latter finally broke through to win, 8-6, but the champion hit his stride as Gallon tired in the final, clinching the match with a 6-1 victory. Tilden then moved on to the semi-final round with a decisive triumph over Dean Mathey of Cranford, N. J., 6-3, 6-0.

Vincent Richards and Francis T. Hunter also reached the semifinals, but the former was unexpectedly extended by the Danish Davis cup player, Erik Worms, who arrived unannounced in this country several days ago with Maurice Ferrier, the Swiss champion.

Worms was within a point of carrying the first set to 5-2 when Richards rallied to win at 6-4. He then took the second set by the same score and advanced to his semi-final bracket by smothering the returns of E. T. Herndon at the net, 6-2, 6-1.

Ferrier was even more impressive than Worms, the Swiss player creating an upset by defeating Fred Anderson, runner-up to Jean Borotra of France last year for the indoor championship, 6-3, 6-1 earning the right to meet Manuel Alonso of Spain tomorrow. The victor will then face Richards in the semi-finals, while Tilden will meet Hunter, who triumphed over Kynaston, 6-3, 6-3, and L. R. Bailey, Jr., 9-7, 6-3.

COMISKEY HOPED AMERICAN WOULD ENDORSE LANDIS

CHICAGO, Feb. 13—(AP)—President Charles A. Comiskey of the White Sox was disappointed today at the failure of the American League club owners to follow the example of the National League in endorsing the administration of Commissioner Landis.

"If Landis is lost to baseball, the American public will want to know why an honest man cannot remain in the national game," Comiskey said.

AGGIE FIVE ON TRIP TO NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn., Feb. 13—The Connecticut Aggie basketball five left here Thursday for northern New England, where they will meet New Hampshire at Durham, N. H., Saturday.

New Hampshire will provide strong opposition for the Nutmeg Aggies. The Granite Staters have a long string of victories to their credit, and Massachusetts Aggies is the only team that has thus far succeeded in downing New Hampshire.

Prior to the departure of the team, Coach Sumner A. Dole announced that no changes would be made in his starting lineups for the game. Captain Makofski will be at the pivot position for the Aggies, with Eddy and Schofield in the forecourt. Allard and Bitzood will start in the guard positions.

The Connecticut squad has been greatly strengthened by the addition to Williams, who with the beginning of the second semester this week was declared eligible for varsity competition by the faculty. Williams starred in football, basketball and baseball as a freshman last year, and in football was looked upon as one of the best backfield prospects that ever entered Connecticut. He was unable to play varsity sports because of scholastic difficulties, however, and up to the present this week he has not been used. Against Trinity last Tuesday night, in his first varsity game, he looked especially good and Coach Dole will probably use him considerably.

THE TIGER HELD TO DRAW BY GERMAN BOXER

BERLIN, Feb. 12—(AP)—Paolino Uzcudun, the Spanish heavyweight, who is expected to visit the United states soon, was held to a draw by the German heavyweight Diener in a ten round bout here tonight.

Paolino, known as the "Tiger of the Pyrenees," was signed for this bout only last Tuesday, taking the place of Hans Breitenstraeter, German heavyweight champion, who withdrew on account of a nervous breakdown. Tuesday night the Spaniard knocked out Soldier Jones of Toronto in two minutes at Paris.

About 15,000 spectators saw Paolino meet his equal in the 23-year-old German heavyweight. They were treated to a real slugging match, the like of which has never been seen in Berlin. Both fighters seemed to be equal throughout, standing up for unmerciful punishment without noticeable effect. Both were equally quick; neither one succeeded in longing a blow to draw blood or to send the other to the boards.

Young Diener gave Paolino as good as he received. His admirable footwork was a valuable adjunct to his unusual strength. The Spaniard's dreaded wallops seemed ineffective on this stalwart German, who had Paolino against the ropes at his mercy in the fourth round as he delivered a series of blows.

In the ninth round, however, Paolino had Diener well in hand, making him feel his telling blows in the infighting, it was evident here that Diener lacked experience, as otherwise he would have evaded much punishment.

When the fight was over the judges were only able to come to a decision after deliberating for ten minutes. Paolino weighed 198 pounds; Diener 196.

Yale with Elwell, epee, Brown, sword, and Wolf, saber, beat the University of Pennsylvania 7 to 6, in the first round advanced to the final round by defeating the Herman Institute fencers, 2 to 1.

In the final matches New York took first place in the epee and sabe while Yale won and scored its point in the sword match.

The championship was the first of a long series of titular meets scheduled as part of the sesqui-centennial sports program.

DANIELSON EXPECTS HARD BATTLE WITH TAFTVILLE

The Taftville Crescents will play the Danielson Town team at Danielson this evening in what is expected to be a hard tussle. Both teams are contenders for the eastern Connecticut title and a victory for either means a step toward the coveted honor. In Blakely and Reeves Danielson has a fast pair of forwards while Veach at the pivot position is a tower of strength. Poirier and Goudreau are fine defensive players and it takes a fast man to score against either one.

The Taftville aggregation will have its full strength as Manager Red Burelle realizes that he is up against a tough combination.

RIVALS BY ONE POINT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 12.—One of the closest games in interscholastic basketball was played here tonight when the Killingly High team nosed out the Putnam High team by the narrow margin of one point, the score being 23 to 21. Each team had one outstand star, for Killingly Barrett carried off the honors while Bove of Putnam was a menace to the winners at all times.

The game was fast and it was Killingly's fierce attack in the first two quarters that carried them to victory for in the last half of the game the visitors were practically helpless.

In the preliminary game the Putnam Girls' team trimmed the Killingly fair sex 32 to 18.

THUNBERG SETS RECORD FOR MILE SKATING EVENT

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 12—(AP)—Clas Thunberg, Olympic skating champion of Finland, in a mile race today on Mirror rink against Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid flash, established a new world's record, skating the distance in 2:28 1-5. Jewtraw, losing the mile, won the 220-yard dash however, and at the end of the first day's competition between the two stars, honrs were even.

Thunberg's performance in the mile eclipsed the best modern record, made by "Duke" Donovan, of Endicott, of 2:43 2-5. The old time record, established in 1895 by John S. Johnson, of Montreal, was 2:42 2-5.

Another record fell also when Paul Forsman, of New York, winning the one-sixth mile event of the invitation tournament, lowered the previous mark of 26 1-5 seconds, by four fifths of a second. Forsman's time was 25 2-5 seconds. Forsman leads the field tonight with 50 points; Eddie Murphy of Chicago is second with 30, and James Sheffield of Lake Placid and O'Neil Farrell of Chicago, are tied for third place with 20 points each.

The Thunberg-Jewtraw rivalry continues tomorrow with the half mile, American style, and the one and one-half mile event, continental style. Today the continental style governed the mile event, and the American the 220 yard dash.

TOURNAMENT COMMITTEE RESCINDS ACTION ON BARRING CAMERA MEN

CANNES, France, Feb. 13—(AP)—Commercialism, open and unashamed, was brought out in connection with the tennis tournament at the Carlton club, in which Mlle Lenglen and Miss Helen Wills are expected to meet as finalists in the women's singles, when the newspapermen, photographers and tennis officials were called together by the organizers of the tournament to be informed that the exclusive motion picture rights which had been granted to a representative of an American firm were rescinded and that all camera men would be allowed to take pictures, provided they paid a certain price.

The honorable F. M. B. Fisher, the New Zealand tennis player, who presided at the meeting informed the camera men that in behalf of William Blumenthal, of New York, and Captain Ben Higgs, of London, concessionaires of the exclusive cinema rights, he was authorized to say they had abandoned the exclusive rights. He added that in behalf of Messrs Thomas and Albert Burke, lessees of the Carlton courts, he requested the motion-picture men to get together and make concerted bid for the film companies were to collaborate and offer a renumerative price for permission to take the pictures.

A prepared typewritten statement, which later was handed to the newspapermen, was read by Mr. Fisher in the names of Messrs Burke. It read in part:

"An offer for the cinema rights has been submitted to us. We have not yet accepted it. In order to disarm all criticism and meet the wishes of those who had expressed disappointment, we are prepared to make the following offer. You can all bid, either individually or collectively, for you can all join together and make a high bid if you wish. I have here an envelope containing the price of the offer made us, and if the concerted offer is larger we are prepared to give the excess amount to the French Lawn Tennis association for the advancement of tennis in France.

All the American motion picture men, representing four big news reel concerns in the United States, refused to make a bid. The matter was left in abeyance with the original offer enclosed in a sealed envelope, and the prospective bidders refusing to make offer.

As matters stood this evening, there will be no films taken of the Lenglen-Wills match, unless the tournament authorities and the motion picture men come to terms at another meeting set for 6:30 tomorrow evening.

Mlle. Lenglen sat in an adjoining room in the Hotel Carlton where the meeting was going on. She had caused to be known that all the picture men must be admitted or she would not play. Miss Wills was in her hotel a mile away.

When the Associated Press correspondent emerged from the smoke-laden conference room, Suzanne asked: "Have they come to an arrangement. Do they all work?"

When informed that nothing was decided definitely beyond abandonment of the original plans for exclusive rights, she said: "Well, I am going back to Nice if they don't fix this matter up before tomorrow, I will scratch. I don't care whether they say I am afraid of Miss Wills or not."

The atmosphere of tennis and moving picture world has been clouded for the past two days, with Miss Wills and Mlle. Lenglen denouncing the granting of exclusive rights to the taking of motion pictures of the finals match. The climax came when the Associated Press correspondent showed Mr. Blumenthal a message he had received from New York saying that four leading news reel concerns in the United States had announced they would refuse to accept the pictures if they were not permitted to film the match.

Mr. Blumenthal was watching the doubles game between Mlle. Lenglen and Mlle. Vlaston against Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Gould. He immediately left the stand and called a meeting at the Carlton Hotel of all concerned, subsequently announced that the exclusive privilege had been abandoned.

"We were just desirous that the Burke family make a little money," he explained, "but we desist in the interest of sport."

MISS WILLS WINS TWO EASY MATCHES IN TOURNEY

CANNES, France, Feb. 12—(AP)—Two victories for Miss Helen Wills, the American tennis champion, and an equal number for the French star, Mlle. Lenglen, marked today's Carlton tournament activities on the court, while what a majority of the patrons of tennis on the Riviera termed a victory for amateur sport was won when the organizers of the tournament decided to withdraw their verbal authorization for exclusive motion picture rights, which had been granted to an American firm. All the camera men will be treated on an equal footing when the expected finals match between Miss Wills and Mlle. Lenglen is played next week,

Miss Wills had as her opponent in the singles today Mrs. O'Neil of England, considered one of the strongest players on the Riviera, and defeated her handily 6-0, 6-0. In the doubles the American girl was paired with Mlle. Contoslavos, and they beat Mlle. Gay and Miss Howsen, 6-0, 6-0.

In her singles match Mlle. Lenglen played the usual stirring game, beating Miss Bower, 6-0, 6-0. With Miss Dido Vlaston, she defeated Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Frank J. Gould in the doubles 6-0, 6-1.

Helen and Suzanne appeared before thousands of persons, in both the singles and doubles within a few minutes of one another, and the comment was that the American girl won her singles match with much more impressiveness than did the French champion, but that her doubles play was below that of Mlle. Lenglen.

SPORTSMEN'S CLUBS TAKE TO FEEDING THE BIRDS

HARTFORD, Feb. 12—(AP)—Sportsmen's clubs, Boy Scouts and others are experiencing much difficulty in efforts to feed the wild birds unable to get natural foods because of the heavy snows, according to reports made to Superintendent John W. Titcomb, of the state department of fisheries and game. The lightness of the snows hamper the workers using snow shoes in reaching the game covers, the only places where successful feeding may be done.

Better conditions are expected during the next few days, however, as it is thought that the slight melting occasioned by the sun today will make for a crust strong enough to bear the snow shoers. Mr. Titcomb has expressed his appreciation of the manner in which many individuals and organizations have responded to the plea to feed the birds.

HOFF IS FAST BECOMING AS POPULAR WITH SPORT FANS AS WAS NURMI

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—(AP)—Flooded with invitations to appear at track meets in all parts of the country, Charley Hoff, of Norway, world's pole-vault record holder, said today he would write to athletic authorities in his homeland for an extension of his permit to compete in the south, the far west, and Canada.

The popular Norwegian, who has thrice exceeded the American indoor record since his arrival, said he was anxious to respond to as many of the requests as possible, particularly he wants to "see America from coast to coast." Some of the fifty invitations he has received, however, cannot be filled, owing to conflicting dates.

Hoff, speaking through an interpreter, said he would continue the practice of bettering his own indoor record of 13 feet 1 and 1-2 inches by an inch or two at each meet, although he has been soaring over the bar at least four or five inches above the old American record of 13 feet.

"It may be what you call superstition, or it may be common sense," he said "I have my confidence, and I don't want to lose it by attempting too much. I feel I can go considerable higher—perhaps as high as 13 feet, 6 inches indoors, but I want to approach my best mark by easy stages.

Then, there is the crowd. Everywhere I go they will expect me to please them. I don't want to disappoint the spectators, and if I try too much at the start, and then fail, it will be bad for me and for athletics.

"If I am lucky and am feeling right, I may go over fourteen feet indoors next summer. I may get up two, three, four inches above 14 feet. I can't say. I will do my best."

Texas and Washington may be the first states to see Hoff in outdoor performances, since the marvelous Norseman has been invited to compete in the former state during March and on the Pacific coast in May.

Hoff's next appearance indoors will be at the Wilco A. A. games here tomorrow night and the Norwegian turn verine meet next Wednesday. He then planes to compete at Baltimore on Feb. 27.

Other invitations asked for his appearance at Hamilton, Ont., March 13; at the Texas university relays, Waco, Tex., March 26; Rice Institute relays, Houston, Tex., March 27; at Chicago, April 8; Washington university relays, Seattle, Washington, May 1; and at Los Angeles, Calif., May 8.

Hoff said he had obtained a new 16-foot pole which he hoped to use during the outdoor season. The standard on which he is now leaping to indoor records is a fourteen-foot pole, with a two-foot extension attached. He is unwilling to use the new pole, he said, until he has familiarized himself with it by frequent practice jumps.

SHARKEY OUTPOINTS HUFFMAN IN FEATURE BOUT AT MADISON GARDEN

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—(AP) — Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, outpointed Eddie Huffman of California in the ten round feature bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Sharkey weighed 190 1-4 and Huffman 174. The fight was slow with the heavier Boston man pushing his left into Huffman's face constantly, tactics which kept the Californian on the move. In the sixth Huffman showed to best advantage when he found an opening for his right and staggered Sharkey with about a minute to go. He was unable to land the follow punch necessary for a knockout.

The last two rounds found Sharkey stronger than ever and he appeared to be giving the lighter man a boxing lesson, withholding his dangerous right. A crowd of 9,000 showed dissatisfaction with proceedings by cheering at several times and a continued booing at the end.

Joe Dundee, Baltimore welterweight received the decision over Jimmy Jones of Youngstown, Ohio, after a fast ten round battle. Dundee weighed 144 1-2, Jones 143 1-2.

Jack Demve, New York, lightheavyweight, outpointed Ray Neuman of Jersey City in a ten round preliminary to the Eddie Huffman-Jack Sharkey contest at Madison Square Garden tonight. Demave weighed 157 1-2, Neuman 158 1-2.

In the second heat, she swam the distance in one minute, 22 seconds flat.

Negotiating the 500-yard free style swim in 6:49 3-5 Martha Norelius, New York, retained her crown as national champion.

Miss Sybil Bauer, Chicago, broke her own world record set at Brighton Beach, N. Y., last year when she swam the 200 yards back-stroke in 2:47 4-5. The old pace was 2:51 4-5.

A new American record for the seventy-five yard handicap from scratch was set by Miss Ethel Lackie, Chicago, who made the distance in 44 3-5 seconds against Gertude Ederle's old mark of 45 1-5 seconds.

SOVIET-MADE MACHINES DRAW SHARP CRITICISM

Severe criticism on the quality of farm machinery turned out by the Krasnaya Zveyda (Red Star) factory at Zinovievsk, formerly Elisavetgrad, midway between Odessa and Kiev, is made by Pravada, organ of the Communist party. The villagers of Kutchi, in the Moscow district, clubbed together and bought a thrashing machine. The day of its arrival was a fete day for peasants and workmen. The thrasher was decorated with flowers and hailed with shouts of "A machine! A machine! A Soviet machine!" It was escorted to a waiting field and put to work. In four hours a gear lever broke. The village blacksmith, by working all night, fixed that and the wheels began revolving again at sunup. Soon one of the teeth chipped off a wheel. The harvesters took another rest while a village tinker fixed that. The machine rumbled for another hour before two more teeth fell off. Then the villagers gave up in indignation. They sent a delegation to the government's selling company to demand the return of their money, vowing that they would buy no more machines, but would thrash by hand. Pravada heatedly demands why workers have no better sense of their responsibility than to turn out such "archaic" machinery.

MILLIONS SUNK ON SHIP TO BE SOUGHT BY DIVERS

German divers, who have been searching for the lost British submarine M. 1, may be retained in England after their present work is done. The peninsula and Oriental lines have arranged to hire them to recover the gold from the liner Egypt, sunk off Ushant in 360 feet of water in May, 1922. The Egypt carried in her bullion room, consigned from London to Bombay, £675,000 in gold bars, £165,000 in gold coin and £315,000 in silver bars—a total value of £1,055,000 (about $5,125,000.)

Until the Keil firm of Neufeldt & Kunne devised its new diving suits this depth of 360 feet made salvage work impossible. But now diving to a depth of 500 feet being possible, a contract has been let for work on the Egypt's carcass next spring. The German diving suits weigh half a ton each and look like enormous steel man monsters.

TESTIFIES IN DEFENSE OF LARCENY CHARGE

BOSTON, Feb. 12—(AP)—Dr. Severio Silva, president of the American and Hamilton Drug companies, testified today in his own defense at his trial in superior court on the charge of larceny of $170,000 from physicians and business men of Boston. The defendant is conducting his own case.

He admitted that he owed the complainants money which he had borrowed from them, but said the claims were exaggerated. He denied that he made false representation, or showed bogus orders for merchandise as charged.

Witnesses for the prosecution previously testified that Silva obtained money from them by representing that he required funds to fill large orders for drugs, and that he needed capital to buy out a competitor in business.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

CULTIVATE THAT GOOD WHICH IMPROVES WITH THE YEARS.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Thirty) Valentines

I clerk in Baker's Bookstore down in Belleville
And have for five years, now, hey don't sell books,
Not many, you know, for
Nobody ever buys 'em,
Except the schoolbooks that the kiddies need.
But they sell pens and ink and writing paper,
Easter and Christmas cards and Valentines;
And now, I guess, we're most the only folks
That still puts out the queer, old-fashioned kind—
Lace paper, tinsel fringes, hearts and all.

Well, every year I've been there, I remember
Having a crusty customer come in
To buy a fancy Valentine of me.
He'd always buy the largest, fanciest one.
I'd take an interest, help him, with his shopping.
So this year, when he came, he said to me:
"I guess you think it's sorter funny, Miss,
For an old chap like me to fool around
With these here gewgaws. And I guess it is."
"I thought it might be for a child," I said.
"You're wrong," he said; "you'll have to guess again.
It ain't for a child. I guess it's for a penance
For a mean thing I did when I was young.
It was like this: We had a Valentine party;
I knew a homely girl I didn't like:
I sent a comic to her and she got it,
A horrid, ugly thing with a jeering message.
I watched her open it while all the others,
The pretty girls, was getting pretty sure
She held it close and wouldn't show it round
And flushed and bit her lip, and then I knew
For the first time how awful mean I'd been.
When I went home that night I got down and prayed
And made a vow to send her pretty cards
For every year of her life until I died.
And that's just what I've done.
It may sound silly,
And I ain't never told of it before;
But you might keep the boys from sending comics—
Yes, thank you, this is just the one I want."

That night I got a touch of old bronchitis
And felt too sick to work, and so I went
Upstate to spend a week with Aunt Mathilda
Who has a great big house and nobody in it.
But always room enough in it for me
Or anybody else who needs to go
For care or kindness. She has never married,
Although her heart is as big as her house, I think.
On Valentine's day at breakfast time the postman
Brought her the Valentine that I had sold—
The very one. I almost choked to see it!
And Aunt Mathilda looked at me and smiled.

"I guess you think it's funny, Betty dear,
For an old maid like me to get these things.
Well, I have thirty of them put away;
Who sends them? Well, the postmark's always new
And the handwriting, too. But anyhow,
It wouldn't be quite nice to try and find him.
Betty, these Valentines have made me decent.
I was too homely to be popular
When I was a girl. It nearly made me bitter
And mean to those who had more fun than I.
And once I got—But since these Valentines
Have kept on coming I have told myself
A woman must keep sweet if someone likes her.
Even if he never comes to ask for her.
So, when I'm blue, or when I'm feeling lonely,
I take 'em out of the drawer and look 'em over;
But nobody knows it. I ain't ever told
And don't you talk about it, Betty, dear;
Folks around here would think it awful silly."

All Ready Mr. Cady

O way up in Connecticut,
I went the other day
And that same night by the bright moonlight
I heard the fiddler play.
'Twas a country dance all by chance
I got an invitation:
And this was what I heard them say
To my great consternation
All ready Mister Cady.
And then he let her go
Oh, how he yanked that violin
And pulled on that ere bow.

CHORUS

Ladies Chain, now whirl
Jimmy Johnson keep your eyes off
Peter Perkins' girl—Eight hand round
Well I'll be bound
Who tripped up that lady?
Forward and back. Now let her go!
All ready Mister Cady.

They say that once in Wyndham town
The bull frogs had a fight.
It was a battle, long and weary.
Lasted near all night.
But early in the morning
Mister Cady did surprise them,
And stopped their din with his violin
And made them all cry out there
All ready Mister Cady.
We won't fight any more.
Come play us a tune, by the light of the moon.
We'll dance upon the shore.

They danced a dozen Virginia reels
And the Portland Fancy too—
Money musk and crooked-E.
And skipped the Tra-la-loo;
They got so tired some expired
And others fell asleep
Till one poor guy was left alone
And he commenced to weep
All ready Mister Cady!
He murmurred with a sigh!
He raised his head then gave one croak
And laid him down to die.

OLD RUG, QUILT AND SAMPLERS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Now that my daughter and her husband have gone to Florida and left me their radio, and I hear so much old time music, my thoughts go back to the things my mother and mother-in-law used to do.

I have a very handsome quilt that my mother pieced 75 years ago, when she was a young girl.

It was called the peony pattern. The blocks are cut in small pieces of red and green, with green stems and green leaves appliqued on white; set together with plain white blocks. Quilted with the pattern of the peony leaf in white, half blocks of white around the edge, quilted the same; around the outer edge, small blocks of half green and white, set together to form a saw tooth pattern. All the blocks are quilted in white.

It must have taken a long time to do all the work on it, every block just as perfect as any one could do it these days.

It is in good condition except some of the blocks are not as white as others. It has not been used since I can remember. I also have a rug my mother-in-law made nearly 40 years ago.

This has a red felt back ground, with pieces just a little larger than a 50-cent piece, of black felt, with smaller pieces of different colors of felt, all hand stitched with black thread to each other.

The rug is oblong with pointed ends.

The pieces are hand stitched to the red felt, in the following order, two rows on red, on outer edge, then one yellow, one olive green, one light blue, one of red; one yellow, one olive green, one light blue, and red through the center. There is a back broad-cloth fringe around the rug.

This was too handsome to use as a mere rug. I plan to make one some time. I also have one of the first parlor Franklyns made in Providence, in 1852, by the A. G. Bastow Stove Co.

It is made of iron, but when you have a good fire, you can take out the front and use it as a fire place, like the more modern Franklyns. I use it most of the time as coal is hard to get. I only keep the heater going when it is very cold, as my real fire place is in the hall, and not where I need heat the most these days.

I also have two samplers, one dated 1804 and one 1829, made by a girl ten years old. The year, name and age, and the numbers are all on. I have seen much nicer ones, it is simply the age of these. My mother-in-law brought them from Scotland 50 years ago. Last, but not least, a bed warmer completes the list for now.

I fear my letter is too long; but hope the sisters enjoy reading it half as much as I always enjoy their's.

LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

SNOWDRIFTS BUT FEW SLEIGHS

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: Have you stayed out above the snow or like the ground hog gone and hidden yourselves? I hope not, for we want the Corner page full even if drifts of snow are piled up all about us.

We did have some genuine winter weather last week, snow four days out of the seven. We had no mail Thursday and Friday which was unusual for us as we live in the center of the town on the direct road, but the carrier could not hire a horse and of course could not come by auto. But autos are running again and they are spoiling the sleighing. We do not hear many jingle bells nowadays. I am very sorry that so many sisters are ill or have been, but soon spring will be here and we shall all feel better even the shut ins.

But those of you who are well, I hope you will take all the pleasure you can for there is much to enjoy socially in winter and also out door sports.

I hope that you are well provided with coal for the winter. I think it is too bad that the coal strike cannot be ended. Fuel is such a necessity and in mid winter too. Besides economizing and endangering one's health by burning as little as possible there is the high price and paying what one cannot afford for the little they get is taking away other necessaries from those who can only procure a little at a time and it causes much suffering and sickness. I wonder if things will ever be adjusted. I think some of the greed of money and selfishness of many have got to be done away with before it is.

Many places are running down because it is impossible to pay the prices for labor and material and so, buildings go to ruin.

I presume many of you are busy with patchwork rugs, etc., while other are doing as much of the spring serving as possible so that when summer comes they can enjoy being out of doors.

I extend my sympathy to all who are in trouble and sorrow. Have faith that "All is well" and that strength will be given you as the hard days come, to continue your life. Create new interests filling your time full in thinking of and doing for others and you will find you can bear your sorrow better and still find much happiness.

Best wishes to all.

DIANA.

FINE CANDY

Dear Sisters: I wonder how you endured the terrible storm of last week? I must confess I had to keep my fingers busy so I would not think of the dreadful things which take place during such a terrific storm and wind. Surely it showed God's power and care. In the Bible we read in Psalms: "For He commandeth and raiseth the stormy wind. He giveth snow like wool. Stormy wind fulfilling His word." So we see He controls even the wind and storm.

Sisters: Do you know about sunshine boxes for shutins, boxes filled with little common, useful or amusing articles given by friends in dainty packages, one to be taken from the box each day as long as there is one in the box? It is nice to write a rhyme to accompany each parcel with the name of the giver.

Have you ever tried this recipe for candy? It is fine. Two pounds of white sugar, one-quarter pound butter, one cup cold water. Put on fire, add one can of condensed milk, one teaspoon vanilla. Boil and pour into buttered tins as with fudge. Cut in squares. This makes quite a quantity. It may be divided. This letter is getting too long so I will close thanking the editor for the prize I did not expect to receive.

SISTER BARBAR.

ENJOYED LAST MEETING

Dear Friends of the Social Corner: As it is time for me to write, I wish to say that I enjoyed the last meeting of Club 205 very much, especially the fine dinner. It was fine in quality and abundant in quantity. The entertainment was good but I heard some one say that they sang better before dinner than after. I guess that they ate hearty. You could not blame them, for the food was so good. Have been tying bed quilts. They are surely needed this time of the year.

Thanks for the pin I received. I will close wishing good luck to all of the Corner friends.

CACTUS BLOSSOM WRITES FROM FLORIDA

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: Will try and do my bit to keep the page filled by sending a message from Sanford, Florida.

I see by the papers that there are many people here from my part of the world and it seems to me we do not think much more about taking such a trip than our fathers and mothers did of going into the next state.

This place has grown surprisingly since last April. Houses have sprung up like magic and waste places have been changed into sub-divisions with paved streets and sidewalks bordered with palms.

As I may have written before, this is the center of the celery growing section and hundreds of carloads of celery are shipped from here every season. There are many other garden products raised also. Near us is a 40 acres section that I have been interested in. When one crop is taken off the ground is worked and some other kind is put right in. There are now large seed beds sown to peppers. The plants will be put in where some other crop is now growing. This year we have seen great fields of narcissus in blossom and the air is filled with their fragrance.

We have had some freezing weather but nothing seemed to be hurt much here except the tomato plants. It seems that cool weather kills the worms and also makes the lettuce head.

Think of going out in February to hang out your Monday's wash as you would in summer, sisters! That is what I have been doing lately. The weather has been fine, with wonderful sunshine. The birds are begining their spring songs and the frogs are doing their level best to be musical. Everything is beginning to put out the new growth now. Saw a red maple today that had its new leaves quite well grown.

We are in our own house now and yesterday I baked some of Peggy Alden's "Snicker Noodles." I used sour milk and soda but they were fine. May I suggest to the sisters that they state in their flour measurements, whether the flour is sifted or unsifted. It makes quite a difference to the consistency of cake dough. I would like to tell you about my sheet that we had the tinman make. It is the size of the oven bottom and is fine for biscuits or cookies. It is made of sheet iron and the edges are turned under. You will be delighted with one after you have once tried it.

Must close so there will be room in the paper for other letters. Greetings to all interested friends.

CACTUS BLOSSOM.

SOME MORE APPLES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Here I come again so soon but I did so want to thank some one who was so kind as to send me the Saturday's, Jan. 23rd, Bulletin as I missed it and I was more than pleased to see the Corner page for there were two or three letters in by those I know. I did not have room to write of Iola's apples which made my mouth water till it almost floated my store teeth. At home father had two kinds of pairmains, the blue and Cogwells and there is a Dorchester pairmain but he did not have the last named ones. He had a tree of the New York pippins. Now they were some apples. They grew very large. A neighbor took one and made a pie. That one filled her pie aplenty. They were beautiful. A neighbor had two trees of Mexico apples and all the other neighbors had a share while they lasted, also. The sweet apples she told of. Father had what he called pound apple. My, were they good? You bet! Another was an early kind always which went by the name of pineapple. What their real name was I never knew but they were the nicest pieapple I ever saw. As soon as they were large enough to cook we youngsters would call on for an "apple slump" or that was what we children called it by rights it was "pot apple pie." Sometimes we would have a sauce made like this to put on it: Take a piece of butter, a cup of sugar, cream together good, then put boiling water to it, set on stove and take cornstarch or flour which ever one choses and thicken a little like any sauce. Eat while hot. If you liked anything you could just eat that and not half try. But I don't think there is either tree of the pineapple living. Like us people they have got old and gone by.

Nurse Penny: How is your mother? Hope she is better. Have not heard from her for a long time.

Barbar: Suppose you are at Lebanon well. Is there any snow at your house? well. Is there any snow at you house? Our yard is piled up full. My better half has been shoveling since Friday but looks as if it will rain soon, then it will be water.

As ever and always.

AUNT JERUSHA.

BIRTHDAY CAKES

Dear Sisters: In some families where there are several children and birthday anniversaries come around every month or so, a birthday cake board is made to serve for each celebration, which is observed by the making of a large cake adorned with candles. It is almost impossible to find in the shops such a board as is needed to hold the cake and display it to the best advantage. I would suggest a novel home-made board measuring over two feet in diameter, cover it with crepe paper and bore holes an inch and one inch apart for holding the small birthday candles A flickering border of pink or yellow candle lights gives an effective appearance to the cake surrounding. The real birthday candles, of the right number can be placed on top the cake, each one being set in a pink and yellow rosebud holder.

You can make a more elaborate cake-board a little smaller in circumference, not over two feet and it can have small but substantial legs, so that the board itself will stand three inches above the table, covering over the top and side of the board with pink crepe paper and make a border of double width of the paper frilled around the edge. This makes the board look as if it had been buried in large huge flower petals. Stand the frill paper above the level of the board, and inside of the petal border quite close to the edge, fasten a row of crepe paper roses laid very flat and place them so they will appear to nestle under the wide petal border. Arrange the roses together so they will touch.

KEEPING HEF WORD

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Well here I am again. I told you I was going to do better and am trying to keep my word. Was glad to see letters from some of the older writers, or many I word that a little different, some of the sisters who do not write very often. There that sounds better. How do you all like the snow storm we had? Some snow I'll say. It is nice when one can stay in and look at it and say "How nice. I do love the beautiful snow." Not so nice for those who have to plow through it. Never mind, the robins and bluebirds will soon be chirping and cherries will soon be ripe.

My paper did not get here until Thursday afternoon and I thought I was going to get left. If any paper is lost it is sure to be the Social Corner one.

Dom Petdro: Am so sorry you are sick again. Surely hope you will soon get better. Summer is not a great way off then you will get out in the sun and that will do you good.

Balsam Fir: Do I O U or do U O me a letter? Are you snowed in up there?

Twice Twenty: Let me hear from you and tell me about the picnic you are planning at Oakland B.

E. M. R. C. P.: No danger of you getting snowed in, is there? I presume you are planting potatoes or corn or something of the sort.

Saw in the Willimantic news of the funeral of another Social Corner sister, Busy Bee. My sympathy goes out to the dear ones who are left to mourn for her, also to another sister (Guess) who has recently buried her mother. Grace, I am so sorry for you.

It seems as if there were so many going Home this winter. My sympathy for all the shut ins also. I hope Olga has fully recovered.

WHIRLWIND

KEEP CONFIDENCE OF CHILDREN

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: How interesting all the letters are, and to thank all the sisters who expressed their sympathy in our loss. One does not realize how much good a few words said at such a time mean. The kind sympathy and love expressed make the hard things and burdens lighter. It is true kind words can never die and that is one of the best things one can do, help others. Flowers given to the sick and shutins and little deeds of kindness while they are living, are worth more than gold or silver.

I agree with the sister who writes of mothers keeping the confidence of their girls. It does not hurt the boys too to confide in their mothers as well as their fathers. If we mothers take time and patience to listen to all their sorrows, joys, or perplexities they enjoy confiding with us. Many times advice will save them much trouble and annoyance.

The letters describing the different kinds of apples makes one hungry to go out in the orchard and fill up our pockets as we did when young. How many different kinds of apples there are! I almost lived on apples when a child and on father's farm after the first ones were ripe in August there was one kind after another so we always had some until late in the spring.

I wish to thank the kind Corner member for the nice little calendar. It is nice to be remembered when we have such a large family. I wish to greet all the new members and send best wishes to all the older ones. I have saved quite a number of choice recipes and helpful hints sent in so have quite a collection.

I would like a pin if it is not too late.

I also am sorry for all who have been through sorrow and for the sick and shut ins. Hope they will soon recover and be out again. I am as ever

SPRY BIRD

GREETINGS FROM MAVIS.

Dear Editor and Members of the Corner: I wish you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

As I have been away from home most of the time for the past three months I have not been able to write. I have received all my papers and enjoyed the letters very much.

I wish to thank all those who sent me cards and kind wishes at Christmas. Also to thank a Social Corner Member for the pretty calendar. I was very much pleased to get one as I had heard of them but had never seen any like mine.

We are having a regular blizzard as I write. Think it is the worst storm of the winter so far.

Where is Amy, Lonesome Pine, Mary Frances and Marigold? Don't remember seeing anything from your pens for some time. Hope all are well.

I attended the grand chapter session of the O. E. S., and saw Sister Olive. She was looking for Priscilla. Think it took some time to find her in that crowd.

Sister Jennie: The letter you received from France was fine. I, too, had a son in France 20 months during the World war. He often speaks of the kindness of the French people.

Crimson Rambler and Aries: Received your nice letters. Was glad to hear from Ma of Green Gables and Free Air.

Iola: We used to have all those apples you speak of and more. How good they were.

We have had a lot of nice letters from the sisters this year. The poetry is fine, too. I hope to be able to attend some of the meetings with Forglove and Whirlwind the coming summer.

With best wishes for the success of the Corner, I am

MAVIS.

THE NEW INVENTIONS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Happy New Year to you all, if it is not too late. I want to thank the member who sent me the nice calendar. It is very sweet and pretty and I have it here on my writing desk. I enjoy the nice letters from all the writers very much. Every one is so busy with their duties it is not always easy to find time to write, but tonight as I sit here listening in at the radio it has sort of inspired me to write, I think.

Where are these new inventions going to take us? Aren't they the most wonderful of all! How can the voices and music come in on the waves of the air The electric washer, toaster, flat and sweeper and the hot water heater where one can have hot water in an instant are all wonderful and nice too. Isn't it great to be living in this age. And how truly thankful we should all be that we are. While there are some things perhaps that are not as nice as they were in the older days yet these new inventions are such a help and give us so much pleasure.

Silver Locks once wrote about Thanksgiving 50 years ago and how hard those dear housekeepers worked to have everything a success. What would these dear ones think if they could just peep in on us in these days? Many of these loved ones are gone and live only in memory, but isn't it nice that we can remember them, and how sweet they seem to us! We had the pleasure of Silver Locks taking dinner with us today. We missed Old Fashioned Mother at the Christmas gathering. You don't know what a nice time you missed. Well, guess I will ring off now, as I want to leave plenty of room for the other members to write. As ever.

YELLOW DAISY.

GREETINGS FROM CELIA LOUISE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I am still alive and enjoy all good times as usual. Thanks to Social Corner Member for the pretty calendar. I have all the back years saved, each one so pretty. Well I expect to be at the next meeting, if the family are all well. They have all been sick, and we had three weeks of measles, so were pretty busy. I too, miss the old writers. Sister Ready I am glad we had a chat. Call again. Don't forget the number. How many read Susie, in the Bulletin? She is a good live one, she ought to join the Social Corner. I hope she is able, to sit down, and has gotten over the measles Boy Friend probably has them by this time.

Well, Truth, I hope the dance and dinner did not make you sick. I saw Liberty Bell. She is all right.

Who said beautiful snow? Come up on my corner, and I will give you all you want.

Kitty Lou! Spare us some of your sweet peas, and am coming to see you soon, and bring Sister Ready. She wants to meet you. Good Luck to you all.

CELIA LOUISE.

AUNT SARAH'S PARTY LONG TO BE REMEMBERED

Dear Cornerites: For the benefit of those who wanted to come and couldn't to Aunt Sarah's meeting, I am writing an account of the affair. You may have had fine gatherings and dinners at your other meetings held the third, but you had to go some if you beat our good time. Tuesday Aunt Sarah began to gather chairs from all over the house and I counted seats for 45 people. Tuesday night the quahaugs were delivered to us and from the time of their arrival till five o'clock Friday night they drew sister after sister. For three successive days those quahaugs were an attraction. Some sisters came in cars, some on sleds and some on foot. Several called up and asked us to run it over one more day but I knew Aunt Sarah's fondness for shell fish too well to chance there being any chowder left for another day, so we finished up Friday. The chowder held out very nicely till then as did the bountiful supply of other food. Aunt Sarah had arranged strips of a beautiful shade of yellow crepe paper about the table and dining room. The table centerpieces were baskets of fruit and potted plants, giving the whole a very attractive appearance.

The table fairly groaned with good things to eat. There were besides the various kinds of crackers to go with the chowder, beans served in attractive dishes, pickles, meat loaf, fresh rolls, cake, pineapple, peach and lemon pies. Z's apple pie, topped with whipped cream and seasoned with lemon and nutmeg was delicious. We tried to do justice to everything, the apples, cheese, cookies, coffee, soda mints and I don't know what not. As I say, the table groaned when we sat down and we groaned when we got up.

The radio gave us music while we ate, but being genuine Cornerites, we talked too steadily to give the entertainers a fair show. We thought and spoke of those who had wanted to come, but we were having such a good time we couldn't allow any sentiment to cast shadows over us. After dinner we had more radio which was listened to with more respect. Later We had very interesting talks on home decoration, child training and fancy work. The Same One gave us some thoughtful ideas for the future. Wee Wifie and Dorinda demonstrated the suitability of taste in combining colors in patchwork. One sister told us how to make an attractive sewing stand at little expense and was so thoughtful in bringing a stand to show us. It was altogether a grand party and we congratulate Aunt Sarah on her ability to keep cheerful and play the thoughtful hostess through it all.

Everyone left at five o'clock Friday night vowing they would remember the Corner meeting at Aunt Sarah's as long as they lived. We were all made to feel welcome and at home and there was not a dull moment through it all.

Now dear sisters, if you wish more particulars of this glorious affair send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to Z who will gladly furnish you with anything I have left out.

Pineapple Pie (requested by Dorinda): 1 cup scalded milk, one half cup sugar, three teaspoons flour, 2 egg yolks, one half teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup crushed pineapple, pinch of salt. Beat egg yolks, flour, sugar and flavoring together, stirr till thickens. Add pineapple, and when cool pour into single crust and frost with whites of eggs and whipped cream.

This rule is for a small pie. I used it double for my pie plate.

DON'T WORRY

NONE LIKE THE OLD FRUIT.

Dear Cornerites: I do not think I can be classed as a sister as weeks and months have passed and the nearest I could get to the Corner was to read the good letters written by our faithful sisters.

When I started writing I thought each month would find me doing my bit, but illness and infirmities of age have kept me a partial shut-in for months, but now I hope, sometime when the weather comes warm, to meet at some of the gatherings of the clubs.

In reading Iola's letter about fruits of the old fruit trees I could almost taste in my mind those apples and often think there is no new variety that quite takes the place of the old varieties.

Within a few years I was taking a walk through a piece of woodland and came to an old tree from which I tasted the fruit and found it to be a Mexico, the first I had tasted in years. As a child I though, the ones grown on a tree in my uncle's yard, a tree small enough for the youngsters to climb, was fruit fit for a king, but I think in all those long years the taste remained the same.

I am so glad the old time dances are coming back again. I am not familiar with the new dances, but have heard the music, so-called, and I think we old timers will never be satisfied with the new.

I wonder how many of the Cornerites remember dancing schools of Gurdon Cady and H. H. Hatch? There must be several in such a large family.

I have always wanted to help the Corner so I would be entitled to a pin but some way fate seems to be against me for one month has already gone by of this new year and now after my third attempt to write for January I will close by wishing all a happy New Year.

PRACTICING ECONOMY

Dear Social Corner Members: Now is your chance to go sliding down hill. I saw a horse and sleigh yesterday, it recalled to mind many good times.

Chub: Didn't I read something a while back that made me think you were singing lullabies. I don't go past your place so often nowadays.

Tafts: Was so glad you got a prize. Am going to try the recipe. Hope every body is well now and the new venture a success.

Country Sister: Was going on your street recently and one of the party said here's where so and so's mother lives. So now I know your number.

Billy: Where are thou?

Do any of you sisters have trouble on windy days with the draw string's in under garments blowing out when hung on the line. I have, until I fastened each one in the centerback with a stitch or two and I have no more trouble.

I have been practicing economy, I had a lovely camisole with crocheted yoke that I had worn only a few times. also a very fine night gown that was worn at neck and shoulders. I joined the bottom part of gown to camisole and have a dandy slip. I made stepins from the bottoms of other gowns. I got two good serviceable pair of bed blankets by using the better parts of three pair. From a table cloth I made a good sized square for a small table from the best part and from the next best took large pieces hemmed them and they are fine to place under the children's or men's plates. From the rest I made dish towels.

Joan: Why don't you send in that delicious pineapple recipe?

BUSY KNITTING AND PIECING

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I want to thank Social Corner Member for my pretty calendar. I think I can guess who is who that sent it.

As today is Monday, February 1st, I thought the prose in verse form would be appropriate for the day and season, entitled: All in The Day's Work, by Nina St. Clair Campbell.

A big northeaster's coming; how it shrieks and howls and whines! But you've got to brave its fury, and bring in the clothes from the lines!

As you look out into the twilight, from the kitchen so cosy and warm; how the poor clothes seem to beckon, and beg to be saved from the storm! The frantic dance of the B. V. D.'s would melt the stonist heart, and the wind swells their helpless bodies 'til you fear every seam must start.

Of course to go out in the bitter cold, isn't a bit like fun, but it's part of your business to do it, and duty must be done; so you put on your trusty mittens, a cap and a nice warm cloak, and try to make your folks believe, that you think it's a jolly joke.

Just as you start to unpin the clothes, which you're glad to find "frozen dry," the snow comes tossing and whirling, out of the leaden sky.

Though the clothes are dry, every clothespin is frozen tight to the line, any you have to go slow and careful with the old ones, the sheer and the fine.

How the cruel wind tries to foil you: how it numbs your hands through your mitts; how it tries to wrench the clothes from your grasp and tear them them into bits; how it blows the breath back into your throat, and lashes you with the clothes and stings your eyes 'til the tear-drops fall off of the end of your nose.

It makes you feel, oh so tiny, to fight such a mighty foe, but you feel that you're slowly winning, as from line to line you go; and when you get back to the kitchen, with the white, sweet smelling clothes, and the blood comes tingling back again to your ears and fingers and toes, you wonder if folks who don't have to work ever feel as glad as you; or at supper have such an appetite for old fashioned mutton stew.

I am busy knitting mittens for my small grand-children, and piecing blocks for a quilt while I listen in on the radio evenings. I also send my favorite motto, I have had for years:

"Incompleteness"

Nothing is perfect, weather, food, or friend;
Who seeks completeness, searches without end.
But as, they come, the food, the friend, the weather,
Make life worth living taken all together.

I hope to meet with the Social Corner in March.

GRANDMA OF TWIN OAK COTTAGE.

DO FOR OTHERS

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Do all you can for others to make them happy. Give them a smile and a kind work. Do not do like a girl I know who met a person she knew well on the street and never spoke or smiled—just turned her head and stuck up her nose. That person was hurt and nearly cried. The girl could have spoken or smiled. A kind word does a whole lot many times. Sometime that person might want a favor and then be so glad to speak. One never knows.

I said "thank you" to a woman once and another asked why I did that. She thought it awful for me to say that. I always did say "Please" and "Thank you" and always taught my children to. I always try to do to others as I would have them do to me. I don't always get it but I do my part. I am always ready to lend a helping hand.

I would like to get a letter from True Blue. Hope she isn't sick.

The verses sent in by Grandma Gray were fine. She writes such nice letters, too. I can say she is one good Christian woman. We lived as neighbors for years.

Rural Aunt: I wish you would write every week. But you have lots to do, I know, and the radio takes lots of your time. Glad you have it to enjoy. Take all the comfort you can with it.

Free Air wrote a lovely letter. I always thing of her when it is so cold here and no coal to burn.

Silent Stranger: I think of you so often. You and your family have my heart sympathy.

Rural Delivery: That was so true what you wrote about clothes hanging in the clothes press and doing no good. I love to make over. I made over eight suits for my grandchild who is just starting to go to school. It is worth a lot to know how to sew. I would learn if I did not know how. I like to sew, knit, crochet or make tatin. I have earned lots of money crocheting center pieces, yokes and collars and scarf ends.

Wish Mercy would write a line. I know you are as busy as a bee, for you always are, but write a line and do your bit.

Historian: Would like a line from you, and hope you are not sick.

Kochie: Tried your cake and it surely was fine. I always knew you were a good cook, and surely can tie bed-quilts. Ha. ha.

Please may I have a pin. Many thanks.

CAKKIE.

MAKING USE OF GOOD MATERIAL

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It really seems quite like winter to see so much snow around. February is now nearly half gone so it won't be long before spring is here.

Sassy: Your letter Saturday was fine. So true to life too. How hard it is to discard things sometimes. So many closets and bureau drawers contain material to clothe many a child were it in the right hands. But in this fast age many people rather buy cheap material ready made instead of spending a little time in making over good material. It is like serving made dishes at the table. I once knew a woman who made many good dishes out of left overs. Her neighbor used to say she was so foolish and why didn't she run out and get chops or a steak it was so much easier? But when her husband lost his job they had to borrow money to move to the next job. While the other woman when her husband was unable to work for several months kept her bills up. Had her steak and chops occassionally and also used her left overs. They were each the same way about their clothes, one never made over anything while the other one did. There are extremes either way. I don't believe in putting in a lot of time and material when you know the finished work won't be satisfactory or will cost more in the end than something new in either food or clothes. Some of the prettiest dresses I ever had when I was a child were made overs.

Tafts: Thanks so much for telling the quantity of meal and flour to use. It is O. K. shall have it often.

KEEPING BUSY ABOUT SOMETHING

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: I am sorry I waited so long before thanking the Social Corner editor for my yellow slip. I surely meant to thank him before this, but time slips by so quickly, it is gone almost before we realize it.

Some of the sisters told what they did with their dollar. I will tell how I spent mine. I cut a coupon out of a paper and with that and 98 cents I got a nice Websters Dictionary. Then with the remaining two cents I got a postage stamp. I use the dictionary a lot to help get out the cross word puzzles I enjoy them immensely. Some people say it is a waste of time, but I can't see it that way, for we get new words we wouldn't get if it wasn't for them so I think they are instructive.

Several of the writers, have written of Mr. Cady. How well I remember him. He was my dancing master in Lebanon when he held dancing schools in the town hall. I enjoyed myself the best that winter I ever did and it will long be remembered. How many times I have heard "All ready Mr. Cady." I have danced with him. He was a large man, but light as a feather and so jolly. I have never seen his monument, but have heard it spoken of many times. I hope to see it some time.

Piecing quilts seems to be the rage this winter. I have pieced two and started another. It is such interesting work and I enjoy it. I am also crocheting lace for pillow cases. I try to keep busy about something for "Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do."

Best wishes for the Corner.

PINEAPPLE CUSTARD PIE

Dear Cornerites: Thought it about time I got busy again and done my share to help keep the page full.

What a good time we had last week Wednesday. Was so glad it didn't come on Thursday as there would have been some disappointed sisters and I for one, could not have gone. We have too good a time to miss one.

Calla Lily: I have not got the address yet as I have not been down the hill since last week Wednesday night, and as it looks today I don't believe I'll get down it till next May. But hope there will be a good path so I can get down the third of March anyway.

Alittie: I thought you would surely be up the day of the snow storm, It was so nice.

Aunt Mary Jane: I will look for that ginger bread recipe today.

Lo: I suppose you'll be there March third, with bells on.

Honey B: I am sending that long promised pie recipe.

Pineapple Custard Pie: Three cups milk, 4 egg yolks, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 can pineapple, 1 cup raisins 1 cup cocoanut, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Heat milk, stir in sugar, salt and cornstarch sifted, boil until thick, add beaten egg yolks and boil three minutes more. Heat pineapple and lemon juice and put in raisins and simmer ten minutes. Add this to the custard then add vanilla. Bake pie crust, fill with filling spread with meringue, and sprinkle with cocoanut. Set in oven and let it brown.

Meringue: Four egg whites, 4 teaspoon powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla. This makes two pies.

Enough said.

CHILDREN THEN AND NOW

Dear Cornerites: I have a word for Sister Black-Eyed Susie. I was so glad you had the poem, and wish to thank you ever so much for your kindness in sending it in.

I see Persis is wondering what is the matter with the young people of today. She must remember that times are much changed to what they were when she and I were young. Then children were brought up to have respect for the older folks, and if they could do anyone a kindness in any way, it was a pleasure, but now the more harm some can do, they think it a feather in their cap, while many time they do not realize they are hurting themselves in the eyes of the world.

Am afraid, Persis, the time of helping, as it used to be, is fast going past as things look with the naked eye. But the question is would not it be much better to try and lend a helping hand to some poor mother who has but little sunshine. A cheerful word many times lightens a sad and sorrowing heart. The young of today don't realize the life a mother has many times. Think how hard a mother has worked early and late to bring up the family, to have them respect and shrow respect when they go out into the world. Many times the mother is crushed. Is it the mother's fault or the child's?

GREETINGS FROM SNOWFALKE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: If we carried out all of our good intentions—well, I should have written several letters by this time. My namesake (Snowflake) has been here for the past week and kept me busy. I cannot be deceitful and say "How glad I am to see you" although she is considered beautiful and brings health and wealth to this earth.

What a fine dinner was served at the Buckingham last week Wednesday. Fit for a king.

Wetona: Many thanks for the birthday card. Also Wurdy Belle's, which was last but not least.

Bristol: How are you? Suppose you will read the letters when your paper arrives.

Come on in, the Corner is fine.

Aunty No. 1: I shall miss keeping tabs when you move. I can now see when the butcher, baker and candlestick maker come and go.

Chauffeur: Are you always as polite as you were last Monday or were you only practicing?

Prudence: Did the coffe ruin your dress? Please drink it next time.

Hope this finds all sick ones improved, all sorrowing hearts comforted with His great love.

Yours for the corner.

SNOWFLAKE.

SURE DEATH OF COCKROACHES

Dear Corner Friends: A friend of mine was urged to try cucumber peelings as a remedy for cockroaches. She strewed the floor with pieces of the peel cut very thin and watched the sequel. The pests covered the peelings in a short time so that it could not be seen, so voraciously were they engaged in sucking the poisonous moisture from it. The second night that

LIBERTY IMPOSSIBLE UNDER ATTITUDE OF SUSPICION

After waiting for two days to make his speech in the United States senate at Washington, Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut found his opportunity and took advantage of it early Tuesday evening. He decided some of the tendencies he said were manifested during the senate debate on the new revenue bill and emphasized the importance of adhering to constitutional guarantees.

"If I may paraphrase the words of our distinguished president," said the senator, "I believe that it does not follow that, because abuses exist it is concern of the congress to attempt their reform in such a way as to deprive a citizen of his rights when he has done no wrong; and when no one can either swear or affirm that there is a probable cause for search, and that in the interests of justice he deserves to be seized and his house and papers searched."

"In the first place, it seems to me that in certain of the amendments and in certain of the speeches there is a forgetfulness of one of the fundamental principles which has made our country a happy land, perhaps the happiest and most free from tyranny and despotism of any recoarded in the annals of history," Senator Bingham declared. "That principle is the fundamental one that a man is to be held innocent until he is proven guilty. Our country has been peculiarly blessed in the best because of its charitableness.

"No citizen can live happily in a city where the authorities are constantly suspicious of him and his actions. It has been the glory of the United States that an American might live his life without laboring under the suspicion of his government. It is true that people have taken advantage of this. Wrongdoers have profited by it. Crimes have been committed. Thousands of murders have been committed.

"Is that any reason why every citizen should report to the police once a month, or once a year, and should leave his blinds up and his door unlocked so that the police might enter his house at any time to see whether he was engaged in plotting or committing murder or even a lesser crime. Let us not forget the fundamental American principle of presumption of innocence. Liberty and the pursuit of happiness cannot be enjoyed if our attitude is to be one of suspicion."

His next point, Senator Bingham said, is that it appears to him that there has been a growing tendency during the past few years to forget a principle as old as the Ten Commandments and as sacred to us as the constitution of the United States.

"The prosperous man was always a shining mark and an easy way for every sovereign, whether he were a monarch, obligarch or demigod. To enrich his treasury, to provide for his necessities, to make up for his excess and extravagances; some times without process of law, more frequently through different forms of taxation or legal assessments, the property of the thrifty and the prosperous was seized by the tyrants of antiquity," Senator Bingham said.

"Our constitution provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation. It recognizes not only the right to life and the right to law but the right to property. It recognizes no stigma to the man who through his zeal, thrift, intelligence and good fortune has accumulated far more than his neighbor. It makes no appeal to the man, who, through misfortune or extravagance, or stupidity, or wastefulness, or faults of theirs, has not been able to accomplish property. On the other hand, it recognizes the importance of giving every one a 'square deal' and protecting him in the possession of that which he has acquired, and of taking nothing from him without just compensation. Sometimes we forget this clause in the constitution.

"In the third place," Senator Bingham declared, "the constitution has assured the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures." He added that "the constitution promises that these rights shall not be violated and that no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause supported by oath or affirmation. It seems to me, that there is a tendency to forget this part of our constitutional bill of rights."

"There are some who believe that tyranny and despotism only exists under monarchies, obligarchies or autocracies. It seems to me that they have failed to read history. Even Plato observing the action of the Greek republics, was led to affirm that 'tyranny springs from democracy,' even though the citizens of a democracy are at the time unconscious of it. Let it not be said of us, Mr. President, that our zeal led us to sacrifice the liberties, the comforts and the happiness of thousands of innocent citizens, whose desire it is to maintain their own self-respect, to be self-reliant, to mind their own business, to lead their own lives without interfering in the slightest degree with the liberty of others to do the same."

General Pershing concluded his conferences with Secretary Kellogg in Washington, on the Tacna Arica situation, and left for New York to visit his son, Warren, whom he has not seen for about eight months.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week, the new fire alarm system, which had just been installed in this city, was tested by Chief Engineer Carrier and found to be working satisfactorily. The house of the hook and ladder company was finished that week and was the finest in the city at that time. The Universalist society held its annual festival in Breed hall and the Catholic residents of Occum were making plans for a festival to be held the following week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of February, 1876, are as follows:

Monday, Feb. 7, 1876—The house of the hook and ladder company is now finished and is the finest in the city. The council room has been entirely refitted, repainted and refurnished and presents the appearance of a gorgeous parlor. With "Dan's buzzer" on the wall to alarm the boys in case of fire, the elegant rooms to meet in and the general good appearance of the company property, Captain Clark may well feel proud of his position. The boys will be glad to show their friends through the house.

Dr. Kinne's horse ran down Main street, Saturday, and when near the Wauregan House came in collision with and started the team of Amassa M. Main of Ledyard which also ran as far as the corner of Ferry street, where the wagon came in contact with the lamp post, breaking the glass globe of the lamp and the whiffletree of the wagon. A barrel of flour was thrown from the wagon onto the steps in front of O'Brien and Brewster's store. Mr. Main, who has the use of but one arm, said that he got out of the wagon just the same as he had no desire to ride any further at that speed.

There was some pretty good sleighing Saturday, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all who could get a team to turn out with. Some of the fast nags were out on the avenue in the afternoon.

Tuesday, Feb. 8, 1876—The annual fair and festival of the Universalist society begins in Breed hall tonight, and continues tomorrow evening. There will be the usual attractions with many new ones. A pleasing and interesting drama, My Brother's Keeper, will be presented each evening and the novel and laughable Laborers' chorus. All the refreshments of the season can be found on the tables.

The arrangements for the new manufactory in J. Hunt Smith's building are nearly completed and soon Mr. Corbett will have his works in full operation. The machinery is expected today as it was shipped from New York yesterday.

There will be competitive examination of applicants for positions as teachers at the West Chelsea district school Saturday.

Wednesday, Feb. 9, 1876—The annual meeting of the C. B. Rogers & Co., was held yesterday and the following gentlemen were elected directors: Lyman Gould, Amos W. Prentice, Geo. W. Gould, B. H. Rogers, and R. M. Ladd of Norwich, Edward Joslyn, Keene, N. H., and James C. Nason of New York. Lyman Gould was elected president; B. H. Rogers, secretary, and R. M. Ladd, treasurer.

It is proposed tomorrow evening to strike the alarm on the fire alarm boxes and to repeat the signals on the city hall bell, with the purpose of familiarizing the firemen with the districts they represent. The apparatus will not be taken out, nor will the firemen attempt to visit the districts signalled. The exercise is simply intended to accustom the department to the sound of the signals.

The Hook & Ladder Co., have elected George L. Clarke, foreman; C. W. Huntington, first assistant; Henry Lewis, second assistant; J. B. Corey, secretary.

Thursday, Feb. 1, 1876—The Rev. W. Elliott Bates of Madison university was ordained to the ministry in the Greeneville Baptist church Tuesday evening. The Rev. Ralph H. Bowles of Jewett City was the moderator of the ordaining council and the Rev. A. F. Spaulding, clerk. The singing was excellent. A large delegation was present from other churches of the city. Mr. Bates enters the ministry under pleasant auspices.

George L. Risley has purchased the estate of Sidney Risley the old pottery and will carry on the business. He also purchased at auction Tuesday the brick house belonging to the estate for $3,400. William Hartley bought at the same time the wooden house. Purchase price $1,200.

The Universalists closed their pleasant entertainment last night with a very large attendance. The programme was substantially that of the previous night and was rendered in a manner in the highest degree creditable to those engaged in it.

Friday, Feb. 11, 1876—The fire alarm telegraph was tested last night by Chief Engineer Carrier and found to work satisfactorily. A number of boxes were struck and the signal repeated on the city hall bell. The need of a general alarm between the number of the box is evident, and should be given, as in other cities, by repeated tolling of the bell. The alarm will be in service from this date.

Avery W. Barnes of Preston, while cutting ice on the Griswold Paper company's pond yesterday, set a few hooks and caught thirty pickerel, three of which weighed thirteen pounds. The largest weighed six pounds.

Saturday, Feb. 12, 1876—The Catholic fair and festival at Occum next week promises to be an attractive sort of entertainment. It will last the whole week. Parents hall where it is to be held will be kept open afternoon and evening.

A fire was discovered about half past twelve this morning in the house of Bridget Mohan on Thames street. The fire, which was in a quantity of charcoal in the second story, occupied by Frank Parsons, had burned through the roof, when Officer Burdick saw it and put it out without giving an alarm, an instance of presence of mind as rare as commendable.

Efforts are being made to induce the Hon. E. S. Cleveland, of Hampton, to deliver a centennial address here next week. Mr. Cleveland has delivered this address in different parts of the state, always with much acceptance and we trust he may be pursuaded to favor Norwich.

ETHELYN

A WINDY WINTER

Dear Corner Sisters: It has been a long time since I have written but have been interested with the other letters, and I always like the poems on the Corner page. I want to thank a sister for a very pretty calendar. I always get one and always make a new promise to write often but am sorry to say, I don't always live up to it.

We are having a terrible storm here today and no doubt it is on the main land as bad or worse. We have had very bad winds here but not a bad winter otherwise.

It has been very hard on the water most of the winter, and March yet to come with her winds, but spring really isn't so far away, so we all take heart and look for calm days.

I do not see Kitty Lou's name in very often any more. I always enjoyed her letters. I always look for recipes too. I suppose we all have our hobbies and recipes are certainly mine.

Although it's a little late, will wish all the sisters a happy New Year.

DEW KIST.

DOING HER BIT

Dear Corner Friends: After reading so many nice letters in Saturday's paper I feel it is time for me to do my bit.

First I want to thank Saville for the lovely little calendar. How are you these days.

Hope you are well and not snowed in.

Necia: So sorry you have gone out of the tork business. I should have got my order in earlier. I think Maple Leaf will agree with me, for I understand her order was filled.

Eca: Where are you? I hope not frozen. Cheer up, we will have some warm weather in June. How about it?

I am sending a recipe for cake which I think very good, and easy to make: Two eggs, 1 cup sugar beaten light, one cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder, beat all together; one half cup milk, one teaspoon butter, scalded together. Pour on cake mixture gradually and beat all together. Flavor with orange and bake in shallow pan.

Best wishes to the Corner.

CHILDREN

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Almost seems sometimes as if people consider children a modern invention forgetting childhood has always been indespensable to the race, and that youthful specimens of humanity were brought up quite comfortably before latter day methods were developed.

There always have been children and we earnestly hope and pray that there always will be. Child life is ever the same in its primeval instincts, and wherever children have lived, there children have played because play is so natural an expression of child activity.

Somehow, we rarely think of our Colonial ancestors as little boys and girls playing with toys; yet each had them such as they were and thus they diverted themselves. Puritan ideas were so staid and uncompromising that playthings seemed out of harmony with their environment, yet there are in existence today many old-time toys dating back to the childhood of our great grandmothers. It is refreshing to note that the playthings now in use do but repeat these old fashioned whimwhams on a more extensive scale.

HAD TWO DRY YEARS IN STATE IN 1923 AND 1924

The year 1923 and 1924 produced droughts in Connecticut, with markedly adverse effects on public water supplies says the weekly bulletin of the state health department. Several supplies were exhausted by the lack of rainfall. Fortunately 1925 brought no such conditions. In Norwich, where steps are now under way to guard against future trouble, during the fall months of 1925 the reservoirs were seriously depleted but rain relieved the situation so as to tide the supply through the winter.

Following is a table showing the 1925 annual rainfall at representative stations compared with the driest year on record. Also is shown the June-November rainfall in 1925 compared with the corresponding driest period. This six month period is presented because experience has shown that drainage areas furnish smaller percentages of run off during these months which is a decided factor in depleting water supplies. The figures are given in inches.

City or town	1925 Annual rainfall	Annual rainfall driest on record	Six months rainfall June-Nov. 1925	Six months rainfall driest on record
Bridgeport	48.68	35.46	28.60	14.52
Cornwall	43.10	30.13	23.81	16.12
Hartford	38.13	38.63	19.78	13.51
Mansfield	42.17	30.12	22.26	11.87
Middletown	42.70	36.00	21.72	14.52
New Haven	44.39	38.38	23.59	15.97
New London	39.61	30.05	19.96	12.76
Thompson	42.17	28.20	23.31	11.53

The average rainfall figures given in the table are not entirely comparable due to the varying lengths of rainfall records available. However, it is of interest that the 1925 rainfall was nearly normal for Mansfield, New Haven and Thompson; the Bridgeport figure was above the average; whereas Cornwall, Hartford, Middletown and New London were considerably below the average. The shore stations at Bridgeport and New Haven recorded the highest rainfall in the state.

The rainfall for June-November was much higher than in previous dry years and this is borne out by the fact that no serious effects were noted on supplies with small storage.

In connection with its studies of the adequacy of public water supplies, the bureau of sanitary engineering has complete rainfall records for the following places in Connecticut, which are available for any water officials or others desiring them.

Bridgeport 32 years. Canaan 24 years, Canton 67 years, Colchester 34 years, Cornwall 24 years, Hartford 58 years, Hartland 9 years, Middletown 67 years, New Haven 75 years, New London 55 years, Norwalk 34 years, Southington 55 years, Thompson 35 years, Torrington 5 years, Voluntown 40 years, Waterbury 39 years.

Lincoln's birthday although not a legal holiday in Rhode Island, was generally observed by the flying of the stars and stripes from both public and private buildings. Noticeable among the flags about town was that flying from the new flag staff at the Westerly hospital, the gift to the hospital by the members of Merrill post, American Legion. Westerly post office, town hall and banks observed the regular hours, but in Pawcatuck, the Pawcatuck Bank and Trust company observed the holiday by remaining closed.

The public schools of Westerly and Stonington observed Lincoln's birthday with fitting patriotic tributes. The programmes in all of the schools were similar with patriotic recitations and songs being given by the pupils.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Turns Spy

You'll always find it fun to try
To puzzle and upset a spy.
—Mr. Mocker.

At first Peter was inclined to be provoked because Mocker the Mocking Bird laughed at him when he turned up his nose at the raisin and the currant Mocker had brought to him and had told him was so delicious. But when he discovered that Mocker was laughing because, he, Peter, thought that turnip and carrot and apple were so very much better, he felt differently. He began to see that what is delicious to one person, to another may not be delicious at all; and that it really was funny that he should have been so anxious for a taste of Mocker's food. So he decided not to lose his temper, but to laugh with Mocker.

The more puzzled Peter was the more curious he became

Now that his curiosity in regard to Mocker's food was satisfied, Peter became more curious than ever about the place where Mocker slept. He teased Mocker to tell him; but Mocker shook his head. "That is a question you have no right to ask, Peter Rabbit, and you know it," said he.

Peter admitted this. "But," said he, "I have a perfect right to find out where you sleep if I can."

"Yes," replied Mocker good naturedly, "you have a perfect right to find out if you can, I wonder if you can."

"I wonder, too," said Peter. "I rather think I can, I find out most things that I really set out to find out."

"My!" exclaimed Mocker. "Aren't we smart? And haven't we a good opinion of ourselves?"

Peter looked at Mocker suspiciously. He suspected that he was being made fun of. But Mocker looked so innocent that Peter said nothing and finally left for the dear Old Brier-patch to try to think of some plan to find out Mocker's secret. Finally he made up his mind that the only way he would ever find it out would be by spying.

Spying isn't a nice thing for anyone to do, and Peter knows it. But sometimes it is the only way of finding out certain things. So Peter began spending all his spare time hiding here and hiding there. Mocker the Mocking Bird go to his secret resting place. He first began by hiding over behind the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard; but Mocker would disappear around the corner of the house late in the afternoon and Peter would see him no more.

Peter made up his mind that Mocker must go somewhere in a direction which kept Farmer Brown's house between them. This was unfortunate because Peter couldn't think of any hiding places on the other side of Farmer Brown's house where he dared to watch. So he spent a lot of time looking for some sort of a hiding place some distance from Farmer Brown's in the direction in which he thought Mocker must fly. But there was only Green Meadows down in that direction for a long distance and no hiding place that Peter could think of where a Mocking Bird would be likely to spend the night. Then he tried watching very early in the morning to see from what direction Mocker came. The very first morning he discovered Mocker coming through the Old Orchard from the direction of the Green Forest.

This puzzled Peter more than ever. Here was Mocker coming from the opposite direction from that in which he had seemed to disappear the night before. Peter was certain that not once while he had been watching had Mocker flown through the Old Orchard toward the Green Forest late in the afternoon. If he didn't do this, how could he be coming from that direction in the morning? The more puzzled Peter was, the more curious he became. It seemed to him that he simply must find out where Mocker the Mocking Bird slept each night.

When Winter Comes

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

In one week 102,909 thronged to see it

During the week of the National Automobile Show, January 9-16, over 100,000 men and women came direct from Grand Central Palace to the Willys-Overland showrooms, at Broadway and 50th Street, New York, to enjoy a better view of the new "70" Willys-Knight Six. These in their eager thousands found it impossible to give it close enough examination, so great were the crowds around it at the show!

Super-efficiency, through Greater Power Development

This new "70" Six applies the principles of high speed engine construction to the Knight Sleeve-Valve motor with startling results. With a 2 15-16 inch bore and a 4 3-8 inch stroke this new Sleeve-Valve Six engine delivers greater power per cubic inch of piston displacement throughout its complete range, than any stock American motor-car engine built today. Speed capacity is well in excess of 60 miles an hour; acceleration is positively startling, and its power on hills is a revelation.

Positive mechanical four-wheel brakes—easiest steering

—the perfected braking system the finest and most advanced cars of Europe and America today employ—a system regarded by the best engineering practice as the most dependable and most nearly infallible of all brakes. Easiest steering—the steering facility of this phenomenal car is literally amazing. Eight Timken bearings cradle the steering mechanism with the utmost absence of friction.

A body of marvelous beauty

Never has such beauty, such style, such smartness been approximated as is conspicuously present in this distinguished Six. While compact to the last degree, this new and advanced motor-car creation is revolutionary in its roominess and comfort. Don't fail to see this new leader among Sixes at your earliest opportunity. FROST-BITTEN COAST GUARDSMEN IMPROVE AT NEW LONDON HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 13.—Ensign Nathaniel Fulford, commander of the United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 126, which grounded on a sandbar in Narragansett Bay Wednesday night, and also together with Fred Thornhill, Anthony Simmons, Joseph Libby, John McQueen and William Mirrick, members of the crew, suffered severe frost-bites, is reported at Lawrence Memorial hospital today as resting comfortably. The condition of the men does not indicate that they will be under treatment at the institution more than a week or ten days.

Hugh Cook, of United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 127, local section base, No. 4, state pier; Mrs. Gordon Easterbrook, 815 Main street, and Mrs. Dalton Bellen and infant daughter, of 20 Summer street, patients at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Mrs. Ella Tooker Mott Johnston, widow of George W. Johnston, a former resident of New London, died this morning at her home in Oneida, N. Y. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Bertha Bramble, of Oneida, and by two brothers, Allen H., and Lewis Tooker, both of this city.

The funeral of Albert Fargo, whose sudden death of heart trouble occurred at his home, 209 Thames street, Tuesday, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at 42 Shapley street, the services being conducted by Rev. J. Homeyn Danforth. Relatives of Mr. Fargo acted as bearers. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

The funeral of Miss Lucretia Holt Chappell was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at her residence, 39 Vauxhall street and was attended by numerous mourners. Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, rector of St. James Episcopal church, conducted the services. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Leroy M. Daniels, 35, a former resident of New London, died this morning at Allingtown hospital, New Haven. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Joseph O. Barrett, of 342 Williams street, this city. Mr. Darrow was a world war veteran and because of impaired health was taken to the federal hospital where he was constantly under treatment until the end came, early this morning.

The automobile reported to the police yesterday as having been parked in the highway of Hempstead street, corner of Hope street, two days and which was removed to a garage to await being claimed by the owner, has been taken in charge by A. C. Field, 9 Hope street. Field informed the police that he parked his car Tuesday night when it became disabled and the following night a blizzard started that prevented him from moving it.

This afternoon Field was served with a warrant for his arrest charged with violation of the city's traffic laws and will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning.

An automobile owned and operated by Frank T. Philbrick 76 Golden street and a trolley car of the Groton & Stonington Traction company were in collision late last night on the New London approach to the Thames river bridge. The automobile was damaged.

A window washer informed Patrolman Thomas Lyden, shortly after 6:30 o'clock this morning that a half hour earlier and when he was passing the barber shop of Joseph Lenzo, 41 Green street, he had observed a fellow prowling about the place and using a flashlight. Officer Lyden went to the barbershop, but found the place secure and no evidence that the establishment has received the attention of crooks.

New London has spent more for clearing snow in the past week than the work of snow removal cost during all last winter. On State and Bank streets the accumulation has been almost entirely removed. Superintendent of Streets Darrow was in charge of the work and he kept men employed during the day and into the evening with all the trucks that could be secured. But the sidewalks are another thing. They are in breakneck condition away from the business center, for snow that was trampled down has become ice and no sand has been placed on the ice to protect pedestrians from falling.

There is general rejoicing among the needy over the settlement of the coal strike, for the poor were paying $20 a ton for soft coal and the very poor, who brought in bags paid $25 a ton by the hundred pounds and they had to carry what they brought away from the yards. The price has been boosted within a month. Whether a settlement of the strike will soon bring a supply of coal to the dealers is uncertain. They say that a month will elapse before they can get the coal they need to supply the trade. If that is a statement of fact there is little chance that the price now asked will be changed. Such a scarcity of coal has never been known in this city. Some of the more fortunate, who secured all the coal they could possibly used during the winter, are now allowing coal to be taken from their cellars and sold to the less fortunate.

The cold weather has created something of a scarcity of fish, for the small boats that supply the markets have been unable to get much fish for a week. Most of the fish that comes to New London is frozen and comes from the Boston market, a fact that would be unbelievable a few years ago.

A month's mind mass for Mrs. Mary Cavanaugh Skelskey, wife of Joseph Skelskey, whose death occurred at a New Britain hospital a month ago, was solemnized at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church this forenoon.

Miss Alice Eldridge, 43 Chapel street, is confined to her home as a result of a severe attack of scarlet fever.

Patrick A. Hawkins, 9 Ledyard street, is in New York, where this morning he attended the funeral of his brother, George Hawkins, whose death occurred Wednesday, and who was a former resident of New London.

Mrs. Louis Gotthelf, and infant daughter, of Norwich, and Mrs. Geo. Banks and infant son, Noank, were patients discharged today at Home Memorial hospital.

Patients discharged at Lawrence hospital late yesterday were: Mrs. William Stanton and infant daughter, of Myrtle; Miss Emily Dehta, 7 Mitchell avenue, Groton; Mrs. Edward Fiuett, 107 Main street and Miss Evelyn Burnham, Groton.

It is believed that the avoidance of the use of soft coal will abate many of the chimney fires, and they have been numerous in this city during the time householders have been compelled to resort to the use of bituminous coal or to go without heat in their homes.

The funeral of Mrs. Elisa Ugueleni, wife of Enrico Ugueleni, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was largely attended. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William J. Fitzsimons, assisted by Rev. William J. Fox, Groton, as deacon, and Rev. Alexander Wollenhaupt as sub-deacon. At the conclusion of the mass Edward F. Murray rendered Beautiful Lang on Him. The bearers were Andrea Angeleni, Nazarini Bendatti, Enrico Ferri, John Pascurel, Ipolio Bartolucci, and Romano Gramolini. Interment was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Frank Overton, 23 Grand street, was severely bitten yesterday afternoon by a police dog, owned by Daniel Casey, 5 Grand street. A complaint was lodged with the police and Dog Warden John Sweeny was assigned to cause an investigation to be made. Pending the result of the investigation the dog is being chained.

Feeble after 18 years of existence in the family circle of Harry A. Davis of 124 Ocean avenue, the family cat, Thub was humanely removed from the earth today by Humane Agent John Sweeny.

Members of the Crowley club are to entertain the Holy Name society, the Boys' Catholic club and the Boy Scouts at a communion breakfast Sunday morning, following the 8 o'clock mass at St. Mary's church. The members of the several organizations will receive holy communion in a body at that mass. The breakfast will be served at the Knights of Columbus clubhouse, which the Knights have turned over for the morning to the Crowley club. Miss Mary McCarthy is chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, and is assisted by Misses Hazel Corkey, Catherine Reidy, Olive Farrer and Mary Cranker.

MAN WHO SHOT STARLINGS WAS GIVEN A FINE OF $25

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 13.—James La Femina (Jimmy Woman) was today fined $25 in the New London police court for possessing a rifle as an alien, and with having shot several starlings, about 40 of them it is understood when the birds were attracted to his yard on Pequot avenue by food that James placed where the birds could get it. Game Warden Robert Bishop Chappell was notified that James was shooting off the birds, but the complaint was not for the protection of the starlings as it was from the fact that James had put shots into the window of a nearby garage. It was represented that La Femina cleared a path in his yard and strewed it with food for the birds. When they assembled he blazed into them with a shot gun. There were nine birds in the possession of the gunner when he was taken into custody. He pleaded guilty of the offense when in court and explained that his acts were through ignorance of the law. He said the gun was not his personal property, but was owned by a New Haven friend who came here in the fall to hunt. Jimmy represented that he shot the birds because he believed he was permitted to do so. He was absolutely frank as to what he did, and that fact brought a smaller fine that he would have received had he resisted prosecution or contended that he was guiltless of a misdemeanor. La Femina has long been a resident of this country, coming from Italy. He has been industrious and has accumulated considerable property which he takes good care of. In all his years in America James has had more court experience in the past month than he ever had. Once he has been the plaintiff when he was assaulted in the street and now he has been the defendant in the prosecution today.

Lincoln's birthday was observed only by the banks and the schools today. A few flags were in place along the business street but they were few indeed.

A SENTENCE TO CHESHIRE WALTER PERRY'S PENALTY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 13.—Walter Perry has gone over the road he must have expected to travel when he conceived the idea of obtaining money without working for it. He is in the Connecticut Reformatory at Cheshire, there to remain until such time as the authorities deem him a person who will be a safe man to have at liberty. Perry forged a check for $25, and representing that Mose Allard was the maker of the check, went to the Union Bank and Trust company to cash the slip. In that he made his mistake for the spurious character of the check was detected at once. Mr. Allard did not have an account at the bank and if he did have there were circumstances that implicated that he did not make the check he was represented by Perry to have drawn. A policeman, was secretly called to the bank, when Perry weakened and conferred that he was a fraud and a swindler. Perry is but 18. He has no work and his earnings are scant. But he says the world owes him a living and he proposes to get it anyway he can. That was his statement to the police. Perry was discreet enough when he realized the predicament he was in, to seek probation with promises of future behavior. When Judge Prince learned of circumstances he decided that the reformatory was the place for Perry and concluded that he would be taught the rudiments of useful occupation there. Probation Officer Richard Mansfield was delegated to escort Perry to Cheshire and started with him as soon as he could arrange for transportation. Perry is said by the police to be a child of circumstances. His father was prosecuted they declare, for an unnatural crime, so they argue that it was quite logical for the son to wander from the paths of proper living. Perry had a pair of new trousers and he confessed, he had stolen from a tailor shop on North Bank street.

ACCUSATIONS ARE FLYING IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 13. — Complaints continue to be sent into the police station and to the office of City Manager William A. Holt because of the failure of property owners outside the central part of the city to remove ice and snow from the walks. A woman, who refused to reveal her identity, communicated with the police this evening stating that the sidewalk at 65 Denison avenue was in a dangerous condition by reason of ice and snow. Edward Rogers, employed by Darrow and Comstock, informed the police this afternoon that the sidewalk of P. LeRoy Harwood, Ocean avenue, and the walk in front of the property of Nicholas Dana, next adjoining, together with that of Joseph Fine, had not received the attention of a snow shovel. Mr. Rogers also complained because of the condition of the sidewalks of the Wilbur and Hoare properties, Faire Harbour place; Geo. H. Miller, Ocean avenue, Rialto theatre, Bank street, and the Chappell property, corner of Huntington and Federal streets, a property complained against a day of two ago. A resident of Grove street also complains because of the alleged dangerous condition of the property on that street, owned by Frank Woodward. Mr. Harwood, following complaint being made because of the alleged condition of the sidewalk in front of his property, complained that the sidewalk in front of the property of William M. Darrow, Ocean avenue, had not been relieved of ice and snow. City Manager Holt received a complaint because the sidewalk in front of the Berry property, 1140 Ocean avenue, had not been relieved of ice and snow and Mrs. Berry complained because the avenue had not been kept open to traffic.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

PLAYING SAFE IN SEED BUYING

Common sense and good judgment dictate, as the Vermont state experiment station puts it in one of its farm bulletins:

1. That the farmer, when buying seeds, take advantage of the protection afforded by the law.

2. That he note and be guided by the purity statement on the package.

3. That he note and be guided by the weed seed statement on the package.

4. That he insist on a guaranty in case a dealer attempts to sell him seed without the statement required by law.

5. That he study the annual seed inspection bulletins and compare wholesalers' promises and performances.

6. That he buys the better grades, which usually are likely to be the least costly, not only in pure seed purchased, but in the exclusion of weed seeds.

The ideals of the state experiment station workers and of the big seed houses are the same and their advice is practically identical. Wildcat seed firms offering marvelous alleged bargains in cheap seeds have fallen under the ban of the federal trade commission, which has issued "cease and desist" orders against some of them, forbidding further operations.

The buyer can always secure tested seeds from reliable firms of established reputation, the only ones worthy of patronage. The main thing the buyer is offered in tested seeds is a ready means of determining whether it is true to name, its origin, its degree of purity, its degree of viability or germinating power, and its freedom from fungous disease.

Big seed houses are prepared through their testing laboratories to furnish this information, and all the farmer needs to do to secure it is to ask for it.

LIGHTNING RODS A REAL PROTECTION

Lightning rods, with their accompanying air terminals and ground connections when properly installed as a system on a building or other structure, give nearly complete protection from lightning.

Statistics from a state such as Iowa, where thunderstorms are frequent, show that more than 95 per cent out of each 100 buildings sustaining fire losses from lightning were not rodded. It is estimated that about 50 per cent of the farm buildings in Iowa are rodded.

Lightning rods, or more properly lightning conductors, are nearly always made of copper or heavily galvanized iron or steel, the former generally in the form of a stranded cable, the latter of star cross section twisted into a long spiral. Copper is somewhat the better in durability. Both kinds of conductor when correctly installed give satisfactory protection.

Copper conductors should weight not less than 3 ounces per foot, iron not less than 320 pounds per thousand feet, or a little over 5 ounces per foot, says the weather bureau of the United States department of agriculture.

Lightning conductors should be attached direct to the surface of a building without insulators. The air terminals to protect upward-pointing parts of the roof should be secured against overturning by the wind, and the ground connections extended downward to permanently moist soil, usually found at a depth of 8 or 10 feet below the surface. All joints should be permanently made and of low electrical resistance.

CORN AND SOYBEANS AS SILAGE CROP

The bulletin on corn and soybeans as a combination crop for silage, by W. L. Slate Jr., and B. A. Brown of Storrs Agricultural experiment station shows:

1. The results of four years' work with corn and soybeans for silage.

2. The combination produced an average increase of approximately one ton of green forage and 500 pounds of dry matter per acre over corn alone. (Average of 27 corn alone and 72 corn and soybean plots.)

3. As harvested the corn and soybean silage averaged 1.82 per cent protein and contained 670 pounds per acre, while the corn silage averaged 1.54 per cent protein and contained 550 pounds per acre. It would require 300 pounds of 40 per cent cottonseed meal to supply this difference in yields of protein.

4. The soybeans narrowed the nutritive ratio from 1:13.0 to 1:9.8 or 25 per cent (average of all tests for three years.)

5. One stalk of corn to three of beans, per twelve inches of row, has given the largest total yields of green and dry matter and protein.

6. Drilling the corn and soybeans combination is practical unless planted at the same operation with the corn; on land not weedy enough to necessitate hand hoeing, when cultivated only one way; and where a binder can be used for harvesting, has proven to be a decidedly better practice than planting both in the same hill or the beans between the hills of corn.

7. Eighteen varieties of soybeans were grown with corn for one or more years for this purpose, a stiff-stemmed reasonably tall, large yielding variety, which will have its pods two thirds filled when the corn is ready to cut, is required. Medium Green (Guelph); Hollybrook (Midwest); Swan and Wilson or similar varieties, are suggested for Connecticut.

8. The association of the soybeans did not increase the nitrogen (protein) content of the corn.

9. When grown alone, soybeans did not yield 50 per cent as much as corn. Therefore, the practice of growing the two crops separately and mixing at the silo is not recommended for our intensive Connecticut conditions.

10. The experiments reported indicate that approximately $10.00 per acre will be added to the value of the silage by planting soybeans with the corn. This sum does not warrant much increase in the cost of planting, cultivating and harvesting. Therefore, the authors do not feel that the

HOLLAND IS DEPENDENT ON EAST INDIAN WEALTH

Although Holland, living above her means is unable to afford a big navy, yet the defense of her colonies is a question of supreme gravity. The importance to Holland of its overseas possessions was emphasized recently in a speech by Prof. Treub, former finance minister and chairman of the employers' council of the Dutch East Indies.

In the Dutch archipelago, whose area is 56 times greater than that of the mother country, is a population of 50,000,000. There is invested there $1,200,000,000, three-quarters of which is Dutch and one-quarter foreign capital, on which the annual yield is about $180,000,000. About $100,000,000 is paid in dividends and royalties. Twenty per cent of these dividends accrues to the Dutch treasury.

Were Holland to lose East India her industrial and commercial life would be mortally hit.

William McGee, 65, whose home address was given as Clinton Beach, New London, died soon after he began his daily labor in a factory in New Haven. S. Grossman an elder worshipper, fell dead while at his devotions in a synagogue.

TEMPORARY INJUNCTION TO RESTRAIN WOOD CUTTING

A temporary injunction until the March term of the superior court and until further order of court was granted here Friday by Judge Allyn L. Brown in the foreclosure and wood cutting case of Frank Hoffman and wife of Sprague against Horosyn Dubko and wife of Sprague.

The defendants are enjoined from cutting or carrying away or selling any of the wood now on the farm other than that required for use as firewood on the farm by the defendants, or selling or removing any wood heretofore cut.

The suit is brought for foreclosure of a mortgage for $1,800, an injunction and damages of $600, as it is claimed the defendants have cut and sold off more than 60 cords of timber at the value of $10 a cord.

EMMET O'MERA SINGS AT UNCAS-ON-THAMES

At half past one, on Friday afternoon manager McAvoy, of the Palace theatre, Norwich, introduced Emmet O'Mera, the Irish tenor, to an audience of the patients at Uncas-on-Thames.

The main dining room was temporary concert hall, and Mr. O'Mera's little recital was received with great applause. Miss Ballou accompanied Mr. O'Mera with a fine sense of mood for each of the songs.

To the "shut-ins" of Uncas-on-Thames, such a delightful event as this is not a present enjoyment, but is something to remember and appreciate for long afterwards.

DEVELOPMENTS OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO THE FUTURE OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

GENEVA, Feb. 13—(AP)—There came to Geneva today two new political developments considered of great importance to the future of the league of nations, the reconstruction of which now appears to be inevitable.

First was the demand of Spain to have the voice of the nations who remained neutral in the great war permanently heard in the deliberations of the league council.

Second was the insistence of Brazil that until the time when the United States may decided to claim the permanent seat that is waiting for her in the council, some country of the American continents should definitely occupy it. Afranio Mello Franco, the Brazilian representative in the council told the Associated Press tonight that his country would be proud to fill America's place and that Brazil should be considered the logical candidate to hold such a position.

It is the entrance of Germany into the league of nations which has brought on these and is bound to bring other developments to alter the league's structure. They became known in the lobbies before and after the brief session of the council which was summoned to arrange the preliminaries for Germany's admission to the league and which fixed March 8 as the date for the convening of an extraordinary assembly for the formal admission of Germany.

As the date selected is that for the opening of the regular March session of the council, this means that Germany during that session will take her place on a footing of complete equality with her former enemies around the council board as a permanent member.

Those who had hopes to confine the election of permanent members to Germany alone met with failure in today's brief council session. That gathering voted that the extraordinary assembly should consider any proposal made by the March session of the council regarding its own membership. This sets in motion a vigorous scramble for places. Spain, Poland and Brazil have come out in the open with demands for permanent seats and others are likely to advance their candidacies later.

This desire for permanent places is due to the prevailing conviction that the council will wield a constantly growing influence in the settlement of international affairs. Just as Locarno sought to banish all enmity between the allies and Germany, so at Geneva today was apparent an attempt to put neutrals in the ate world conflict on the same level with belligerents. Spain maintains that as a great power and a non-belligerent is entitled to have a permanent seat in the council during the present critical period of world reconstruction so that all elements may be represented.

Senor Mello Franco declared that the world forgets too often that by the covenant of the league itself the United States is given a permanent seat in the council; that this condition will exist as long as the league exists, and that America has only to ratify the covenant to be able to walk into the council chamber and take this seat.

Brazil, as a great American nation, wanted to fill that seat temporarily, he said, but there was another mighty reason why Latin America should have a permanent voice. This, he asserted, was because while Europe, with 38 members of the league, would have four permanent seats in the council when Germany was admitted, Latin America, with nineteen members had none.

"It is true that we have two non-permanent places," he continued, "but the hazards of election may lose us these, and it is conceivable that Latin America would be without any voice whatsoever in the council. Such would be fatal indeed to the league, because it would destroy its international character."

The allocation of new permanent seats must have theu nanimous support of the present council of ten members and must be ratified by a majority of the states represented in the assembly. Therefore a period of intense canvassing on this matter is to be expected. The attitude of England is keeping all guessing, for England alone can block everything.

COURT RECEIVES ACCOUNT IN PAPER MILL BANKRUPTCY

A number of motions came before Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court at its short calendar session in New London Friday morning. The majority of cases were either continued or postponed, while one motion was granted and the court took the papers in two others.

A motion of the Westinghouse Traction Brake Co., of New York to be made party defendant was granted in the case of Anson T. McCook, treasurer of state of Connecticut, against the Groton and Stonington Street Railway Co., and others. Judge Brown also ordered that the cross complaint of the company should be filed within one week.

The judge took the papers in two motions in the case of H. G. Craig & Co., Ltd., and others, against the Uncas Paper Board Co., of this city. One was for the approval of Receiver Frank W. Browning's account from October 24, 1925, to Nov. 23, 1925, which showed a loss of $34.10 and the other was a similar motion on the receiver's account from Nov. 23, 1925 to Jan. 2, 1926. A total loss since the company has been in the hands of the receiver was given as $18,693.40 and during that time the sales of the company amounted to nearly $1,000,000.

In the same case a motion to confirm and approve the sale by the receiver to John G. G. Kerry, Toronto, Canada, pursuant to the orders of Dec. 31, 1925, and a motion for the approval of the receiver's conveyances of real and personal property to John G. G. Kerry, were both continued.

The following cases were continued: Textile Engineering Co., against Braided Thread Corp., motion to expunge; motion for more specific statement.

Textile Engineering Co., against Still; motion for more specific statement.

Textile Engineering Co., against Still and others; (1) motion to expunge; (2) with respect to answer of Braided Thread Corp.; (b) with respect to answer of G. E. Still; (3) motion for more specific statement with respect to answer of Braided Thread corporation.

The Savings Bank of New London against Ilvento and others, foreclosure and limitation of time.

The following cases went off:

Witchewski against The Falls Co., and others, appeal from compensation commissioner; judgment on the record.

Smith, administrator against Scialabba; default for failure to plead.

Edward Erskine against Lincoln motion for default.

Minnie Erskine against Lincoln; motion for default.

STATE BOYS' SECRETARY SPEAKS TO HI-Y CLUB

The Hi-Y club held the largest attended meeting in its history Friday evening at the local Y. M. C. A.—41 being present. The meeting opened with the singing of the first verse of America, and the blessing by E. H. Davis, the Boys' secretary. While supper was being served several popular songs were sung by the club. Special music was provided by the club orchestra, under the leadership of Otis Fellows.

The club was favored by several guests including Secretary Leonard Hill of Windham county and two boys from Putnam, and Danielson, Theodore Montgomery, and F. A. Stanley, state boys secretary from New Haven.

A short business meeting was presided over by President Frank Mousley. Following the business meeting, President Mousley presented F. A. Stanley, who gave the club a splendid talk on the essentials of choosing rightly for the future. Every fellow present will long remember the splendid advice given by Mr. Stanley.

At the close of Mr. Stanley's talk, preparation was made for the using of the Hi-Y induction ceremony on the following new members, Roy Carpenter, Ronald Royce, Courtney Rasmussen, Douglas Fellows, and Ray Brown. This ceremony proved to be a very impressive affair. The meeting came to a close with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

In addition to the vaudeville bill at the Palace today featuring Emmet Omera the Irish tenor who has been pleasing large audiences with his new ballads, the theatre will have its second qualifying Charleston Contest for the kiddies this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The feature picture is the Splendid Crime with Babe Daniels.

Bebe Daniels plays the star feminine role in this Paramount picture, but her wardrobe costs less than one tenth of that worn by Anne Cornwall, who is one of the principal supporting players.

Bebe appears in the story as a droll young girl crook and not an affluent one, either. Miss Cornwall, as a wealthy society debutante, has an opportunity to wear a number of fashionable creations turned out by the Paramount designers.

Neil Hamilton and Anthony Jowitt are the other important members of the cast in "The Splendid Crime," which was not only directed by William de Mille but written by him as well. Violet Clark adapted the tale to the screen.

Chevrolet Cars

An unprecedented winter demand for Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks necessitated a production last month nearly three times that of January, 1925, it is announced by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company.

The January production was more than 44,000, which eclipses any previous January production in Chevrolet history. Under the tentative February production schedule the company will build more than 61,000 units or nearly twice the number produced in the corresponding month of last year.

The heavy winter production is the result of demand which Chevrolet buyers have made upon the company's dealers since the announcement by President Knudsen of reduced prices and numerous improvements on the entire Chevrolet line.

Instead of storing reserve stocks against the requirements of spring business, the dealers report that they are delivering immediately their shipment of cars to waiting buyers.

Last year the Chevrolet Motor company led all manufacturers of three-speed sliding-transmission cars by building more than 500,000 units. According to present plans, President Knudsen expects to exceed the 1925 record by a comfortable margin.

Coming to the Palace

A certain man had two sons. And the younger of them said to his father, 'Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me.'"

—From the Bible

The younger son is Jether, lithe, handsome and a dreamer. Watching his flocks, he sees a caravan from Babylon pass the farm. Mounted on an elephant's back is the ravishingly beautiful Tisha. She smiles. Jether falls. Egged on by Tisha's companion, the evil Tola, Jether gets his share of his inheritance from his rich father and journeys with the caravan to the wicked Babylon.

Jether for a time basks in the warm love of Tisna. But he loses his money in gambling and riotous living. Pharis, a big butter and egg man from the sea, wins Tisha away from him with jewels and gold. A bearded prophet roams the streets of Babylon predicting that this, the wickedest city in the world, will be destroyed by the hand of God. A great feast is held at the pagan love palace of Tisha. In the midst of it, lightning flashes, thunder roars, the great columns of the palace crash down. In a few minutes the whole great city, in a series of tremendously spectacular scenes, is in ruins. Jether, spared because he would not worship the pagan gods, flees, ragged, broke and hungry, to the desert.

For weeks he wanders more dead than alive, in the wilderness. At last he reaches home. His big-hearted mother takes him into her arms. His stern father, at first refusing to forgive, relents and orders the fatted calf to be killed. Naomi, Jether's boyhood sweetheart, comes back to him.

Coincidence is the antiquated plea of the plagiarist.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Laughter and romance mingle freely in "Tessie," a comedy drama which comes to the screen of the Broadway Theatre on Sunday. May McAvoy is the star, portraying a cute little hotel girl employed at the candy and cigar counter, who helps her auto-salesman fiance along in business until he makes a ten strike with a rich widow, and lifts her. Tessie, in revenge, accepts the attentions of the widow's son and a most intriguing set of complications develop.

May McAvoy is said by the critics in general to be at her very best in the role of Tessie and well supported, with Bobby Agnew, Myrtle Steadman, Lee Moran and Gertrude Short appearing in important parts.

Tessie's suitors were many but she was faithful to one until he played her false. Then, she took a woman's revenge, and vamped the son of the widow her unreliable fiance fell for and Tessie still says "A pessimist is a man who wears suspenders and a belt."

The second feature on the program is equally as fast and alive with action. This features that popular western star Buddy Roosevelt in "Thundering Thru." A comedy and Kinograms make up the remaining features.

Watch for Monday's big doings with local favorites doing their stuff.

Hillcrest Theatre

Possibly the biggest announcement ever made by the Hillcrest Theatre is the coming of the Swanee Minstrel with a large chorus of 56 people on the nights of Monday, Feb. 15 and Tuesday, Feb. 16.

The Swanee Minstrel under the supervision of Director Daniel O'Brien, is one of the best productions put on the stage by local talent this season.

The Swanee Minstrel under the auspices of the Junior Catholic Council played to a packed house at the Strand Theatre and was accorded one of the biggest hits of the season.

Along with the Minstrel is Thumm's Celebrated Orchestra which needs no introduction to the people of these parts, in Jazziand, featuring Henry Reardon, the Charleston King of Norwich.

Among some of the talent, is the Harmony Four which consists of: Walter LaFontaine, Louis Grover, John Kelly and Paul Driscoll, also Warren Kane the popular tenor.

With the Minstrel is the Paramount Special, A Night in a Cabaret. The Picture starts at 8:45, Minstrel 8:15. One show each night.

The management of the Hillcrest Theatre is to be congratulated for bringing to Taftville a production as the Swanee Minstrel which goes to show, that the management is out to offer to the people of Taftville the best that the stage affords in the vaudeville line at a smaller price than can be seen elsewhere.

Abraham Lincoln in Moving Pictures at Y. M. C. A. Sunday

Appropriate to the occasion the management of the Norwich Young Men's Christian Association has arranged to show a special feature moving picture of Abraham Lincoln; this episode in the life of the great American will be portrayed in four large reels, Benjamin Chapin being the man to assume the personality of the Martyr President. This picture shows with strong sentiment and in a most dramatic way the log cabin birth of "the Son of Democracy," the gentle influence of Lincoln's mother, developing the boy who became President; there are some rollicking scenes of boy life and homely humor in the pitiful efforts of Abe's father to learn to read and write. The title of the above episode is "My Mother." Another chapter of Lincoln's life to be portrayed is titled, "Under the Stars." This is a powerful and inspiring photoplay of patriotism, establishing the character of the great man by intimate scenes in his home life amid crisis after crisis, and problem after problem. The deep impression made by this wonderful screen story of Mr. Lincoln has always made a most profound impression.

In addition to the feature picture on Lincoln, a beautiful scenic picture entitled "A tramp through Yosemite" will be shown. This includes splendid views of Yosemite National Park, such as the Bridal Veil Falls, Wawona Tunnel Tree, Nevada and Vernal Falls, Cathedral spires, etc., etc.

Not only will the pictures be inspiring, but a treat in speech awaits the audience, in the person of Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, who has consented to give a brief address on "Abraham Lincoln." Mr. Ricketts always pleases his audiences and this will be no exception.

The public is invited, though boys and girls under fourteen must be accompanied by parent or guardian. The doors will be opened at 3:30 and the service will begin promptly at 4 o'clock.

The February meeting of the Norwich College club and the Norwich Branch of the American Association of University Women will be held Monday Feb. 15th at 3 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Stanley M. Kingsbury at 305 Washington street. Mrs. A. N. Foster will speak on England As I Saw It; Mrs. W. C. Burgy will be the soloist.

Breed Theatre

Ultra modernism as practiced in London society—quite the last word on the subject—is revealed in all its wildness in "We Moderns," the new First National offering to open at the Breed theater Sunday.

The new play of hectic high life among Britain's post-war youth brings back to the screen Colleen Moore in the type of characterization for which she is best known. For the space of two productions Miss Moore appeared in most artistically sedate roles which demonstrated her great versatility. But her admirers continued to demand jazz—so in the coming production it's a plain case of "on with the dance."

Colleen is reported to give an electrifying performance and to have the support of an ideal cast, with Jack Mulhall as her leading man.

Pictorial value is added to the picture by its goregeous background of actual London, as many scenes were made across the big pond.

A stirring Zeppelin crash in mid-air is effected, it is said, with startling realism.

The picture was produced by John McCormick.

Lyceum Theater, New London

"The Rivals," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, with the all-star cast comes to the Lyceum, New London, Wednesday Feb. 17, matinee and night.

The cast includes Mrs. Fiske as Mrs. Malaprop, Thomas A. Wise as Sir Anthony Absolute, James T. Powers as Bob Acres, Brandon Tynan as Sir Lucius O'Trigger, Lotus Robb as Lydia Languish, Jean Ford as Julia, Marie Carroll as Lucy, Donn Cook as Captain Absolute, Fred Eric as Faulkland, Gerald Rogers as Fag, Burlowe Borland as David, and Herbert Belmore as Thomas. "The Rivals," is one of three comedies which are the only survivors of the thousands written between the death of Shakespeare and 1890 which in any sense can be considered favorites of the stage of today. "The School for Scandal," by Sheridan, is the second, and "She Stoops to Conquer," by Oliver Goldsmith, the third. Sheridan's wit, humor and racy spirit live today because he wrote, not for a day but for all time. The text of the play used in the present production is approximately as Sheridan wrote it, the restoration by Harrison Grey Fiske, after comparison with various prompt books of celebrated actors, being virtually complete.

Undoubtedly this is a combination of the most distinguished dramatic artists of this country, who are presented in a comedy that has charmed the theatrical world for a century and a half. America may not again witness such an illustrious agregation in many years to come.

Expenditure by the New Haven railroad of more than $1,000,000 will be necessary to rehabilitate the Springfield trolley system.

TAFTVILLE

About 65 men attended the regular monthly meeting of the Men's club of the Taftville Congregational church, held Thursday evening in the vestry of the church. James B. Jackson was song leader, and James Heap was pianist. As the meeting was in observance of Lincoln's birthday, there was chorus singing of old time Southern melodies and Civil war songs. There were also vocal solos by Mr. Jackson and Thomas Grimshaw.

Rev. Edwin Gordon Crowdis, president of the club, called the meeting to order and stated that General William A. Aiken, of Norwich, who was to have been the speaker of the evening, was unable to attend because of sudden illness, but that he had been fortunate in securing a man as a speaker, who was no stranger to the members, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church.

Rev. Mr. Ricketts said that he shared the disappointment of the club members in not being able to have General Aiken with them as he could give them a very unique address, having been personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln. Taking for his theme, The Moral Grandeur of Lincoln, Rev. Mr. Ricketts likened him to Asa, one of the kings of Judah in Old Testament times. Just as King Asa believed that the kingdom could not exist with one-half the people worshipping idols and the other half worshipping Jehovah, so Abraham Lincoln believed that the Union could not long exist half slave and half free.

He called the members' attention to four great points in the life of Lincoln; first, his ability to rise above poverty; second, his refusal to be classified with incompetents and nonentities; third, the emphasis he put upon Americanism, and fourth, his exposition of political freedom. He stated that he believed that it was equally as bad to be born very poor as to be born very wealthy. He pointed out that Lincoln's family was not as poor as people generally suppose. True, life in the middle west in those pioneer days was rugged and beset with dangers, but there is no record of any evidence of the squalor and abject poverty that might be found in many of our tenement districts today.

When called to the presidential chair, there was one object in which he outpointed many of the cleverest statesmen of the times, and that object was Americanism. Patriotism in him was a passion, both inbred and acquired. Rev. Mr. Ricketts said that he firmly believed that Abraham Lincoln was called by God as the Great Emancipator, just as Moses had been called in Midian to lead the children of Israel out of bondage.

Speaking of the heritage that Lincoln had passed on to us, Rev. Mr. Ricketts said that we should insist on freedom of speech, but not license of speech; that all treasonable utterances should be adequately dealt with; that we should work against illiteracy and the bolshevism and communism that is rampant in Russia today. We should be careful about over-emphasizing the racial question. Let a nation live by itself for a thousand years and it will go to pieces. It is one of the laws of nature that there must be infusion of new blood.

He stated that we should treat kindly the stranger within our gates; we should make them our friends; that we should guard against over-centralization in congress, always keeping in mind that the 48 states of the Union must be forever 48 sovereign states. All violations of the law should be put down. If there is anything wrong with the constitution, take it out. If it is right, leave it there and obey it.

At the conclusion of his talk, Rev. Mr. Ricketts was given a rising vote of thanks and the meeting came to a close with the singing of two verses of America. During the social hour that followed, refreshments of ham sandwiches, cheese sandwiches, cake, ice cream and coffee were served and a smoker was enjoyed. The committee in charge of the evening were Albert J. Aberg, J. Edward Hilding, Edwin Mesp, Richard B. Snow, Harold E. Linderson, Albert Bardsley, Frederick Meyer, Archibald Torrance, Jr., and Joseph E. Heselton.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Seddon, of 10 South B. street, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elsie Seddon, to Ernest Gottlieb Stranz, on Wednesday, February 10th., in London, England. The at home cards read 154 Cholmley Gardens, Hampstead, London, N. W. 6, after April 1st.

Bernard Hasler and his daughter, Miss Mary Hasler, of 34 Providence street, left town Friday morning for New Orleans, La., to attend the mardi gras. While there they will be the guests of Mr. Hasler's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Brown.

Following an old established custom, valentine boxes were opened and their contents distributed at the Wequonnoc school, Friday.

Sale of carnival goods, blankets, etc., at cost. Army-Navy clubrooms, 1 to 4 p. m., or evenings.—adv.

The Taftville fire company, No. 2, Louis Paquette, chief, responded to a call at 11.15 o'clock Thursday evening for a chimney fire in the Army and Navy club rooms, on Dion street. The blaze was found to be in the chimney outside of the building, which is owned by the St. Louis society, and five gallons of chemical were used to extinguish the flames. Soft coal was attributed as the cause of the blaze. There was no damage.

WORLD COURT LUNCHEON WITH INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESSES GIVEN

Two speakers, Rev. Dr. Charles F. Carter, pastor of Immanuel Congregational church, Hartford, and Mrs. Florence L. C. Kitchelt of New Haven, made addresses that were very instructive at the World Court luncheon held at noon Friday at the Wauregan hotel under the auspices of a local committee. There was attendance of about 100, the event making a semi-public observance of Lincoln's birthday.

Rev. A. N. Foster, pastor of the Universalist church, chairman of the local committee, served as toastmaster and introduced Rev. Dr. Carter as the first speaker.

In introducing Dr. Carter, the toastmaster said that the meeting was to consider what America may do in time of peace to prevent the recurrence of war with its waste and its horrors. The question was pertinent when the Kaiser challenged the world. It is not less pertinent when an Italian dictator speaks in strident and imperial tones for we have witnessed in the last dozen years that international war means world war.

America offers two contributions. One is in history. The example of the policy of sovereign states within a federal union where inter-state war would be intolerable.

We chance to meet on Lincoln's birthday. Abraham Lincoln is an exponent before the world of federated government on a larger scale than was ever seen before. The Americans of Lincoln's day had courage. They dared to assume risks that they might meet the opportunity for ever enlarging service to humanity. They decided, before the world, that the federal union of sovereign states should permanently endure and that citizenship in such union should not be hedged about with racial exclusion. That was a great triumph and the logic of their policy inevitably leads in the development of society, to world federation.

The other possible contribution America makes is to be found in current legislation. Three years ago President Harding urged America's entrance into the world court as a part of our foreign policy. To many people that seemed the "irreducable minimum" of our international duty.

Now the United States senate by a non-partisan, two-thirds majority vote has passed the world court bid and the matter is before the consideration of the 48 other member nations of the world court for acceptance.

Explains World Court

Making reference to Lincoln's birthday as a day of great patriotic significance, Rev. Dr. Carter went on to speak of the world court as follows in part:

"The court consists of a body of eminent jurists, 11 in number, with 4 deputies, who pass judgment on such questions of international moment as may be submitted to them. These judges are chosen from a list nominated by the members of the Hague Court of Arbitration, each nation being allowed to nominate 4 candidates only, 2 of whom shall be from its own nation. This list is presented to the council and to the assembly of the league of nations, and the judges are chosen by unanimous vote of both bodies. The term of office is nine years.

These judges are responsible to no one and to no nation, save in their independent position to maintain the ideals of an impartial tribunal. The function of this court is to hear and pass judgment on such cases of international consequence as may be presented to it. It has, however, no power to hale before it any offending member. Automatically, certain questions would be presented to it through the league of nations, involving disputes between its members, who by the fact of the membership, have agreed in advance to such adjudication. More specifically and voluntarily and entirely apart from any action of the league, two nations may agree between themselves to submit any question to the court. Besides this, the court may render an advisory opinion on any question which either the council or the assembly of the league deems of sufficient public importance.

In its decisions the court is to be guided by the conventions and treaties existing between the nations in dispute, by the general body of international law and by the growing usage of international affairs. It has no fully formulated code. It is not a law-making body, but an interpreter of legal custom, applying the accredited principles of justice to cases as they arise.

This court is created and maintained by the action of the nations adhering to it. The league of nations furnished the available machinery for the selection of judges, but the court has been constructed by the independent action of the 48 nations adhering to it. In this respect of may be regarded as a clearing-house of international treaties. Within three years 18 cases have been brought to it, six judgments having been rendered and 12 advisory opinions.

United States' Conditions

The United States proposes to enter the court under five conditions specified in the Harding-Coolidge reservations and modified by recent action.

1. This adherence shall not involve any legal relation to the league of treaty of Versailles.

2. The United States shall participate in the selection of judges on equal terms with the other nations.

3. It shall pay its fair share of expenses, this to be determined by the United States senate.

4. The statute for the court shall not be amended without the consent of the United States, and the United States may withdraw at any time.

5. This nation is not to be found by advisory opinions on questions not voluntarily submitted for action and it is not to submit any question providing for such action by treaty.

Further declarations were made providing that the United States should not enter the court until the other members shall have agreed to these reservations, and also, reaffirming the policy involved in the Monroe doctrine.

Five Presidents for It

This instrument of world order has its roots in American statesmanship. It is significant that our five latest presidents have been in favor of it—Coolidge, with his canny and cautious judgment as to the will of the people: Harding, with the sagacious mind of a politician; Wilson, steeped in international history and with a forward looking mind; Taft, the embodiment of the judicial temper and legal procedure; Roosevelt, with a grasp of comprehensive vision and the energy of practical statesmanship. The combination of judgment is impressive. This nation has taken a constructive part in the steps leading to the formation of the world court. Elihu Root in 1907, bore instructions which easily might have issued in the formation of such a body, had there been a method readily available for the impartial choice of judges. Grant the warrior, and Lincoln, to whom nothing human was alien, set their faces in this same direction. The elder statesmen, Franklin, Samuel Adams, Jefferson, William Penn, looked toward such an undertaking. Washington in 1788, wrote to Lafayette: 'Would to God the harmony of nations were an object that lay nearest to the hearts of sovereigns.' This deep desire of the Father of his Country may well be taken to heart and coupled with his over emphasized caution toward entangling alliances. John Jay, in 1794, negotiated with England, the first international treaty of arbitration, under whose impulse more than 600 international disputes have been settled.

In The Right Direction

The proposal of the United States senate as now made, somewhat reluctantly and tardily, is simply and yet significantly a step in the right direction. It will help to meet the world's most crying needs. It is a pledge of deference to law, an expression of international confidence in the right. The world is becoming a community vitally interrelated. A British statesman said after the outbreak of the World war, 'We had machinery for quick peace.' The world court will present one factor of the machinery for deliberate peace. Human nature is so constituted that the deeper and worthier motives tend to operate if the superficial and baser impulses are given time to subside.

Three steps appear in human progress. An ideal arises above the horizon. It is hailed as beautiful but impossible of realization, then as its light grows clearer, it becomes desirable. The world gets along badly without it and catches the vision of new life under its guidance. It then appears inevitable and essential. The organization of the world under principles of justice and by impartial methods is a great enterprise, in which we are beginning to share. The international mind is growing, and a new order of mankind is at hand.

Mrs. Kitchelt Speaks

Mrs. Kitchelt, when introduced by the toastmaster told of her visit recently to the Hague and the peace palace where the World Court holds its sessions.

Founded on American traditions, an American judge among its famous eleven, yet the United States is not a member of the court, she said. The question of our adherence never has been allowed to come before the senate for a vote. For the first time a date was set for its discussion, Dec. 17.

In answer to questions about the connection of the court with the League of Nations, Mrs. Kitchelt stated that there is no organic connection; they are as separate as our congress and supreme court. The world court functions under a special statute. Nations may belong to the court and not to the league, and they may belong to the league and not to the court.

No controversy is brought before the court except with the consent of both parties. However, there is an obligatory clause, optional, which about 23 nations have signed.

The republican party platform affirms that "we endorse the Permanent Court of International Justice and favor the adherence of the United States to this tribunal as recommended by President Coolidge." The democratic platform is similar.

To Be Vice President

Mrs. Kitchelt is a member of the state board of the Connecticut Branch of the League of National Non-Partisan association, Arthur E. Story of Norwich is the vice president of the Conn. L. N. N. P. A., its president being George J. Bassett of New Haven. Mr. Story's name will come up for election at the Feb. 17 meeting of the board of directors to be held in Hartford.

DIRECTS INSURER TO PAY DOCTOR'S BILLS

Lack of co-operation between insurer and assured, says Compensation Commissioner J. J. Donohue in a finding just made upon allowance of a physician's bill, does not constitute any reasonable excuse for delay in paying promptly medical bills when services have been promptly and efficiently rendered.

The bills in question were those presented by Dr. F. M. Dunn of New London for medical services to two employes of the J. N. La Pointe Co., of New London and The Stacey Mfg. Co of Ohio, both of which were insured by the Zurich General Accident & Liability Ins., Co. The commissioner directs that the bills of the doctor, amounting to $275.90 be paid forthwith. Their dates ran from June 1923 to August 1924.

Moreover, the commissioner's opinion says that an itemized bill with full details as to nature and extent of injury in the opinion of the commissioner constitutes a sufficiently full and detailed report to an insurer to bring about a prompt adjustment of all compensation claims for medical treatment; and should result in an early payment of a medical bill when so rendered in order to carry out both the letter and spirit of the compensation act. "This paragraph is inserted in my finding for the purpose of serving as an explanation of the requirements of the act and also as a reply to the insurer's letter from their home office in New York city to the undersigned under date of Jan. 15, 1926, as it is found that the claimant has complied with all the requirements of the act as to furnishing the insurer and employers in these particular cases all the details necessary or requested in regard to his bills and services rendered in these cases.

The finding covers the payment of doctor's bill for services to the following: J. N. LaPointe Co., employes—Byron Vine, June 8, 1923, $14; Ray McHenry, Nov. 24, 1923, $5; Stacey Co. employes—John Erickson, April 25, 1924, $29; Edward Quinn, April 6, 1924 $22; Dominick Ardissimo, June 16, 1924, $35; James M. Corby, July 2, 1924, $8; Robert Reynolds, July 10, 1924, $14; Thomas Lynch, July 18, 1924, $16.95; Thomas Sutero, July 25, 1924, $15; Albert Hidd, July 27, 1924, $22.95; Barnett Costello, July 25, 1924, $32; Tudor Carlson, August 16, 1924, $8; Van Tellanot, June 26, 1924, $5.

ATTEMPT TO SECURE UNIFORM MOTOR LAWS

A further attempt in the direction of securing uniformity of legislation, regulation, statistics and practices affecting motor vehicle administration throughout the United States will be made at a second national conference on street and highway safety which has been called by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover to be held in Washington, March 23, 24 and 25. Commissioner Stoeckel of the Connecticut motor vehicle department, who attended the first conference, last year, has accepted an invitation of Secretary Hoover to be present at the second one.

These national conferences, attended by leading authorities on motor vehicle regulation from all over the country, are predicated on the common object of all the members to make the public highways safer, wherever they may be, and reduce the totals of motor vehicle fatalities. "The flow of street and highway traffic recognizes no political boundaries," according to a resolution adopted by the last conference, "and cannot be hampered by changing principles of control, even though local conditions may dictate the necessity for local changes, of detail without creating that confusion and uncertainty which is in itself a menace to the safety of motorist and pedestrian alike."

It is because "the growth of our population, the growth of industry, the growth in complexity of our civilization itself demands of the American people a far wider degree of co-operation than today if we are to continue to progress" that Secretary Hoover is encouraging motor vehicle administrators to get together in this work. "In those days when there were about three men in a county," he points out, "they seldom rubbed elbows, but today when we have as many as seven million in a county we are confronted with a multitude of problems that can be solved alone by intelligent co-operation of the entire community."

Workmen's Compensation

The following workmen's compensation agreement has been approved by Commissioner J. J. Donohue:

Connecticut Co., New Haven, employer, and H. E. Savage, 106 Smith Ave., Norwich, employe, wrenched shoulder muscles, Jan. 30, at rate of $30.24.

RELIEF CORPS PROGRAMME FOR LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Moody appointed as a committee to look into Americanization work, Mrs. M. Florence Dean, Mrs. Grace Fowler, Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury, Mrs. Lela Bjurstrom.

Several articles were read concerning the trouble at Noroton. It is hoped that the present committee may be able to solve the problem.

Mrs. Dean, chairman of the executive committe, appointed her assistants, Mrs. Grace Fowler, Mrs. Annie Wilson, Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury, Mrs. Susan Kampf, Mrs. Clara Burke, Mrs. Althea Brown, Mrs. Audrey Baker, Mrs. Annie Turner, Mrs. Elizabeth Risley and Grace Manning. Mrs. Annie L. The meeting closed with the salute to the flag and the singing of America.

SILVERTONE QUARTETTE TO SING HERE ONCE MORE

When the Silvertone Male Quartette of New London sang two weeks ago in the Central Baptist church, the congregation voted to ask them to return for another evening's engagement. They are therefore to sing Sunday evening, February 14th and since this will probably be the last time they will be available for a service this winter a very large audience is anticipated. The personnel of the quartette is: David Merritt Carlyle, 1st tenor; Rodney Rogers Carlyle, 2nd Tenor, Charles Rodney Carlyle, baritone; William Desmond Taylor, bass. "Jesus and a Man's Past" will be the pastor's message. Special delegations from Cliff street and the Central District will occupy the center sections of the auditorium.

NORWICH TOWN

Ralph H. Marsh, vice president of Norwich Christian Endeavor union, is to have charge of the Sunday afternoon service at the Sheltering Arms. He will be assisted by the choir of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Greeneville.

Today (Saturday) under the supervision of Frederic H. Wyant, district agent of the Connecticut Humane society, about a dozen boys from Troop No. 20, Boy Scouts of Norwich Town, are to cover several localities in this section of Norwich and distribute grain provided for the winter birds by the Fish and Game Club, through the Yantic Grain Co. The scouts expect to cover Canterbury Turnpike, Scotland Road and Plain Hill, seeking out places where there may possibly be bare ground; also searching for evergreen trees, etc., under which the grain will be strewn in case the birds visit there.

The high drifts of snow by the roadside and in fields will make the journey a hard one for the scouts, who covering the route scheduled, are in all probability it will be an allday experience, shoveling away the snow to accomplish their plan. This group of ambitious lads has received good training by their scout leader, Mr. Wyant, and are ever on the alert to do anything for a worthy cause.

Troop No. 20, is the only troop holding out of door meetings. At the scout cabin on Mediterranean Lane, the scouts have been obliged to shovel much snow, covering several hundred feet all up hill, in order to make a path to their cabin where the meetings are held.

The Catholic Women's club met Friday afternoon at St. Patrick's church to sew for charity. Mrs. Thomas J. O'Rourke, the president was in charge. Members brought back eleven blouses completed during the week.

RAILROADS ARE READY FOR TRANSPORTATION OF COAL

Within 24 Hours After the Miners' Convention Adjourns Coal Will Be on the Way to Market—Producing Companies Announce That There Will Be No Increase Over the Normal Winter Price at the Mines—Retail Price of Early Shipments Will Depend on the Demand and Conscience of the Retailer.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—(AP)—Ratification of the five year agreement between the operators and miners on Tuesday or Wednesday this week will see the longest and costliest strike that has ever occurred in the anthracite fields pass into history as one of the world's greatest industrial struggles. Tomorrow marks exactly five and a half months since the wheels in the hard coal fields ceased to revolve but the much sought after fuel will be moving toward eager consumers before the end of the week.

Tuesday morning the several hundred delegates representing the army of 158,000 mine workers will meet at Scranton to place the seal of approval upon the agreement reached in Philadelphia on Lincoln's birthday. Ratification is a foregone conclusion, according to the mine workers, as no peace pact ever agreed to by their leaders has been rejected by the men from the pits. Governor Pinchot has been invited to address the convention on the day it convenes.

The day after the agreement is ratified colliery whistles will blow in all the valleys of the coal fields. They will not only summon eager men to work but also will herald the dawn of prosperity after the long, dark period of idleness in many communities.

By tomorrow night all the delegates will have been elected and instructed by their local unions. Some leaders among the miners would like to see the convention conclude its work in one day. However, a tri-district convention is a sovereign body and every delegate is privileged to have his say.

The terms of the agreement entered into will be explained by the national and district officers and it is expected they will be asked many questions from the floor to clarify the pact in the minds of the men.

While the delegates are completing the record of the titanic struggle, the coal companies, railroads and other agencies that figure in the moving of coal to market will make rapid strides in preparing for the resumption of mining. Railroads are already moving cars to the collieries and within 24 hours after the convention adjourns coal will be on the way to market.

Producing companies have announced there will be no increase over the normal winter price in selling the fuel at the mines. What the retail price of the early shipments will be will depend entirely on the demand and conscience of the retailer.

Peak production is expected to be reached by the end of the month. Some mines will run short handed because many of the workers left the coal regions during the suspension.

Pay days in the coal fields will begin to come early in March. Most coal companies pay their employes twice a month.

The invitation to Governor Pinchot, signed by the three district presidents of the United Mine Workers was as follows:

"Peace in the anthracite mining region will be ratified by the representatives of the mine workers at a tri-district convention which convenes in town hall, Scranton, Tuesday, February sixteenth.

"The feeling of elation attendant upon the satisfactory termination of this great industrial struggle is shared not only by the one hundred fifty-eight thousand mine workers in the anthracite fields, but also by the one hundred thousand members of the United Mine Workers of America in the bituminous mining sections of Pennsylvania.

"As governor of Pennsylvania you maintained through nearly eight months of negotiation and strike the most keen personal and official interest and diligently devoted your time, enegy and brilliant talents to the problem of bringing about an honorable peace. The high courage displayed by you in making known to the public at large the essential facts of the great controversy in the face of bitter and adverse criticism has rarely been equalled by any figure in our national life. Your constructive service to the public interest sets a new high standard of American statesmanship.

"In consideration of these facts the undersigned accredited representatives acting with due authority and speaking in the name of the quarter of a million members of the United Mine Workers of America in Pennsylvania cordially invite you to attend and address the six hundred delegates of the tri-district convention in Scranton on Tuesday. While we are mindful of the many exacting legislative and public duties now devolving upon you we are hopeful that you can arrange affairs so as to permit of the acceptance of this invitation.

COUNT SALM SAW HEIR, DIDN'T WISH TO SEE WIFE

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 14.—(AP)—The first meeting between Count Ludwig Salm Hoogstraeten and his eighteen months old son, Peter Conetantin, ended in a squabble this afternoon between the detectives guarding the child and the Salm forces.

After a short argument during which Baby Peter's wails blended with the sobs of the count's mother, the detectives and nurse took the baby back to the residence of the Countess Millicent.

One of the detectives remained in the car and the other two fended off photographers as the baby was taken into the hotel lobby. While one of the detectives was inquiring as to the count's room, the baby was seated on the hotel desk.

No one in the hotel lobby paid particular attention to the child who clapped his hands and gazed keenly about.

Detective Griffin of the countess' retinue, the nurse and the baby then went into the count's room.

The count did not waste time greeting his heir. He and his mother conversed in German and then the count strenuously objected to the presence of the detective. He did not object to the presence of the nurse.

In turn, the detective objected to allowing the count to see the child in his room, offering to meet him some place on the hotel grounds.

"Here are my papers," said the count. "They permit me to see the child in my hotel. If I can't see my son in my own room, I don't want to see him.

"I have not come down to see the mother. I don't give a damn about seeing her. But I want to see my son. It's the child I came to see."

14 SPANISH PRESTS WERE DEPORTED FROM MEXICO

HAVANA, Feb. 14.—(AP)—Fourteen Spanish priests, deported from Mexico aboard the steamer Espagne, arrived here last night, were denied permission to land in Cuba today by the immigration authorities. The priests were sent from Mexico under the articles of the constitution providing that priests must be native born Mexicans.

Efforts of influential residents of Havana to arrange for the priests' debarkation failed, the immigration department announcing that no exceptions could be made as the regulations were very clear in forbidding the landing of non-residents of Cuba who had been expelled from another country. The Espagne will leave for Spain late tonight.

DAIRY PRODUCTS BROUGHT $2,700,000,000 LAST YEAR

CHICAGO, Feb. 14—(AP)—Farmers realized nearly as much from their dairy cows last year as from their corn and wheat crops together, according to the National Dairy Council report issued today.

The 1925 total value of dairy products is estimated at nearly $2,700,000,000, or within a quarter billion of the total farm value of both wheat and corn. The two grains yielded a total value to the farmer estimated by the government of $2,904,363,000.

REV. EMPRINGHAM SPOKE ON THE VOLSTEAD ACT

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Feb. 14—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. James Empringham, head of the Church Temperance society, whose recent report that the society was in favor of modification of the Volstead act stirred up a controversy that swept the country, spoke today in St. Andrew's Episcopal church. His subject was "the modification of the Volstead act in the interest of temperance and morality."

He said that although he himself had been a total abstainer since childhood he believed the law should be modified to permit light wine and beer for the good of the whole people. He thought that alcohol used in moderation is beneficial, becoming harmful only when used to excess.

"Under present conditions," he asserted, "the only person benefited by the traffic is the bootlegger."

MEXICO CITY CONVENT AND COLLEGE CLOSED

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 14—(AP)—One convent in Mexico City and a convent and a college at Coyoacan have been closed, in line with the declared intention of the Mexican government to enforce the constitution absolutely. This means the deportation of all foreign Catholic priests, but whether nuns will be deported has not been stated.

Many of the nuns in other institutions went to the Spanish legapon, where the minister promised to make efforts to arrange for their departure from the country, if necessary, without depertation.

Hanged Himself After Attacking Stepchild

No Explanation Given For Assault Made by 40 Year Old Farmer on 15 Year Old Stepdaughter.

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Feb. 14—(AP)—Failing in his attempt to commit suicide by slashing his throat with a razor which he had used in an attack on his 15 years old step-daughter, Albertus J. Walker, 40, a farmer, living at Staffordville, near here, killed himself this afternoon by hanging from a beam in the barn on his property. The girl, Estelle Squires, is in a serious condition suffering from loss of blood from cuts on her throat. Physicians expect her to recover.

No explanation for the attack which occurred while the girl was feeding stock on the place, had been made tonight. Vera, 8, her sister, witnessed the affair.

Walker lived with his mother and the two girls on the farm which is onn one of the main roads to Worcester. His wife, whom he married four years ago, died last March. Their two year old daughter died about the same time Recently his father died.

When Estelle and her sister returned from Sunday school today, their step-father ordered the older girl to feed the cattle. While she was carrying out his orders, the farmer told her to feed the horses. As she was about to comply with this request, Walker, according to Vera, jumped on the girl's back and then cut her throat.

The younger girl, running to the road, summoned help from passing motorists. Meantime Walker disappeared. Finally in the motorcar brought the injured girl and her sister to the Johnson Memorial hospital, here. State police were notified by hospital authorities.

As the police reached the barn, Walker's mother, who is 76, entered the building and saw the body the same moment the police did. She had been upstairs and had not seen the attack. Her first intimation that something was wrong was the discovery of blood in the back yard.

Mrs. Walker said that shortly before her son had talked to her and had said something about not seeing her again. The aged woman had paid little attention to his remarks, she told police.

The medical examiner after viewing the body, ordered it cut down from the beam and taken to an undertaker The younger girl was suffering somewhat from shock.

DEVIL INDUCED HER TO STEAL FEMININE FINERY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—(AP)—Pleading that "the devil took me by the hand and walked me into the store" where she is alleged to have obtained feminine finery in exchange for a worthless $153 check, Mrs. Ruth Ruickholdt broke down in court today. She tearfully begged that the husband who had been ruined by her operations, Dr. William Ruickholdt of Derby, Conn., be notified of her plight and asked to come to her aid.

When Mrs. Ruickholdt was arrested yesterday on the check charge she said she was Ann Rollins, a San Francisco social worker, but police identified her by fingerprints. They produced a police record which showed that she had been released a year ago from Auburn prison where she had been sent in 1920 for buying diamonds and charging them to a cousin's account. She was paroled in 1922 but fell into trouble again in New Haven and was sent back to serve the last year of her sentence.

At the time of her trial her husband, broken in health and his practice ruined as a result of her acts, was forced to travel here afoot to be with her in the courtroom.

"What is a woman to do when she comes out of state prison?" Mrs. Ruickholdt sobbed in court today. "I am all alone fighting against the world. If only Dr. Ruickholdt would come to my aid. He knows he is the only one I have ever loved. If I could only see my husband. Oh, how I've tried to see him, but every attempt was frustated."

Mrs. Ruickholdt was remanded to the women's prison in default of $5,000 bail and her case set down for further hearing Tuesday.

Frank C. Munson, president of the line, issued a statement today charging the commission with taking "an arbitrary position" in not cooperating with the line in moving food provisions and mails to the Bahamas. The Munargo docked at 6 o'clock Friday night and was scheduled to leave at once on the return trip, already delayed.

Seven Men Held For The 'Shame Suicides'

Charged With First Degree Murder in Mexican Federal Court at Tijuana, Mexico.

TIJUANA, Mexico, Feb. 14—(AP)—Information charging first degree murder were presented in Mexican federal court here today, against the seven men held as a result of the "shame suicide" of the Thomas Peteet family, following alleged attacks on Audrey and Clyde Peteet in Tijuana.

Besides holding the men accountable for the death of the family in San Diego, the information charges them with having attacked the two girls.

At the same time Mexican officials made the first official announcement that the death penalty will be asked in case the men are found guilty of the murder count. The court has 72 hours in which to pass upon the information and will then set a date for the trial.

A decision from the court is not expected before tomorrow but if the informations are sustained an early trial is probable.

Antonio Maura Martinez, secretary of state for the northern district of lower California said the prosecution will strive for sentence placing the men before a firing squad.

The informations specifically charge Luis M. Amador, proprietor of the Oakland bar here, Refugio L. Alvares, bartender at the San Diego bar in Tijuana, Francisco Navarro, taxicab driver, Salvadore Espinosa, taxicab driver and Juan York Sang, hotel owner, with attacks on Clyde Peteet. Zenaidos Llanos, former chief of police of Tijuana, and Francisco Gonzales, taxicab driver, are specifically charged with having attacked Audrey Peteet.

All seven are named in the murder charge.

The information recites that Mrs. Carrie O. Peteet and the two daughters met their death at the hands of the husband and father, Thomas M. Peteet, from poisoning by gas; that responsibility for the deaths is on the seven prisoners.

Investigators, Mexican officials said, showed that the Peteet girls were attacked in automobiles on the way to a Hot Springs resort 14 miles out of Tijuana. As the machines were in the use of the entire party the accusations were laid against the entire seven instead of merely against Amador and Llanos, as was done by the coroner's jury in San Diego.

FRENCH CABINET MAY SURVIVE THE CRISIS

PARIS, Feb. 14—(AP)—The chamber of deputies sat today both morning and afternoon, but adjourned without reaching a decisive vote on the financial measures. Premier Briand apparently was not willing to hold a night session, desiring more time before the final votes are taken.

The situation is regarded in the lobbies as little changed from yesterday, but there is an impression of optimism with regard to the cabinet's ability to maintain itself.

The compromise text of the stamp tax on business transactions has not yet been drafted, but the latest reports are that the government and finance committee have reached an agreement to use for balancing the budget the 3,500,000,000 so-called Loucheur taxes voted on December 4, as an anti-inflation measure, in which case the government may not find it necessary to maintain the stamp tax.

The government was unable today to persuade the chamber to accept several proposed increases in direct taxation. It was for instance, willing to double the malt tax, from 10 to 20 francs per quintal. This tax has not been changed since 1843, and it was estimated the increase would yield 35,000,000 francs, but the house rejected the proposal, 390 to 170.

The government was also willing to increase the tax on alcohol 100 francs per hectolitre, but M. Batbe's motion to disjoin this article from the measures was accepted, 303 to 113, the proposer saying that the country had no wish to be made dry through prices being raised too high.

An increase in the stamp tax on bourse operations, which the government favored was accepted, 335 to 212, and is expected to yield 100,000,000 francs.

COVERED 100 ODD MILES ON SKIIS IN 21 HOURS

BERLIN, Feb. 14 (AP)—Helmar Oakerlund and Robert Reid, both of this town, were "feeling fine" today after their 100 mile ski trip from Portland, Me., but both declared that the overland jaunt had taught them several things about long distance ski running.

Both felt that a race of that distance is practical, but should not be attempted by anyone not in perfect physical trim, and a different type of course, preferably triangular, should be mapped out.

"The whole course from Portland is pretty open and exposed", Reid said. "We were bucking head winds all the way. If I did it again I'd want a triangular course running through enough wooded land to afford shelter in rough weather."

Oakerlund said he was sure a long distance ski race was practical, but admitted that it was "tough work and no man should try it unless he is in good condition."

The men covered the 110 odd miles from Portland in an elapsed time of 21 hours, despite a blizzard followed by soft footing at the last of their four-day jaunt. They arrived here yesterday.

NEW HAVEN WOMAN WAS INJURED BY FALLING COPING

MERIDEN, Feb. 14—(AP)—Mrs. John C. Carr, of Pearl street, and her four-year-old daughter, Barbara, had a very narrow escape from sudden death shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, when a four foot section of stone coping, accompanied by an avalanche of snow from the roof, fell to the sidewalk on the south side of St. Paul's Universalist church.

The stone struck on its end, very close to Mrs. Carr, tearing her coat and badly bruising her side and knocking her into a snow bank, where she fainted. The stone then fell over against the little girl, who was pinned beneath it in the snow bank.

Mrs. Carr was taken to the Meriden hospital, where X-rays revealed no fractures, the extent of her injuries being a badly bruised side and nervous shock. The little girl was scratched about the face, but was otherwise uninjured.

LIGHTNING CRIPPLED NEW LONDON TROLLEY TRAFFIC

All Street and House Lights Failed During the Storm—Wind Reached Velocity of 50 Miles an Hour—The Mohican Hotel Was the Only Structure Lighted in the Entire City—Coast Guard Boats Had Been Warned to Seek Shelter.

NEW LONDON, Feb. 14—(AP)—This city and surrounding territory was plunged into darkness early tonight when street and house lights failed during a violent northeast electrical storm. Trolley traffic was paralysed and general confusion existed during the hour artificial lighting failed. All of the theatres were filled and patrons sat in darkness awaiting the lights.

The Mohican hotel which has its own generating plant was the only structure lighted in the entire city. Its lobby was thronged with storm-bound pedestrians.

The lightning was accompanied by thunder and the wind attained a velocity of 50 miles an hour.

The coast guard, warned in advance of the storm, had ordered all patrol boats to shelter and all were safely accounted for.

The storm broke suddenly after it had rained almost continuously during the day.

DR. E. ARTHUR RUICKHOLDT "THROUGH" WITH HIS WIFE

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 14—(AP)—Dr. C. Arthur Ruickholdt is "through" with the woman whose operations ruined him nearly six years ago, he said tonight after he had learned that his wife, Mrs. Ruth Ruickholdt, well known to police in Connecticut for her criminal actions, had requested that he be asked to help her out of her latest trouble. She is under arrest in New York for passing a worthless check.

"About six years ago she robbed me of every cent except 23 cents. That's all she left," said Dr. Ruickholdt, a New Haven physician. "She never explained why she did that to me. For more than five years she has had the chance, and never has she told me.

"For two years while I was in Bridgeport, I kept myself open. But she never explained. While she was at Auburn prison, she sought forgiveness, but I wouldn't forgive her. I'm through with her. I'm through."

Concerning her operations, he said: Some people throught I was connected with her. I wasn't. I was her greatest victim. She left me so that I couldn't help her now, if I wanted to. After her first conviction I struggled along trying to keep my head above water. My practice was ruined. All of this time, she has never told me. She got away with money faster than I could make it."

They were married in 1912. The doctor said that she was about seven years younger than he and he is 47.

SENATE TAX REDUCTION TERMED "ECONOMIC FOLLY"

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—(AP)—The additional tax reduction voted by the senate was assailed as "economic folly" by Chairman Green of the house ways and means committee, tonight, on the eve of the meeting of senate and house conferees to adjust differences in the tax bill as it passed the two chambers.

In going $126,000,000 beyond the total reduction approved by the house in its $336,000,000 bill, Mr. Green, who will head the house conferees, declared the senate not only threatened a treasury deficit but jeopardized the enactment of many pending bills calling for increased government expenditures including the public building bill.

Chairman Green is supported in his position by other house leaders, who point out that the measure they enacted kept within the bounds set forth by the treasury and feel that the non-partisan manner in which it was considered in that chamber would take tax reduction out of politics if their bill was approved.

While the senate bill would cut taxes by $456,261,000 this year, on the basis of calculations made by the government actuaries, Chairman Green declared today that after this year, when it would become fully effective, it would result in a total annual reduction of $600,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—(AP)—A mobilization of the "dry forces" is under way to defeat the "wets" in their drive for light wine and beer, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League declared today in an address from the pulpit of the Eldbrooke Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Wheeler said the "wets" would launch their offensive at a Washington birthday dinner here. The dry forces, he contended, are gaining strength while the wet group "is smaller today than it was a year ago."

MURDERED MAN THROWN FROM TRUCK IN PAWTUCKET

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 14—(AP)—The driver of an automobile truck loaded with liquor was murdered on a street near the center of the city this evening by a man who jumped into the cab and fired four shots, according to witnesses.

The body was thrown out into the street, a bullet through the head and another through the left leg. The truck sped on, finally to be abandoned with its load of contraband. Intact, about a third of a mile from the scene of the shooting.

James B. Payne, a motorman whose car was on the street where the shooting took place, said he saw the truck turn into that thoroughfare from a cross street, closely followed by a large touring car. He saw a man jump aboard the truck on the driver's off side and a little later imagined he saw a bundle of rags tossed from the cab. He stopped his car when he came opposite the bundle and discovered it to be the dead man. The truck had driven off.

Other witnesses stated they heard four shots. Three empty cartridges were found on the floor of the cab. In the dead man's pockets were two cards. On one was the printed name of Jacob M. Friedman, lawyer, 306 Broadway, New York city, while the reverse side bore the pencilled notation of a North Attleboro telephone number. The other card bore the name of Peter Wishewsky, of 84 West 120th street, New York city. The truck was registered in the name of Joseph Lemoine, of Manville, R. I.

That the attack was sudden was evidenced by a fully loaded revolver found on the man's body. Suspended in a holster under his arm. Spare cartridges were in his pockets. Evidently he was beaten on the draw.

The truck was laden with more than five hundred bottles of Scotch whiskey, three cases of maraschino, one of champagne, and other assorted liquors bearing labels indicating contents of quality.

Some witnesses declared that more than one man participated in the attack and some declared that a touring car preceded the ambushed truck, as well as the one which followed it.

CASES INVOLVE "BLUE LAWS" OF MASSACHUSETTS

BOSTON, Feb. 14—(AP)—Three actions of the past week have focussed attention on the so-called "blue laws" of Massachusetts.

First there was the postponement of the trial in Brockton of Anthony Bimba, editor of a Brooklyn communist paper who is charged with blasphemy under a statute that first was enacted in 1646. Death then was the punishment for denying the existence of the deity. Later, in 1697, the maximum punishment was reduced to one year in prison.

Second, legislative committee reported favorably on a measure calling for appointment of a commission to study obsolete laws with a view to discarding them. The third action, which occurred yesterday, was the start of a fight by the Lord's Day Alliance to prevent the legalizing of Sunday professional sports.

Bimba was arrested for a speech he made in Brockton in which it was charged he denied existence of a supreme being. He also was charged with seditious utterances. He asserts that his arrest was brought about by an opposing faction in Lithuanian circles which resented his attacks upon present clerical government in Lithuania. Some 3,000 Lithuanians live in a settlement near Brockton.

The law under which Bimba will be prosecuted has been on the statute books nearly 300 years.

COUNTESS OF CATHCART IS TO SAIL FOR LONDON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—(AP)—An impression prevailed in official quarters tonight that the countess of Catncart, detailed at Ellis Island because of an elopement with the early of Craven, may not press her fight before the labor department for admission to the United States.

Secretary Davis, because of the widespread interest aroused by the barring of the countess after the earl involved had been admitted to the United States without difficulty, has prepared to consider the case himself, but some officials interested in the matter now think it is likely that she will sail for London Tuesday. Her detention and the publicity that has followed it, they understood, have operated to change her mind about her desire to visit the United States.

WILLIMANTIC

Office, 864 Main St. Telephone 1181-2.

THOUGHT CAR WAS STOLEN; IN GARAGE FOR REPAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 14—When Dr. Edward J. Ottenheimer, of this city, left St. Joseph's church about 10 o'clock Sunday morning at the close of the 9 o'clock mass to return home, he made the startling discovery that his Buick coupe had been taken. At first he believed that Dr. A. J. Girouard, who owns a machine of identical style and color, had made a mistake and driven off with the wrong car as the fellow physician's machine was parked in the vicinity. This supposition was wrong, however, and the police were notified. Telephone calls were sent to neighboring cities along the state highways leading from here and Officer Roderick Lariviere joined the doctor in the search. Then the physician remembered that he had spoken to Harold I. Philips, an automobile mechanic, relative to work he wanted done on the machine. A trip was made to Philips' garage and there was the machine, with the repairs nearly completed.

It would seem that the weather man has made up his mind to keep the ground covered with snow. The light snowfall late Saturday night failed, however, to materially undo the work of snow plows and thawing weather to make traveling conditions much improved in this section. As for Willimantic Street Superintendent Irvin M Ford has the streets in good shape. Several teams and auto trucks and some twenty men have been engaged every day since Friday, February 5, removing snow. The $3,000 appropriation made especially for snow removal in the citybudget has been handled in a most conservative manner but at present is nearlypassed and another appropriation will be necessary if Willimantic is visited by another severe storm.

The highways and cross roads in the three Windhams are now all passable. This work was done by Charles Smith, of North Windham. Workers broke the drifts to the isolated section of Beaver Hill for the first time since the first storm, late Friday afternoon.

As far as is known no cooperative effort has been made on the part of local sportsmen to feed the game birds during this period of heavy snow which pheasants and other birds. Weak from lack of food, the birds are an easy prey to foxes which are plentiful hereabouts. As an example of the helplessness of the birds the story may be told of how a local young man saw a bird flutter through the air as he was driving on the South Windham road a recent evening. He stopped the machine and after a brief chase through the snow, caught a handsome male partridge. The bird has since been placed in a large coop and has recovered from its exhaustion, and when the ground becomes uncovered it will be released. Deputy Game Warden R. E. Clarke, of Columbia, is heading a drive to feed the wild birds and has already received many donations of grain to carry on the work. An appeal has gone out to shoot all the crows possible. These birds are the worst enemies of game birds, especially during the breeding season.

A patriotic service with a sermon on the subject Abraham Lincoln's Spirit in National Crises, by Rev. Frederick C. Williams, pastor of the local St. Paul's Episcopal church, was held at the church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The many guests included members of the G. A. R., Woman's Relief corps, Daughters of Veterans and various other societies affiliated with the organization and the auxiliary and members of the Spanish War veterans.

She was born in Europe, January 4, 1891.

The Lenten regulations as they have been issued by Bishop John J. Nilan, of the Hartford diocese, were announced at the several masses at St. Joseph's and St. Mary's churches, here, Sunday forenoon. Next Sunday the annual collection for the Negro and Indian missions will be taken. Persons doing laborious work are also excused from fasting. The law of fast applies to every day during Lent except Sundays. Persons not excused and observing the regulation are allowed but one full meal, with meat, in the day. A slight breakfast is allowed with a full meal at noon and a collation in the evening.

The three local gasoline supply stations announced Saturday, a jump in the price of gasoline of another cent per gallon, wholesale. The old price was 17 cents, plus state tax of 2cents. It was said that the recent advances in the price of crude and refined oil have caused the gasoline boost.

Services for Louis Phaneuf were held at the late home, 16Milk street with a requiem high mass at St. Mary's church at nine o'clock Saturday morning. Rev. J. J. Papillon, the pastor, was the celebrant. The choir rendered special vocal selections with Mrs. Joseph F. Caudreau at the organ. (Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Feb. 14—With a record covering many years of service in the United States navy, the death of John Mahoney, 72, occurred at his home, 79 Liberty street, Pawcatuck on Sunday morning. Mr Mahoney's Westerly residence covered a period of over 50 years and in that time his navy service included duty under Admiral Dewey at Manilla bay. In March, 1923, Mr. Mahoney suffered a shock which impaired his speech, but he continued physically active until about a week ago.

Following a peacetime navy service, at the time of the Spanish-American War Mr. Mahoney re-enlisted in the U. S. Navy and saw considerable service. At the memorable battle of Manilla, he was a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Newark. He also took part in the battle of Manzanillo, Philippines, and was later awarded a medal by Congress to commeorate this notable victory.

Mr. Mahoney was the last surviving charter member of Narragansett Council, No. 21, K. of C., having joined the order on April 15, 1895, the day that the local council was instituted. He was also a member of the Woodmen of the World and the Catholic Benevolent Legion.

He was born in Tarbot, Limerick County, Ireland, on March 26, 1853, the son of Michael Mahoney and Mary Downey. When 14 years of age, he came to this country with his parents and lived for a time in New York city. With his mother he came to Westerly about 50 years ago and has since been a resident of Pawcatuck.

During his youth, he served for twelve years in the U. S. Navy, where he held the rank of sailmaker's mate. After completing his dozen years of service, he returned to his home here and engaged in the awning business.

On April 30, 1884, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Hannah Horsfall, daughter of James and Anna Horsfall of Westerly. Mrs. Mahoney passed away on Aug. 12, 1923.

There were twelve children born to them, nine of whom, two sons and seven daughters, survive: Chief Petty Officer James H. Mahoney of Newport; Edward Mahoney of Westerly; Miss Alice Mahoney of New York city; Mrs. William Fallon of Newport; Mrs. William Gow of Huntington, L. I.; Mrs. George P. Chapman and Misses Anne, Veronica and Madelyn Mahoney, all of Westerly. He is also survived by two grandchildren, James H. At the time it is alleged that Coon was under the influence of liquor, the services of a physician being called to determine his sobriety.

Coon entered a plea of "not guilty," and was later released on $500 bail for his appearance in the regular session of Third District court on next Friday to answer to a complaint of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Constable A. L. Leon acted as court officer at the arraignment.

Westerly highway workmen, under Engineer A. L. Leon, were busy Sunday morning breaking out the road in district No. 6, following which they directed their attention to the road near the residence of Charles Henry Crandall. The first day of the storm the Westerly road forces went over the state road to Bradford and thus took over some of the state work. This was a matter of necessity as it was only in this way that they could reach the road leading to the Frank Sullivan quarries and granite works, to permit the many workmen employed there to reach the scene of their labors. Following this the department returned to the Westerly highways in the center of the town, which although passable, needed a removal of snow to permit the full use of the highway. The fall of snow on Saturday night, being the twelfth snowstorm of the winter season, proved a light one. With the moderation of temperature on Sunday, ice and snow melted and on Sunday afternoon, rain began to fall. The clearing of gutters proved a timely one for much surface water was cared for.

SLUSH PRESENTED NEW AUTOMOBILE HAZARDS

DANIELSON, Feb. 14—Rain came Sunday to aid in packing down and removing the snow banks that have made such difficulties for this section of the county for the past ten days. While it was welcome for what it was doing to get some of the snow out of the way, it created a new trouble for motorists. They found their machines breaking through and stalling on what had been as good going as there was to be had a few hours before. Slush came to take the place of hard-packed snow. On state highway surfaces where much of the snow had been removed pavement began to appear by noon and larger areas of it were made visible as the afternoon wore on. This was encouraging. But it is not to be taken as meaning too much.

State highway routes are not anywhere near in prime condition through this territory as yet. They can be negotiated. There are stretches along these routes where one-way travel through narrow lanes cut through the snow banks is still the rule. At Dark Lantern hill and for nearly a mile to the west snow shovelers were engaged up to dusk Saturday night in widening the traveled way. Similar conditions prevail across the border in Rhode Island, on the Providence route. There was no motor coach service between Providence and Hartford via Danielson Saturday. The lines were still experiencing troubles that originated with the big snowstorm of a week ago last Thursday. The Connecticut company had its coaches operating at the week end on the Norwich-Putnam route.

Rain and temperature well above the freezing mark during Sunday afternoon was lending a helping hand to making conditions better along the trunk lines. It did not appear likely at that time, however, that any agency would contribute to remove any more than a portion of the snow for a number of days—there is so much of it.

People in outlying sections of Killingly continue to be seriously handicapped by snow choked roads. The conditions left by two heavy snowstorms have beset them with various inconveniences of which little is heard in a community as well placed as is Danielson. Town road crews have been at work every day breaking out highways, but there has been such a great amount of work to do that not all could be accomplished that was desired. This work will continue this week.

Saturday afternoon at one o'clock at the undertaking rooms of A. F. Wood on Academy street funeral services for Mrs. Mabel Wescott were conducted by Rev. Roger C. Stimson of the Methodist Episcopal church. The body was entombed at Westfield cemetery, members of the family acted as bearers.

Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvan M. Thompson, Stearns street, funeral services were conducted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church for Mrs. Roxanna Peabody Blodgett, mother of Mrs. Thompson, whose death occurred Wednesday afternoon. The body was entombed at Westfield cemetery, burial to be later at West Brookfield, Mass. Members of the family acted as bearers. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Blodgett had made her home here the past three years with Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

The Danielson Town team and the Crescents of Taftville played a sizzling fast basketball game in the town hall here Saturday night, Danielson managing to double the score of the visitors and to win 36 to 18. An excited crowd saw the game, which was hard-played and exciting thoughout. Danielson again demonstrated that its organization is a real one and that it remains a first line contender for the eastern Connecticut basketball championship.

Headed by President L. S. Ingalls and Secretary Harold B. Atwood, a delegation of members of the Danielson Rod and Gun club will be at the state capitol in Hartford Tuesday to attend a conference which they with representatives of other such clubs throughout the state have been bidden by the state board of fisheries and game. There is to be among other features of the meeting an illustrated lecture by William E. Finley of Oregon. The conferences in a broad way will have to do with plans for the conservation of wild life. Subjects to be taken up will include administration of streams on which the state has fishing rights stream pollution, regulations for white perch, creel limit on pickerel and black bass, protection of calico bass type fishing through the ice, state forest and game refuges, open season for quail in certain counties, bounty on crows and black foxes. Sportsmen attending the meeting will have an opportunity to present their views and to ask questions pertaining to any or all of the subjects under discussion.

More sidewalk flag decorations are promised for the spring season. The good impression made by the display of flags on Lincoln's birthday assures this.

Miss Ruth Franklin will leave tonight for St. Cloud, Fla., to remain until spring.

Miss Gertrude Stone of Academy street was a visitor on Saturday with relatives in Providence.

Samuel Stone, son of Mrs. Harold Stone of Brooklyn, was taken to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Pupils in the sixth grade of the School street school at the week end presented their teacher, miss Grace Stanton, who is ill at her home on Broad street, with remembrances.

The annual financial reports of St. James' parish were presented to the congregations Sunday by Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S. The past year was the most successful financially in the more than 50 years history of the parish, which has no debts and has a surplus being accumulated for the construction of a new school building.

A flood of Valentines went through the mails at the week end, most of them happily received by those to whom they were addressed. The old-time alleged "comics" were not in much favor this year.

Observation would indicate that motor traffic reached its low ebb of the year on Sunday, usually a day of crowded highways. Extremely poor traveling conditions held down the ambitions to take a ride.

Numbers found diversion Friday and Saturday evenings attending the carnival of Rose of Lima council, K. of C. at the Casino.

Tomorrow, Mardi Gras, numerous diversions and entertainments will be the last to be attended by many until the end of the Lenten season, opening Ash Wednesday.

Henry Nadeau, son of Mrs. Clara Nadeau of School street, is reported as improving at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam after undergoing a surgical operation a fortnight ago.

At all the masses at St. James' church on Sunday Lenten regulations as to fasts and abstinence were announced by Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., the pastor.

Numbers from Danielson were at Putnam Saturday to attend the annual Valentine tea arranged by the Woman's board in the interest of the Day Kimball hospital.

Members of the K. H. S. Alumni association and their friends will dance this (Monday) evening at the assembly hall at the high school.

Drains, choked with snow and ice the past two weeks, were being dug out Sunday afternoon by thosew ho wished to avoid flood conditions when rains begin to fall in copious quantities.

It was estimated Sunday that it will be from two to three weeks before hard coal begins to arrive in Danielson, though the mines resume operations, as indicated they will, during the present week.

Stalled cars were numerous on various streets in Danielson Sunday, due to the fact that rain softened the snow and let the machines down into difficult going.

The town's grader was engaged at the week end in clearing streets of snow in the Riverview and other sections of the borough.

Eugene Reed of New York was a visitor here Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Reed of Hawkins street.

Frederick E. Pierce, examiner of state high schools as a representative of the state board of education, expressed his favorable impression of Killingly High school.

Lucien G. Levesque of Holyoke, spent the week end with friends in Danielson and vicinity.

On Tuesday members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church are to hold a meeting with Mrs. A. F Wood of Academy street.

VALENTINE TEA WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 14—The annual Valentine tea which was held on Saturday for the benefit of the Day Kimball hospital, was one of the most successful ever given. The roads were cleared sufficiently to enable the people from the outside towns of Pomfret, Woodstock, Thompson and Killingly to help make it a success. The B. P. O. E. donated the use of their hall for the affair which opened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and lasted until midnight.

Attractive articles were sold from the gayly decorated booths during the afternoon and a supper was served from 5:30 until 7:30. At eight o'clock dancing began to the music of Chaffin's orchestra, of Worcester. During the intermission there were several Russian dances given in costume by Mr. and Mrs. LevBeck and Nicholas Yarnoff, of Providence, accompanied by a Russian accordion player, banjo solos and other music and dancing acts. There were also some old fashioned dancing under the leadership of Alexander Maitland, of Thompson, to the fiddling of Joseph Supernault, one of the prize winners at the Bradley theatre's contest.

The committee in charge for the Woman's board were as follows:

General chairmen, Mrs. Bradford and Mrs. Vonsiatsky, of Thompson.

CEMETERY ASSOCIATION HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 14—At the annual meeting of the Putnam Cemetery association the report of the treasurer of trust accounts showed an increase in the trust funds during the year of $3,712.50, bringing the grand total of the fund to $48,568.95. A few days ago the trust funds were withdrawn from the Savings banks and placed in the hands of a Hartford Trust company for investment and management. The investments have been most fortunate and the fund has grown materially through these investments.

Additions to the fund by bequests during the year have been as follows: Potter and Hollingworth, $300; Nathaniel L. Bowen, $125; Frank Rich and Mary Rich Lincoln, $300; Emily E. Spaulding, $100; Sarah E. Moffit, $250; Olive F. Kelly, $200; Elizabeth A. Gilson, $62.50; Georgianna Longdon, $100; Oscar Coman $250; Charles Monroe (two graves) $25; Andrew J. Blanding, $150; Albigance Covell, $50; Edward F. Whittemore, $250; Emily Manning, $75; David E. Clark, $200; Inez V. Hoyle, $100; D N. Medbury, $200; John A. Daly, $300; Alexander Varbedian, $62.50; Dr. J. J. Russell, $300; C. Allen Hawkins, $250; five single graves $62.50.

There have been some extraordinary expenses during the past year, including finishing and grading the memorial lawn and drives, removing the old tomb and connecting the cemetery with the chapel grounds. The work was done and paid for with funds received from the sale of the old chapel building.

While the new chapel is practically completed there are still one or two details to be finished, in the basement of the chapel there are 36 crypts that will be utilized in place of the old antiquated tomb which for years was at the corner of the cemetery grounds. The next unusual step will be the closing of the two present entrances to the cemetery and building a new and wider entrance.

Officers for the year were elected the only changes being those caused by the deaths of John O. Fox and J. Harry Mann, both of whom were auditors. The officers are as follows: President, Lucius H. Fuller; vice president, C. Dwight Sharpe; secretary and treasurer, Newton A. Ballard; trustees for three years, O. A. Hammond and Clarence A. Pierce; committee on trusts for three years, Byron D. Bugbee, J. Otis Fox was elected auditor to succeed his father, John O. Fox and Leon T. Wilson was elected auditor to succeed J. Harry Mann. J. F. Carpenter was elected a trustee for the unexpired term of Mr. Fox.

Resolutions were passed on the deaths of Mr. Mann and Mr. Fox and ordered spread upon the records of the association.

On Friday, Lincoln's birthday, the banks were closed but there was no other observance except that there were fitting exercises at the schools in the morning. Schools were closed at noon.

Miss Ruth Cutler has been the guest of friends in Danielson.

Miss Marion Wilcox, freshman at Brown university, Providence, has been spending the mid-year recess at her home on Farrow street.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Wulf, of Grove street, have been spending the past week in New York city.

Elmer Moriarty, of Arch street, who underwent a serious operation at the Day Kimball hospital two months ago, is slowly regaining his health. He will probably be confined to his home for some time yet.

Miss Janet Heath, of Philadelphia, is the guest of Mrs. Nelson Lown, of Grove street.

Miss Harriet Carter, of Andover, Mass., is the guest of Miss Harriet Brown, of Grove street.

The first meeting of the committee on revaluation and equalization of property was held Friday afternoon and evening. A South Manchester citizen told the members what had been done in that city when it was up against the same condition that exists in Putnam. Then from two until after seven o'clock he answered questions regarding the different steps that were taken and how it has worked out, for the readjustment is still in progress.

The committee consists of 19 citizens, some of them officials, others members of semi-public organizations. Thomas deCoudres, president of the Chamber of Commerce is chairman of the committee, nearly all of whom were present at this meeting. The assessors of the town, Ernest B. Kent, Arthur Tourtelotte, and Ulric Beausoliel, all had various questions to ask and the answers given were prompt and complete.

The dance given by the members of the local telephone exchange proved to be a great social and financial success. Dancing was from 8 o'clock until midnight and the very excellent music was furnished by the Ideal Orchestra of Webster. The committee in charge of the affair was Miss Rose McGarry, chairman, Miss Jessie Macdonald, Miss Edna Taylor, Miss Katrina Thayer, Miss May O'Brien and William Anderson.

Putnam's Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America held a dance Friday evening at Odd Fellows hall. Neil Bulger, scribe of the troop was chairman of the dance and was assisted by Scoutmaster Jerome B. Andrews and Assistant Scoutmaster, Alfred St. Onge.

It was well attended and the boys have now quite a sum to add to their fund for the new Boy Scout camp at Crystal Lake. The music was furnished by the Scout Melody Boys of Willimantic.

ONE OF MONITOR'S CREW STILL VERY MUCH ALIVE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 14—Once again the honors that belong to "Tommy" Taylor, colored, who served as "powder monkey" on board the Monitor, are trying to be taken away from him. Within the past ten years there have been chronicled in the press the deaths of at least a dozen people, who it was claimed in the case of each one, that he was the last survivor of that famous naval battle at Hampton Roads which may have been a deciding factor in the war between the states. There are abundant proofs that Tommy Taylor was one of the crew of the Monitor.

In the Bulletin of February 11 appears the following:

"Willis Sanford Drake, believed to be the last survivor of the crew of the U. S. S. Monitor of the Civil War fame, was dead at his home in Elizabeth, N. J., Wednesday at the age of 85.

"Drake was injured by the recoil of one of the Monitor's guns during the historic battle with the Merrimac and was discharged from the navy five days later. He was then 17. He engaged in the Merchant service and acquired a vessel of his own, but shipwrecks deprived him of his fortune. His widow, two daughters, four sons and seven grandchildren survive him."

In Harper's Illustrated History of the Civil War is a picture of the Monitor and its crew a day or two after the battle. Tommy Taylor is one of the group and despite the years that have elapsed he is easily recognizable.

March 15 will be the 65th anniversary of the fight. Mr. Taylor was 16 years of age when it occured and for all of his 80 years, is in good health. According to his own story he was a slave owned by Major Evanston, of Coles Point, N. C. He determined to make his escape and borrowing one of the Major's fine saddle horses, he rode all of one night and most of the following day, and then made his way on foot to Fortress Monroe. The Monitor, a "Yankee Cheesebox on a plank" had just arrived at Hampton Roads. The Union sympathisers were greatly disturbed over the havoc that had been wrought by the Merrimac among northern vessels and they did not think the Monitor a formidable opponent. A few more men were needed in the crew and Taylor was pressed into service. He says that he does not remember much of the details of the battle but that the constant command of the officer in charge was "Keep mixing that medicine and give 'em hell, boys."

He only remained on the Monitor for sixty days. Then he enlisted in the northern navy and was transferred to other vessels, serving until the close of the war. He came to Putnam in the early 70's and has since made his home here.

HERRMANN SCOUTING FOR MEN TO FILL IMPORTANT POSTS

CINCINNATI, Feb. 14— (AP) —The major league baseball meetings failed to yield the Cincinnati Reds any trades but President August Herrmann has his eye set for material to strengthen four important positions in his team. The Reds are in need of a catcher, shortstop, first baseman and left fielder.

Christensen was obtained from St. Paul in a trade for Niehaus, an outfielder, and a sum of money. A few weeks ago Elmer Smith, utility man, was sold to the Portland club. The only other deal of the early winter was the tentative purchase of Frank Emmert, shortstop of the Seattle club. Emmert was with the Reds a few years ago and a thorough seasoning in the minors is said to have converted him into a high class performer.

Plans for a Greater Redland Field, proposed to be the largest in the country and have a seating capacity of about 80,000, are awaiting the action of the Cincinnati park board which controls the desired site. The field previously was intended as a municipal athletic field.

Unless the Reds' scouts dig up additional material before the training season, indications are that the lineup will be about the same as last year, except for Emmert at short and Walter Christensen, the St. Paul purchase, in left field.

POETRY

The Home Renewed

"There should be a quick and generous readiness to revert to the old and normal habits of thought, in the home."
President Coolidge

"How shall I bring the Ark of God home to me?" I. Chron. 13.12

The Light of Home!—how dim it burns
When self indulgence feeds its flame,
When pride parental chiefly yearns
For wealth, greed wins too oft with shame,—
For pleasures, fever-flushed with red,
Expelling from fair childhood's mind
All thoughts of God,—by passion led,—
Nor joys but in excitements find.

These colored flares to souls impart
No rays to guide child-tender feet.
Conscience bedimmed aids not the heart
To seek and choose a life made sweet
With virtues worn as robes of white,
While pearls of value go unpriced,
Truth gems viewed but with scorn and slight,
Lamps never visited by Christ.

"The Light that Failed."—'tis human love
It's flame not fed with oil divine,
Or charged from batteries above,
Homes where Christ's lovelight fails to shine:—
The generation soon to be
Asks hearts enlightened by Heaven's ray.
Our Land to save, from vice to free,
Needs homes where parents "watch and pray."

Out of the hearts of men proceed
All forms of evil and of good;
Hearts of the Home are soil for seed
For harvest sheaves of life's best food:—
Each child a father's prayer should know,
And mother's love yet purer be,—
"How shall I to Our Father go
And my own lad not be with me!"

Christ, thou fountain of all light,
Thou light that lighteneth every soul,
Take from our homes the things that blight,
Till they like stars in brilliance roll,—
Through earthly love bid Thy Love shine,
In homes sin-darkened 'bide and stay,
Thyself art light, O Love Divine,
Thy Word, inspired, illumes our way.
—By Rev. George G. Phipps.

The World is Mine

For me the jasmine-buds unfold
And silver daisies star the lea,
The crocus hoards the sunset gold,
And the wild rose breathes for me.
I feel the sap through the bought returning,
I share the skylark's transport fine,
I know the fountain's wayward yearning:
I love and the world is mine!

I love and thoughts that some time grieved,
Still water-membered, griefs not me:
From all that darkened and deceived
Upsoars my spirit free.
For soft the hours repeat one story,
Since the sea one strain divine.
My clouds arise all flushed with glory;
I love, and the world is mine.
—Florence Earle Coates

KALEIDOSCOPE

After 100 years of existence the town of Oxford, Ga., recently reported its first holdup.

Fayetteville was once the capital of North Carolina, and it was there that the state ratified the federal constitution in 1789.

More than 4,000 toys were remade by children in the public schools in Manchester, N. H., and were displayed to the public. The broken toys were taken to school, where they were repaired and then freshly painted. They were distributed among the poor at Christmas time.

The quick wit of an engineer of a passenger train saved Ernest Stohder of Williamsburg, Ia., from an indown by the bull and gored in the side. furiated bull. Stohler was knocked

A thin jet of water may be harder than steel. Several such jets exist at the new turbine station at Fully, Switzerland. The nozzles from which they issue are about one and one-half inches in diameter, and the water, the pressure of which is nearly two tons to the square inch, is so rigid that a strong man armed with an iron crowbar would be unable to drive it through this jet of water.

A big red rooster had a pitched battle with an Atchison (Kan.) fire truck. The rooster, apparently angered at the intrusian of the fire truck into his territory, flew squarely into the face of the truck. The bird hit a headlight on the fast moving truck, smashing the glass and bending the lamp almost to a right angle from its original position. The rooster lost a few feathers in the encounter, but staggered away unconquered.

A remarkable case of canine endurance was recently reported from Edbell, Forfarshire, Scotland. During the haymaking of the farm of Chapelton a collie dog belonging to a shepherd disappeared. All search for the animal proved fruitless and only when the hay was being carted to the farm yard was the dog discovered in one of the ricks, where it had lain imprisoned for twenty-six days. The animal was in a very weak state and collapsed on being rescued, but soon recovered.

Horse meat, formerly "the poor man's beefsteak," has become a French luxury. Scarcity of butcherable animals is given as the cause of its great increase in price. One pound of choice horse meat at the Paris markets recently was quoted 9.50 francs—about 40 cents. Pork chops could be had for 8.50 francs, roast beef for 9 francs, and mutton for 7.50 francs. Besides the gradual disappearance of horses "on the hoof" available for the markets, a tax of 1 franc 25 centimes a pound placed on the meat was said to have influenced higher prices. Horsemeat is recommended by physicians for persons suffering from tuberculosis and all diseases of anaemia of the blood. The sanatoriums of southern France have been severely hit by the rise in price.

OUR GROWING AUTO ACCIDENTS

An indictment which should be taken to heart by the drivers of automobiles if that made by the motor vehicle department when it declares: "The great majority of accidents which happened in 1925 were shown by the department's analysis to be due to the recklessness of motorists."

The department is apparently endeavoring to put the blame where it belongs for the purpose of bringing about a correction of conditions in the future.

The people of this and other states cannot fail to have been impressed by the steadily increasing number of accidents and fatalities in which motor vehicles are involved. In Connecticut there were 22,568 accidents last year, nearly 1800 more than in 1924 and more than 6,000 more than in 1923. Compared with the year 1924 the increase of 1925 accidents was 13.7 per cent less than the increase of 1924 over 1923 but the disturbing fact is that there were more. The fatalities reached the total of 354 a gain of 52, or one a week, making nearly one a day for the year, whereas in 1923 there were but 280. This represents a gain of 17.2 per cent. for the year in spite of the efforts that have been put forth in behalf of greater highway safety.

When it is shown that 16,373 of the accidents during the past year were due to recklessness it is indicated what a great responsibility rests in the hands of the auto drivers to put an end to this recklessness about which the motor vehicles department complains. The figures for the respective years 1925 and 1924 show an increase in inattention, careless backing, inexperience, driving too fast for conditions, intoxication, cutting corners and passing standing trolleys as causes for accidents with only slight reductions in failure to grant right of way, driving on wrong side of road and cutting in.

There continues to be an increasing carelessness on the part of children, though fewer accidents due to the careless adult were recorded during the year.

Likewise defective equipment figured in fewer accidents.

It is fully undrestood that the increase in accidents occurs during a year when there were many more automobiles, but it is nevertheless impossible to dodge the fact that if recklessness were eliminated there would be a reduction instead of the deplorable gain each year. It is not so much a reduction in the percentage of increase each year that is wanted as a reduction in the number of accidents and deaths.

THE TAX BILL

The country looked to the house of representatives in Washington to make provision for a reduction in federal taxes. The house acted promptly and wisely. It furnished the senate with an excellent basis for action without the claim of perfection being made.

The country looked to the senate to act on tax reduction in time so that it would be possible to put the new law into operation before the time for the collection of the first installment of the federal tax became due. The senate has acted, but its action hasn't indicated any attempt to break the speed laws. There are those who have rigidly opposed any of the reductions proposed, some who have stood out against certain of them and those who would have been willing to talk the whole proposition to death in order to carry their narrow point of view against the field. The result is that the bill as it leaves the senate shows a disregard for the reduction which the treasury has maintained could be made without facing a deficit and proposes to cut off about $123,000,000 from the tax bill that conditions justify.

The country now looks to the conference committee to straighten out the differences, to support good judgment and eliminate the bad. It has good reason for standing by the house in most of the instances where differences exist. Certainly consideration must be given to the cloth from which the garment is to be made. The folly of even heading toward a deficit is most unwise. The desire for the removal of all taxation might be general but it would not be good business to legislate to such an end in one fell swoop unless conditions warranted it. From the reports of the treasury there is a limit beyond which taxation should not go at this time and there are reasons for believing that the treasury is standing on sound business and furnishing advice which should be heeded.

Much responsibility rests upon the conference committee but on this occasion it has good reason for leaning strongly to the house bill.

THE SPANISH AVIATORS

It was not without incident or trouble that the Spanish aviators completed their flights from Spain to Buenos Aires, but the crossing of the Atlantic was accomplished without difficulty barring the equatorial weather conditions. It was a highly creditable performance. It was not the first time the Atlantic had been crossed but it was something new at that point and there is good reason why those directly and indirectly concerned should be proud of the accomplishment. It records the progress that is being made in aviation, and naturally it whets the ambition of others and spurs those who have gained these new honors to try for more. Spain as well as South America are doing only the expected in displaying their gratification.

In connection with this laudable feat it is an interesting program which someone has mapped out for a continuation of the flight by crossing the Andes to the west coast of South America, continuing to and crossing Central America and thence along the Atlantic coast of the United States to a point in Labrador where a leap can be made across to Greenland, thence to Iceland and to the British Isles, the continent and back home. Such a flight would not be circling the globe in the sense that the American aviators did but it would be a history making trip even though it did involve going backward over part of the route that was blazed by the Americans.

It can be said that the Spanish aviators have gotten away to a fine start for such a trip but the chances are that it is more ambitious in the way of a test than was contemplated when provision was made for the crossing of the Atlantic. It would require certain preparations which probably haven't been taken into consideration and yet in view of the fact that it would be skirting the coast for a long part of the distance, contingencies might be met without serious difficulty. Getting back across the Atlantic would probably offer the worst trouble.

REMEMBER THE MAINE

Twenty eight years ago today the country was horrified by the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor. There were 266 lives snuffed out and the warship was only a tangled mass of wreckage and that act marked the beginning of the Spanish American war which resulted in the freeing of Cuba and the Philippines from the yoke of Spain.

Today there is to be unveiled in Havana a tablet which has been erected to the memory of the sailors who lost their lives in the harbor. Today throughout the state, by proclamation of Governor Trumbull there will be an observance of Maine Memorial day and by his direction the schools will have suitable exercises.

In his proclamation the governor well says: "The Spanish war marked the beginning of a new era of international morality. It set new standards of responsibility. It gave new scope to that national conscience which responded so gloriously to an even greater wrong, 20 years afterwards. * * * All of us should have in mind that in honoring the first dead of the Spanish war, we commemorate also those great principles to which their sacrifice is a splendid and enduring monument."

"Remember the Maine," was the cry which followed the blowing up of that battleship. It most certainly hasn't been forgotten and the exercises attending the unveiling of the memorial and those in the schools will serve to keep the tragic event clearly in mind as well as the service which this country rendered to humanity as the result thereof

THE CONSUMERS

In the plan for the immediate resumption of coal mining in the anthracite region it is to be realized that the chief interest lies in the production for another year. The quantity that will be available for consumption within the next few weeks will be limited, barring such stocks as are on hand for the dealers' customers. But inasmuch as fuel has been available in some form it is quite evident that it will be possible to bridge the gap until anthracite is again available. But whether consumers rush for it again as they have in the past remains to be seen. Statements to the effect that prices will not advance, but can be expected to decrease are interesting to the buyer.

The public is not unmindful of the fact that it has been able to take a conspicuous part in defending itself against a coal shortage through resort to the use of substitutes. This effect upon the strike has been most important. It has removed the customary lever that was quickly resorted to in the past to get action during an emergency and it has demonstrated to the public that it is more independent than ever and less subject to the relentless holdups of either the miners or the operators. The consumers have helped win an important victory for themselves.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The big league schedules always make it easier to see spring through the snow banks.

The man on the corner says: When the thundershowers come spring cannot be very far away.

This is the season of activity for the horseshoers, but they are not needed as much as they were a decade or more ago.

Of course that New York truck driver who stole a ton of coal should never have been subjected to such temptation.

Mussolini doesn't make a good impression by his display of bravado. It may be all right for home consumption but it cannot be expected to stop there.

Just because a billion dollars worth of securities went up the spout last year doesn't mean that those who lost will not be included in this year's list.

It mustn't be expected that just because the coal strike is settled as unlimited supply is going to be available at once.

If the coal miners listen to their president they will hear that he has won a great victory for them, but they may learn to think and act for themselves some day.

WOMEN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Enameled frying pans will not stand a hot fire.

Never place hot pans on oilcloth. The heat removes the surface of the cloth.

Knives that have been used to cut acid fruits should be washed at once.

Never hang a sweater up to dry, but spread it on a thick towel, pulling it out to the proper shape.

Never beat or stir cereals or rice with a spoon. It makes them pasty. Use a plated silver fork.

Shabby towels which have become worn in the middle will renew their usefulness if cut in two and hemmed.

To remove fat from hot soup pour the soup through a cloth that has been rinsed in cold water. The fat will remain in the cloth.

Lettuce, celery, cucumbers, etc., should be wrapped in cheesecloth wrung out in cold water and placed in the ice box, to keep crisp.

A paper sack placed in the garbage can facilitates the removal of the garbage and prevents the can itself from accumulating odors.

Add two teaspoons of cold water to egg whites before beating to froth for frosting. The frosting will not fail.

To remove coffee and tea stains from linen, rub with a little borax and soak for half an hour in cold water, then hold over the mouth of a deep dish and pour boiling water over the stains.

To determine whether or not a turkey is thoroughly cooked, pierce the leg. If the liquid or blood is white or a pale pink, the turkey is done. Keep from drying by frequently basting with the fat from the turkey.

Rice and macaroni should boil rapidly, not because they should cook more rapidly, but in order that the sticks of macaroni and grains of rice may in boiling be kept moving.

A simple and excellent way to remove dirty marks from a rubber raincoat is to cut a raw potato in slices and rub it well on the mark. It will also remove mud stains from dress skirts, children's coats and trousers.

CUPBOARD SPACE.

It is always a good plan to have enough shelf space and cupboard space so that you need not have to figure on having your possessions and supplies stowed away in close array. You know yourself that when you are in haste you never have the time to put things away so compactly as when you are first arranging shelves and closets. Simplicity in furnishing is really possible only in the house where there is plenty of shelf and other store space. The dining room that shows no clutter of the paraphernalia of meals is possible only where there is self and cupboard space sufficient in the pantry to accommodate all these things.

TO CLEAN BAGS.

Brown leather bags may be cleansed quite successfully by rubbing on a thick lather of pure white soap. Apply it with a sponge, rub hard and let the soap remain on for a few minutes to soften the grease. Then rub dry with a clean piece of flannel. To avoid staining the bag, use no more water than is absolutely necessary to make the lather.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

If your lips are inclined to be dry or to crack easily, especially in this cold weather, use cream freely, particularly at night, before going to bed.

It is well to know a little about the medicines we keep on our shelf. Some medicines increase in strength with time, while others, after having stood a while, lose all their beneficial qualities. Inquire about any of which you are in doubt.

Brush the teeth from the gums down as well as crosswise, and be sure to cleanse thoroughly the inside as well as the outside of each tooth. Don't forget the back teeth. Brush them thoroughly, for there are lots of little crevices back there that are convenient hiding places for food particles.

An unnaturally dry condition of the scalp is common among men and also among women with close bobs. Dandruff, of course, accompanies this condition and the scalp sometimes becomes so parched that the hair loses its gloss and begins to fade even on young heads. In the treatment of this a tonic with an oily base is helpful. Hot oil treatment may also be used before each shampoo.

KEEP HANDS CLEAN

An important factor in keeping the hands in winter is to keep them perfectly clean. Some housewives think that since their hands are in water so much of the time they do not have to wave them. However, much of the water the housewife has her hands in is not clean and should not be allowed to remain on the hands. The hands should be washed in warm, soapy water and rinsed thoroughly after every immersion in clean water. They should then be dried thoroughly. To let the water dry on them is ruinous. Some women have on hand in the kitchen a sweet scented hand ointment that they put on their hands after dish washing is done. This soothes the skin and takes away the odor of dish water that sometimes clings in spite of careful washing.

CORRECT MASSAGE METHOD

Knowledge of how to massage the scalp correctly is most important in growing a healthy head of hair. The purpose of the massage is to stimulate the circulation of blood and exercise the tiny scalp muscles.

Begin the massage by bracing your thumbs at the base of the skull behind and massaging with the fingers upward and forward to the ears. The fingers should not slide over the scalp surface, but should move the skin in a rotary manner. To massage the upper parts of the head, move the thumbs upward and massage with the fingers as before. Grasp the hair near the roots and pull gently all over the scalp.

HANDED DOWN

It pays the woman who has a number of children to buy the best of materials, on account of the possibilities of their being handed down to the next child for a morning romper or dress. It sounds rather hard on the youngest, but it certainly saves the mother time and money.

AN APPETIZING BORDER

Steamed rice makes an attractive border for the platter of chicken or lamb stew.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Extremely smart are hats of black satin trimmed with gold lace rosettes.

Bright scarfs of gossamer yarn in a loose knit are to be a feature of spring.

Lisle hose for traveling are being much worn with low-heeled brown Oxfords.

Sheer gunmetal hosiery is worn with black frocks at the smartest resorts in the south.

A stunning negligee is made of gold and black brocade with a shirred lining of gold chiffon.

A smart little close turban to be worn with a dark fur coat is made from an old piece of paisley draped to fit the head.

Bead bags to carry in the evening are very large and decorative and are mounted on beautiful gold frames.

A lovely coat and bonnet embroidered pink crepe de chine make an ideal gift for the most important member of the house.

A handsome shade for one who is fond of the sea is of cream parchment with a large ship under full sail painted in black.

Capes are to be seen in every spring exhibit. They are mostly short, falling from the shoulders of street frocks and coats.

The uneven hemline, achieved by panels, drapery or godet, is common among formal gowns.

Pastel shades for evening wear are out, but sometimes one sees them in flannel and jersey, for southern sport wear.

A new and lovely version of the Spanish shawl has a white background with huge flowers embroidered in turquoise blue silk.

Short skirts worn over tight breeches, or breeches modified only slightly from the riding kind, have replaced knickers almost entirely for sports wear this winter.

SPORTS STOCKINGS

The newest and most convenient stockings for winter sport wear are of heavy wool and are made with a heavy cuff at the top and still another that fits over the shoe and keeps the snow from sifting through. A small reel of the same wool is included with the stockings for mending purposes

THE CUT BRIM

The cut crown has assumed a distinct vogue in connection with hats since Christmas. This device on an otherwise plain hat enables the wearer to impart to the tilt and fold of the brim that touch of individuality which distinguishes one of these small sport hats from another far more effectively than any trimming.

FOR UNBOBBED HEADS

A new type of hat now separates the bobbed from the unbobbed. So many women are letting their hair grow out again that there has come a demand for a medium head size, as well as medium heights of crown and widths of brim. The majority of these hats are very soft fine felt, with comparatively little trimming.

FOOTWEAR STYLISH

The shorter, rounder and stubbier the toe and the higher the heel the more stylish is the present day oxford. Only a few of the examples of this kind of footwear are plain either in design or material. The lizard, alligator and snake skins are extensively used and the eyelets and laces are occasionally exaggerated.

LAUNDRY HINTS

To dye white shirts khaki, dissolve few cents' worth of permanganate of potash in half a pint of boiling water. Then add to a basin of hot water. Put the shirt in the basin and keep moving it about with a stick till it is the desired color, then take out, dry and iron.

To set the color in any cotton material add a handful of salt and 2 tablespoons of turpentine to 2-4 of a pail of hot water. Allow the goods to remain in the water until it is cold. This will set colors permanently and neither sun nor washing will fade them afterward.

The best way to remove stains on white flannel is to mix equal parts of the yolks of eggs and glycerin, apply the mixture to the stains and allow it to soak for half an hour before the article is washed.

Remember that all colored embroidery should be soaked in cold water in which salt has been added for 10 minutes before washing, and that only the mildest of soaps should be used. Dry them partially, roll up for half an hour and iron.

PREVENTS STEAMING

If you wear glasses and your position is such that you are in and out of various offices during the day, you will be glad to know that if your glasses are wiped off with petroleum ointment and cleaned well each morning, you will not be annoyed when calling on a customer by having him disappear from your vision at your first greeting.

EASIER BURNED

The garbage kettle is hard to keep clean in the winter on account of the freezing of the waste. Many of us find that it is simpler to put our garbage in the furnace in freezing weather. The fire is always shut up on cold days and the refuse is quickly burned without any resultant odor. Of course, do not select the time when the top door is open to burn it.

AUTO ROBES IN STYLE

The auto show has established the fact that auto robes are still in style despite limousine and sedan heating systems. Many are of felted cloth and broadcloth and are lined with the softest of rabbit or wallaby skins. Any kind of pelt may be used, however, according to the purse of the purchaser.

SOFT AND WARM

The woman who enjoys sleeping in a very cold room and yet has difficulty in keeping warm will welcome the idea of a nightgown of fine albatross. These gowns are extremely dainty, with touches of hand work upon them. Some women wear them over their silk gowns.

PRESERVES BOOKS

To keep books on shelves or in cases in good condition, sprinkle them occasionally with powdered camphor.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Queen Mary, of England, starts a bank account for all her maids.

The 1920 census showed that there were nearly 1,800 women chemists in the United States.

Miss Verna Holmes, a qualified engineer in London, has invented a new type of diving apparatus.

Miss Liu Siang Yin, a Chinese girl who speaks five languages fluently, is editor of a Cuban newspaper.

Two of five scholarships awarded at Bryn Mawr college were won by Miss Marion E. Bailey, of Philadelphia.

For the past 50 years, Miss Caroline M. Memins has been directing head of the Hartford, Conn., Public library.

In the recent election held in Jerusalem, the women were allowed to fix their own status on the question of suffrage.

Mrs. Jennie E. White, stenographer in a Los Angeles police station, is a champion sharpshooter, having recently hit the bullseye 84 points out of a possible 100.

BATH TOWEL SETS

Very convenient and practical are the large towels of gaily striped bath toweling made with an opening in the center through which the head may be thrust. Slippers and a bag for the sponge or face cloth accompany the towels.

A HOME-MADE HANGER

How often we wish we had a hanger for our mussed dress or suit. Roll a newspaper and tie a string in the center to hang it by. It will make a very satisfactory coat hanger.

RECIPES

Applesauce Cake: Now that applesauce can be purchased in the can, already made, it is a handy ingredient for cakes.

Mix a half cup of shortening with two cups of sugar, add two eggs beaten light, three and a half cups of flour, two cups of currants, two level teaspoons of soda, two teaspoons of cinnamon, one teaspoon of cloves, with one can of applesauce (No. 2 size) and two cups of cut raisins. Bake in a slow oven.

Orange Trifle: Soak two tablespoons gelatin in one-fourth cup cold water; dissolve in one-half cup of boiling water. Add one and one-fourth cups sugar, one and one-fourth cups of orange juice, one-fourth cup of lemon juice and the grated rind of one orange. Then fold in two and one-half cups of cream whipped until solid. Decorate a melon mold with sections of oranges from which all the white portion and membrane have been removed. Pour in the cream mixture. Chill on ice; remove from mold, garnish with orange jelly and whipped cream.

PRAYER

Mr. Editor: I would like to say to the one who says "Prayer to me is futile," I do think he has some really good ideas on prayer. For he thinks prayer and work go together. As for example, "Now I can understand that people would pump better if their spirits were fortified by prayer." Now that is the greatest need of the day. More real prayer, the kind that looks for and expects an answer. It would cause a great change in this world. Those who have left the greatest impression on this sinful world have been men and women of prayer. Prayer has been the mighty power that has moved not only God, but man. Abraham was a man of prayer, and angels came down from heaven to converse with him. Look at Paul and Silas in prison at Philippi and the results. You remember Stephen as he prayed was not God more real to him than those about him. We read that His disciples said to Him, "Lord, teach us to pray." It is not recorded that He taught them how to preach. It is better to pray like Daniel than to preach like Gabriel. How short the publican's prayer was: "God be merciful to me a sinner!" Peter's prayer, Lord save me or I perish!"

John Knox grasped all Scotland in his strong faith. See a praying Wesley turn more than 10,000 souls to the Lord; Look at the praying Finney, whose prayers accomplished so much.

All through the Scriptures you will find that when believing prayer went up to God, the answer came down. I think it would be a very interesting study to go right through the Bible and see what has happened while God's people have been on their knees calling upon him, certainly the study would greatly strengthen our faith—showing, as it would, how wonderfully God has heard and delivered, when the cry has gone up to Him, for help. To those who have given their whole hearts to Christ He is nearer and dearer than any earthly friend and it is their greatest privilege to talk to Him in prayer.

A. BELIEVER.

An Appreciation

Mr. Editor: From the columns of your paper I wish to express my sincerest appreciation to Rev. Herman A. Hunzinger for having made it possible for the citizens of Norwich to see that splendid picture of Martin Luther.

It was a true picture of that great man of God who boldly and fearlessly proclaimed the truth and his faith in God, and called Europe from her deep slumber. It was a fine piece of educational work. There people saw and now they know who Martin Luther was.

It would be a fine thing if some more historical pictures of the men who have never been disobedient to the heavenly vision, could be shown to the public.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Albert P. Woods, who has resigned as president of Maryland State University to accept appointment as director of scientific work in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is a plant physiologist and pathologist of international reputation. A native of Illinois, he began his career as assistant botanist at the University of Nebraska after his graduation from that institution in 1890. Weak, Ailing Women

Too Often the Kidneys Are at Fault

WOMEN accept many ills as natural to their sex. They fail to realize that inactive kidneys are often the cause of backache, bladder irregularities, dizzy spells, frayed nerves and the tired, draggy feeling that makes so many careworn and ailing. Thousands have found new health by using Doan's Pills. Ask your neighbor!

HERE IS NORWICH PROOF:

Mrs. Lucy Harvey, R. F. D. No. 1, says: "I will never forget the trouble I had with my back and kidneys. For two weeks I was in bed with this ailment and I couldn't turn over without help as I had such pains. A friend told me to try Doan's Pills. Doan's helped me from the first and finally relieved me."

Stories That Recall Others

In Same Category to Bobby

Mother had read an item in a paper, "Beware the Measles Are in Town," to her two children, Bobby, aged three, evidently took the article seriously, for when his daddy came home, he rushed up to him and said:

"Oh, daddy, you must be very careful: there is something awful in town."

The father asked, "Well, what is it, son?"

"Oh, I don't know whether it is weasels or skunks, but it sure is awful."

Speaking of Signatures

The smallboy was reprimanded by his teacher about his writing.

"You are a very poor scribe, Joe," she said severely. "I just don't know what to do about it."

"You don't need to worry about me," he answered quickly. "It don't matter. I'm gonna be a doctor, anyway."

From Small Beginnings

John Edwards, a Great Newspaper Man.

The man who uses the saw and the plane and the hammer need not devote all his time to manual work and to rest and amusement; he has a certain number of hours that he can give to study, if he wishes. John Edwards, one of the greatest of the English newspaper owners, set out in life as a carpenter, without apparent opportunity to do anything to change his position in the world. His father before him had been a carpenter, and so the boy was brought up to hard work. The family had so great need of money that there was little thought of sending the boy to school when once he had gained strength enough to work. John Edwards, however, was made of that stuff that turns naturally toward education, just as a plant turns towards the light. The young man read all the good books he could find, and he made the most of all the chances that presented themselves that would help him to learn.

By the time he was 20 he had made himself so proficient in writing that he was able to follow his ambition and enter into another world than that of manual labor. He became correspondent of a weekly paper printed in London. The mark of all genius is that it finds its greatest opportunities close at hand. Out of chances that others despise, men of genius make the stepping stones to fame. John Edwards gained so much pleasure from his work as correspondent that he took fate into his own hands and went up to London to go farther in the work of journalism, or some 17 years he struggled manfully against the tide, barely able to support himself by what he did. He wrote industriously; he set out in many different adventures in the newspaper and publishing world but fame and fortune turned steadily away from him. Still he persevered—for perseverance is also a mark of genius—and by the time he was 33 he was able to buy a paper that gave him greater opportunity than he had had before. In three or four years his genius, trained in a hard school, led him to make his paper a great success. When he was 52 he had made enough money to buy a still more important paper, the London Echo, an evening paper. This he made an immense success, for into it he poured the full flood of his energy and his years of experience in a struggling upward. He quickly became known as one of the greatest English newspaper men. He made his paper original, interesting, and a strong advocate of great causes. He drove his ideas as he had driven nails in his youth, with hard blows that struck them home. All his past experience contributed to make him a man of power.

Naturally, John Edwards accumulated a great fortune. He remembered the people among whom he had been born and gave large sums to charity and to education, hoping thereby to help others to rise as he had risen.

Little Talks on Thrift

Be Thorough in Everything

The statement that this is the age of specialization may seem trite, yet it embodies one of the most important phases of modern progress.

Those who have succeeded have done so because they did some particular thing in a very skillful manner.

It is within the meaning of thrift to concentrate one's time and energies where they will produce the best results and it is just about as thriftless to scatter your mental forces as it is to scatter your money.

Pick out the lines of activity in which you excel and then bend every effort to perfecting yourself in these lines.

It is better, from the standpoint of results, to be thorough than to be versatile.

Give to your chosen line of work the very best that is in you. Each day will then find you becoming more proficient and consequently more valuable. Remember the old proverb, "the fellow with one idea generally grows rich, while he who calls him a fool dies poor."

Superficiality is the cause of many a personal failure in life. It is one phase of thriftlessness. The problems of life are so large and complex, and the range of human endeavor so far-reaching that effective individual effort must be restricted to certain definite and somewhat limited lines.

It is enough to have succeeded well in just one thing. It is better to attain worth-while results in a single department of life than to have tried many things and failed in all.

Do not be a jack-of-all trades. Be thorough in whatever you undertake. Merely skimming the surface is self deception. Learn to do your job so well that no one else can do it as well as you can, in due time the opportunity will come for greater tests and responsibilities.—American Society for Thrift.

If there were no other fools in the world we would be more dissatisfied with ourselves than ever.

ANOTHER MEMORIAL ROOM FOR SHELTERING ARMS

A new gift of a memorial room for the Sheltering Arms building is announced by the building committee.

This is a memorial for Mrs. Harriet Clark Tourtellotte, long a valued member of the United Congregational church, which is given by her daughter, Mrs. Herbert M. Lerou. The gift is a single bed-room with its furnishings, which is presented on a plan a little different from that outlined by the daughters of the late Arthur H. Brewer and given in memory of their parents, but is one equally acceptable to the committee. Mrs. Lerou wishes instead of endowing the room to furnish it and, when needed, to replenish those furnishings. This means a gift of $550 for the construction of the room and whatever in addition she and the equipment committee decide will make it attractive and comfortable for occupancy.

Mr. Lerou has added to this splendid gift another, a chair for the living room, and it is hoped that this is only the beginning of interest of this kind to be demonstrated by the community.

The committee in charge of the equipment, Mrs. Frederic W. Cary, Mrs. Walter T. Camp and Mrs. Charles H. Preston, will be glad to explain their plans regarding the furnishings to any one whose interest in making old people as happy as possible in their declining years will prompt them to make a gift.

SNOW VANISHING BEFORE RAIN WITH LIGHTNING AT NIGHT

Nature came to the aid of harassed road and street workers in city and country Sunday by contributing an afternoon and evening of rain that did the work of thousands of shovelers and hundreds of trucks and snowploughs in clearing away the snow. Between 3 and 5:30 Sunday evening several flashes of sharp lightning with the accompanying rolls of thunder were thrown in for spectacular effect, while the mild spring-like temperature, the pouring rain and the melting snows converted the streets into running brooks in the center of the city.

With the first thunder storm of the season, there were predictions that the "winter's back had been broken." Those who believe in weather signs are now looking for warm weather and an early spring. Others who claim years of experience as their guide, when it comes to weather predictions, state that freezing weather may be looked for with a few more sizeable storms in sight.

Anticipating the rise in temperature and the probability of rain Saturday night, Street Commissioner John C. Donovan had taken the precaution to have catch basins all over the city opened up so that the surface water could be carried into the sewers. As the gutters generally were banked full of snow this preparation for rain meant shoveling channels through the snowbanks from the street to the gutters, so that the flowing water would have no obstacle to running off in the regular way.

On some city streets there were fully three inches of water. Reckless auto drivers ploughing along sent rain and slush flying over the sidewalks and many a pedestrian received an unwelcome shower as some heedless driver sped by. The drivers in return received some very uncomplimentary words from their slush soaked victims.

On the country roads the rains made the traveling hazardous as it washed off the snow and exposed the bare surface of ice that was on the roads when they were covered by the big snow of over a week ago.

Quick results of the rain and melting snow will no doubt be seen in the reservoirs as a large volume of water will be discharged into them and it would be no surprise if the two city reservoirs reach the full-pond point, which will be the first time that level has been attained for many months.

The prospects are good also for high water in the rivers, the Shetucket, the Yantic and the Thames, as there is much ice to break up and come floating down with the flood of water.

SPEAKS IN COMMEMORATION OF GIORDANO BRUNO

Sunday morning Rev. V. Panizzoli, pastor of the Italian Mission at the Central Baptist church, spoke on Giordano Bruno one of the leading philosophers of the Renaissance. The speaker said Italy has given many great men to the world and Giordano Bruno is one of those who for his liberal views of the universe and the church 326 years ago was burned at the stake. It was on February 17, 1600 that he died for his principles, but his principles are still alive and the erection of monuments to him in many cities all over Italy is evidence of this fact.

When 14 years of age Bruno entered the convent of St. Dominic in Naples where he distinguished himself for his originality and love for philosophy. He loved progress and truth. He wanted to see the universe for himself free from any cloud of dogmas or traditions. He was animated with the spirit of investigation. He wanted to know things in their clear form. He condemned people for believing things because somebody else had said so. He wanted that every man should do his own investigation. His religious beliefs were that a man is not judged according to his belief, but rather according to the life he lives. He declared religion to be a matter of conduct and character and not a system of dogmas.

The speaker in applying his teachings for the men of today said that is the real need of our time: to investigate and never take anything for granted because somebody has said it. Have vision in our life and sound principles to dominate our whole program.

MADE DOUBLE-HEADER IN LIQUOR ARRESTS

State Policeman Fred Caron, accompanied by Officer Watson, made a double-header in this city Sunday afternoon in a liquor violation case, when the officers seized half a dozen jugs of alleged moonshine at the home of Mrs. Stanisia Teczar of 16 Yantic street and followed this up by arresting Mike Liput, a grocer of 11 Thames street, as the woman's source of supply.

The officers alleged evidence of a sale made by the woman who told them where she had bought the liquor. When they took Liput to her home, she identified him, although he denied selling to her but she declared she had paid him $25 for five jugs of liquor.

Liput was brought to police headquarters where he was locked up until he got bail but the woman was not brought in as a physician told the state policemen that she was too ill to be taken from the house.

GAVE INTERESTING MESSAGES AT SPIRITUAL MEETING

Notwithstanding the inclemency of Sunday's weather, two good sized congregations greeted Mrs. Mary E. Birchenough at the Spiritual academy, and listened attentively to her splendid work. She has a very easy delivery, and brings home her teachings in a forceful compelling way, so that her hearers can carry home her lessons, in a way that won't be forgotten.

Mrs. Charles A. Dowsett gave much pleasure at both services by her delightfully rendered violin solos. The announcement was made that Mrs. Birchenough is giving a message service at the Spiritual academy tonight (Monday).

HARD COAL SUPPLY LOW WITH NORWICH DEALERS

According to local coal dealers it will be a month or six weeks before anthracite coal will begin to arrive in Norwich from the mines. One local coal dealer pointed out Sunday night that it will be two weeks before the mines will be ready to work and it will be sometime after that before the coal will be actually on the way to points east.

With little or no hard coal in the local coal dealers' bins the people of Norwich will have to burn substitutes and bituminous coal for the rest of the winter. There is a fairly plentiful supply of West Virginia bituminous coal on hand and local users, once they become accustomed to burning it, find it very satisfactory. One dealer said Sunday night that he had a small supply of hard coal on hand but that orders have piled in so rapidly the company was forced to stop selling two or three days ago fearing that they might be oversold. The company's small supply of anthracite has been dealt out in quarter ton or half ton lots.

From the larger cities in the east come reports of continued effort to keep the public buying bituminous coal for two reasons, first because of the depleted anthracite bins and secondly, to show that the public have become tired of coal strikes and to show that soft coal will answer as an excellent substitute for anthracite.

Unless a person is familiar with the method of burning low volatile coal they are very likely to experience more or less trouble from coal gas and smoke. There are certain rules which should be followed in burning soft coal to get the best results, and if these rules are followed soft coal will be found to be as useful as anthracite.

How to Burn Semi-Bituminous

For the benefit of the public there is published herewith a sketch showing how to burn semi-bituminous, low volatile, smokeless coal in kitchen ranges and furnaces and directions as follows:

(2) Always keep the slide in the door of your stove or furnace open so as to allow air to pass over the top of the fire. This is required to burn the gasses.

(3) When applying fresh coal always leave bright fire showing. Place the fresh coal in one end of the fire box leaving a spot of fire for draft and to ignite the gasses.

(4) Use "semi-bituminous low-volatile coal" just like anthracite except that when putting on fresh coal always have some bright fire showing. Push back the fire and put fresh coal in one end of stove or front of furnace.

(5) Either coarse or fine semi-bituminous coal can be burned by this method.

GUIDE FOR BURNING SEMI-BITU-MINOUS COAL

Y. M. C. A. MEN HOLD MEETING AT THE JAIL

Sunday morning at 9:15, a religious service was conducted at the local jail for the prisoners. Several hymns were sung, Hugh Kinder rendered two vocal solos much to the pleasure of all present. General Secretary Edwin Hill read the scriptures and offered prayer, Edmund A. Prentice delivered the address, and he held the closest attention of his audience. Among other things Mr. Prentice said: "Sometime since a man was in a cave in Kentucky, and a huge stone fell on him in a cave in, and there he was for days and days, and finally died. Why was it that thousands of men offered their services in an attempt to rescue; it was because they wanted to save just one man. Only a short time since a great ocean liner turned about face to go to the rescue of another ship in distress, and all because there were human lives on that ship. What a great value there is placed on human life, and yet men seem to place no value on their souls. I want to see you come to your best, but you cannot do so unless you accept Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour. Some years ago there was a fish peddler down on Long Island, who used an old brown horse in his peddling. One day a man who knew horses, came along and saw that old brown horse and asked the peddler if he would sell the horse and the peddler said yes. How much, asked the man; ninety dollars said the owner; the trade was made and the man took the old brown horse away. In about a year, that horse began racing and he made the fastest mile up to that time; it was the famous Rairus. This horse might have stayed on the fish peddler's cart and amounted to nothing, but he had in him great possibilities when he was given a chance; so you men may amount to a great deal if you will come out from your old self and let Jesus Christ fit you for your best place in life. Men, why don't you step out from the old life into the better life?"

Several of the men asked to be remembered in prayer.

AUDIENCE FILLS THEATRE TO SEE LUTHER PICTURE

An interested audience that filled the Breed theatre Sunday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock saw the moving picture, Martin Luther, His Life and Time, which was presented under the auspices of the First Evangelical Lutheran church.

The pastor of the church, Rev. H. Hunzinger, spoke briefly before the showing of the picture. The music for the film was played by William F. Habekotte, which was a notable addition to the picture as the score included selections from the old masters such as Bach, Handel and Beethoven.

The opening scenes depict the conditions in Europe which led to the need of a Luther. They show the burning of John Huss, Frederick the Fourth at Canoess, and the depravity of the Vatican.

The main theme of the picture then follows, showing the birth of Luther, his early training and education at Eisenach and Erfurt, the dramatic incident which led to his entering the monastery of the Augustines, and his disillusionment at Rome. The picture then carries along with a grand sweep from his realization that "The Just Shall Live by Faith" through the high notes of the 95 Theses, the debate at Leipsic and the Trial at Worms.

The awakened Luther, near-martyr, man, and over the leader, is the carried into enforced exile at the Wartburg, where he makes his other great contribution to religious freedom, the translation of the New Testament into the language of the people. He leaves the protection of the Wartburg to stem the tide of iconoclasm and leads his people into safer channels of worship and public order.

The film closes with brief glimpses of Luther's marriage, and his life as parent and preacher.

The church committee in charge of the showing of the picture comprised Rev. Mr. Hunzinger as general director, Albert Werth, chairman, Ernest Zachae, treasurer, Miss Frieda Retkovsky in the ticket booth, Miss Irene Werth assisting with the tickets and Miss Bertha Thome, Anna Retkovsky, Louise Krauss, and Rose Thiel as ushers.

"TO IMITATE JOHN OR JUDAS?" PRIEST'S LENTEN INQUIRY

Painless dentistry, painless operations, balloon tires, painless education, painless religion, possibly Edison may achieve even painless death in this age of ease, luxury, success pleasure-madness, was the thought of Rev. John J. Reilly, preaching at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday. Father Reilly had just read Bishop Nilan's Lenten regulations. At this juncture, when mankind is so self-satisfied, the Catholic church again raises the voice of authority of warning, as did John the Baptist—admonishes her millions of children that too great ease means weakening of the will, hence failing whenever temptation comes. That while they may appreciate the blessedness of Bethlehem, the peace of Bethany, the glory of Tabor, after all it is for them to value more seriously the ascent to Calvary, the opportunity to repeat in their daily lives the example of a Saviour, Who taught that pain is the antidote to sin, that small and secret denials make for saintliness, that sacrifice, mortification, strengthen the soul.

The eloquent young preacher put the observance of Lent before his great congregation wholly in the light of generosity with a Redeemer who has given each of us so much. There is nothing edifying about fasting, abstention from pleasures, denial in the matter of self-indulgence, if this is done grudgingly. There was one who knew Christ, who had Christ, lived with Him, had the enjoyment of His presence, yet when the opportunity afforded he gave Christ away, sold Him basely for money—the traitorous, the unspeakable Judas. By contrast the preacher set forth the character of John, as an exemplar for those who in their generous return for Christ's benefits would willingly take upon themselves the discipline of sacrifice and denial and mortification which He has avowed must be the lot of those who profess themselves His followers.

John, in his love for and imitation of Christ, Judas, the base, the unspeakable, were contrasted in an appeal to reason which went home to every individual soul.

Later Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin in giving holy communion, the crowds at the altar rail increasing as Lent draws near. The Junior choir sang very pleasingly and the accompaniments and interludes by Organist Hen J. LaFontaine added to the beauty of the service.

SUZANNE AND HELEN HAVE BUT ONE MORE OPPONENT TO MEET BEFORE FINALS

CANNES, France, Feb. 4—(AP)—Both Helen Wills and Suzanne Lenglen, the American and French tennis champions, came through today to the semi-finals of the singles in the Carlton tennis tournament. Mlle. Lenglen's victory was more impressive than that of Miss Wills; she defeated Lady Roundway, 6-0, 6-0, thereby maintaining her unbroken perfect score, while the American girl lost two games to Miss Eileen Bennett in the first set, the score being 6-3, 6-0. Thus Miss Wills' series of love sets with which she has won since the tournament opened came to an end.

Suzanne played like one inspired, and simply overwhelmed Lady Roundway, who is rated even with Miss Bennett in both English and Riviera tennis. Lady Roundway and Miss Bennett have met twice, the youthful player winning from the veteran once, and losing the second time.

There now remain only two obstacles to a meeting between Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Wills over the net—Mlle. Henriette Contostavos, who will try to bar Suzanne's way, but should be easy for the French champion to overcome, and Mlle. Didi Vlasto, who will endeavor to keep victory from Helen on her way to the finals; but the California girl has already defeated Mlle. Vlasto twice, and is looked to repeat that achievement. Thus, outside of interference by rain, the match should take place as arranged at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Miss Bennett gave Miss Wills a great battle in the first set today as the following point score indicated:

Wills	4	4	5	4	4	4	3	4	—35
Bennett	3	1	10	2	3	2	5	3	—26

Miss Wills improved as the match progressed then made a better showing in the second set:

Wills	4	6	4	4	6	4	6	4	—28
Bennett	0	4	0	2	3	4	0	0	—10

The French champion allowed Lady Roundway only six points in the entire match; she won eight love games, and not a single game went to deuce. The score:

First Set
Lenglen	4	4	4	4	4	4			—24
Roundway	0	0	2	0	1	1			—4
Second Set
Lenglen	4	4	4	4	4	4			—24
Roundway	0	0	4	0	2	0			—3

Suzanne was steadiness personified, placing the ball wherever she pleased with uncanny precision. Helen sat throughout the match watching her prospective opponent of Tuesday. She nodded and smiled to friends, but said nothing.

Naturally Miss Wills has improved since her first appearance on the riviera courts three weeks ago. She played a more varied and diversified game today than she has ever shown. She worked her fast forehand and crosscourt drives with electrical speed, and her backhand was the best seen in these parts. Once in a while she would drop a little puny shot over the net for an irretrievable point, catching Miss Bennett on the backline, where the English girl was expecting a tremendous drive. But her overhead game is still lacking steadiness. Should she lose to Mlle. Lenglen it is thought that her volleying will be responsible, as her ground strokes are considered fully up to the Lenglen standard.

"I want to reach the finals without the loss of a game," said Mlle. Lenglen after the match. "If I am going to lose a game in this tournament they will have to get it out of me at the point of a gun."

The correspondent asked: "Does this mean that you expect to beat Miss Wills in straight love sets?"

Mlle. Lenglen replied: "Never mind about Miss Wills. I am talking about the tournament, not the finals, I wish you would not keep pestering me with questions about Miss Wills."

Miss Wills said: "I am satisfied with my match against Miss Bennett. She is a remarkable young player and will be heard from before two years, or I miss my guess."

Miss Wills has made a great hit with the Riviera tennis followers, and she received far greater applause upon entering the courts today than Mlle. Lenglen

ILLINOIS BECOMES CONTENDER FOR BIG TEN HONORS

CHICAGO, Feb. 14—(AP)—The rise of Illinois from obscure sixth place to runner-up to Wisconsin and the decline of Ohio State, 1925 titlist, into the second division were features of the western conference basketball campaign as it entered on its last month of play.

The Badgers' only game of the week was a victory over Chicago and gave them a better grip on first place. The Illinois team went up the ladder, after a three weeks' idleness, by downing Purdue and the Buckeyes, who took a second defeat from the hands of lowly Northwester, Sans "Moon" Baker.

Purdue's victory over its neighbor, Indiana, enabled the Boilermakers to climb over Ohio State and dispute fourth place with Indiana.

Indiana holds five of the seven leading places on the western conference basketball high scoring roster. Spradling, Purdue captain, who finished sixth in the standing last season, has tightened his tenacious hold on the peak, adding 16 markers during the week for a total of 75.

TILDEN BEATS RICHARDS IN BROOKLYN TENNIS FINALS

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—(AP)—William T. Tilden, national tennis champion, defeated Vincent Richards, of Yonkers, N. Y., today in the finals of the Brooklyn Heights Casino invitation tournament, 6-3, 6-4, 11-9. Richards and Francis T. Hunter captured doubles honors from Tilden and Manuel Alonzo, 7-9, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

The third set of the singles match was a bitter battle with Tilden driving splendidly from the back court and Richards responding with excellent service which kept him in the running.

When the doubles match came the champion admitted that he was tired but he played brilliantly in the first set. In the third, trailing at 4-5, a serve by Tilden was declared out and the champion argued for a moment. The incident appeared to throw him off his game for the remainder of the match.

COLUMBIA STILL HOLDS LEAD IN BASKETBALL

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—(AP)—Revised figures show an interesting duel for the individual scoring honors in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball league between Captain Carl Loeb of Princeton and "Red" Laub of Columbia.

The Pennsylvania guards, Goldblatt and Evenport, are tied for third place with 31 each.

Columbia, with four victories and no defeats, maintains its lead in the circuit with Dartmouth in second place as the result of a single defeat administered by the leaders.

The team and individual standings follow:

Team	W	L	Pc	Pts	O Pts
Columbia	4	0	1.000	141	85
Dartmouth	4	1	.800	108	102
Penn	3	3	.500	147	141

FOURTEEN TEAMS START IN CHICAGO BIKE RACE

CHICAGO, Feb. 24—(AP)—Fourteen teams pedaled away tonight at nine o'clock at the Coliseum in the international six day bicycle races which close next Saturday night at 11 o'clock after 146 hours of wheeling.

Nearly every rider of note not tied up by European contracts, faced the starter's gun. Favorite combinations of other races have been separated with the result that the possible winning combinations were hard to pick.

Carl Stockholm and Arnest Kockler, partners of many races, have both taken new partners. Stockholm rides with Beckman and Harry Horan is Kockler's partner. Bobby Walthour and Reggie McNamara are teamed and are considered one of the strongest combinations. McNamara recently won the Berlin race while paired with Horan. Seven nations are represented among the riders.

FABER RETURNS CONTRACT UNSIGNED TO READING CLUB

Joe Faber of Jewett City has returned his 1926 contract to Manager Shag O'Shaughnessy of the Reading International League club unsigned. Joe is not satisfied with the terms of the salary and is looking for a salary raise. Last year Faber batted for .330 in the International League and for .300 with York in the New York-Pennsylvania league. His fielding for 163 games was .965 which would make a good basis for a salary increase.

JEWETT CITY PROS TO PLAY TWO GAMES THIS WEEK

The Jewett City Pros have two games slated this week, one on Wednesday evening at Jewett City with the South Manchester team, and another the following night at Danielson with the Danielson Town team. Both these games are first class basketball attractions and the Pros have a busy week cut out for them.

BATTERY E TEAM AT LAST WINS VICTORY

Battery E Basketball players demonstrated on Saturday night at the Westerly state armory on Dixon street in Westerly, that it was possible for that team to win a basketball contest when they defeated the fast Delta aggregation by the score of 37 to 21. Although the game was not the fastest played on the armory court, nevertheless, the Battery showed good pass work and an ability to shoot baskets. The Deltas played Smith at center for E. Turco of their regular lineup. For Delta D. Turco with seven baskets and two foul throws just nosed out Battery player Lamb with seven field goals to his credit.

Haslum of Rhode Island college refereed the game while Referee Driggs assisted in timekeeping.

Thunberg's records verified by Harry Noah, vice president of the Middle Atlantic Skating association; Referee John Harding, of the New England Skating association, and the two contestants, were made in the mile race Friday, and in the half mile and mile and a half yesterday. Jewtraw's only victory came in the 220-yard sprint on Friday.

HUGHIE JENNINGS IS ILL WITH GRIP

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 14—Hughie Jennings, assistant manager of the New York Giants, is at Asheville, N. C., resting from the strain of the 1925 season and from an attack of grip which kept him in bed at his home here for a week last month. Dr. Martin T. O'Malley, his physician, announced in a statement tonight. Dr. O'Malley denied reports published today that Jennings had been sent to Asheville because he was suffering from tuberculosis.

"When Hughie came home last fall after the close of the season—which was a strenuous season for him," Dr. O'Malley said, "he was pretty well tired out and fatigued. At that time I gave him an examination. He was by no means a sick man, but about three or four weeks ago, he suffered an attack of the grip, which sent him to bed.

"A complete rest was necessary to prevent any further breakdown, and Atlantic City, which was first suggested, was passed up because he would hardly get the quiet and rest which he needed at the shore. I recommended Ashville, and a week ago he left here. The fact that he attended a meeting of a board of directors of a local bank, of which he is a member, the day prior to his departure, shows that he was not seriously ill.

He left here for New York on Saturday, and left there for Asheville on Sunday. His car has been shipped to him, and he will probably be driving around soon.

"Hughie can hardly hope to do anything for three months. We are satisfied that with a real rest for that period, he'll be O. K., although he can which he did in 1925. He has been instructed to rest, as I said, merely to prevent any possible serious trouble in the future."

AMERICAN TRACK STARS HANG UP NEW MARKS DURING PAST WEEKS

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—(AP)—American athletes, battered down by the remarkable Paavo Nurmi of Finland in indoor competition a year ago, have turned back the 1926 invasion and apparently have entered up a series of record-breaking performances.

Charles Hoff of Norway must be regarded as a specialist for he has demonstrated in several appearances that there is no man in the east to match his pole vaulting. The feat of Paul Harington of Notre Dame in scaling 13 feet, 1-1-2 inches, at Urbana, Ills., last night while Hoff was setting a record of 13 feet, 3 inches, at the Wilco meet in Brooklyn, may indicate the presence in the middle west of a worthy opponent.

Hoff is no great in his department that his appearances are taking the form of exhibitions. Last night in Brooklyn, the leap of Roy Slagle of the University of Pennsylvania for second place was more than a foot short of the Norwegian's. The third man registered 11 feet, 6 inches, almost two feet below the record. This competition serves only to give Hoff his records.

Hubert Houben, German sprinter and Gordon Goodwin, English walker, have sailed for home after meeting defeat in every start, Goodwin having participated in only one race, Adrian Paulen, the middle distance from Holland, has failed to win a race and is now suffering from a cold. He may be out of competition for some days.

With these featured performances gone, Americans have tackled the records in order to provide the spectators with some reason for enthusiasm. Last night at the Wilco games four were beaten, one was established and another was equalled twice. F. Morgon Taylor, hurdler of the Illinois A. C., was the outstanding athlete, breaking one mark and equalling another.

Taylor flashed over the low barriers for 50 years in 5 3-10 seconds, shattering by three-tenths of a second a mark established 17 years ago by Forrest Smithson of San Francisco. Then in the high hurdles he and Carl Christiernson of the Newark A. C., equalled the 50-yard figures.

Alan Helfrich, Penn State product reduced his own time for 500 meters by four-fifths of a second, flashing across the line in 1:05. Willie Plant, American walking champion, who several times has defeated the Olympic 10,000-meter champion, Ugo Frigerio of Italy, was 1 1-5 seconds faster than the record in a 3,000-meter event.

A list of outstanding American performers in doff meets to date follows:

Sprints—Loren Murchison, Illinois A. C.

Hurdles—F. Morgan Taylor, Illinois A. C.

Middle distances—Alan Helfrich, New York A. C.

Distance runs—Willis Ritola, Finnish-American A. C.

High jump—Harold Osborn, Illinois A. C.

Two meets are scheduled for Brooklyn this week, the Norwegian games Wednesday and the Metropolitan A. A. U. program Saturday. At the Norwegian games Hoff will make his last running appearance in a race at 500 yards and on both nights, he will continue his attack upon the pole vault figures.

All of the American stars are entered for the Metropolitan events and many of them will co-star with Hoff in the Norwegian competition.

NOT IODINE, BUT BOOZE, SWALLOWED, BY NEW LONDON MAN, SCARING WIFE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 14—Arthur Dunmire, 311 Williams street, gave his wife a fright and caused a physician and the police considerable trouble, early Saturday morning. Dunmire declared that he had swallowed a quantity of iodine with suicidal intent, when in reality he had not made any attempt upon his life and probably arrived at the suicidal idea after having imbibed freely of liquor.

Dunmire arrived at his home during the early morning hours and to his wife stated that he had taken the poison. Mrs. Dunmire immediately summoned a physician, who ordered Dunmire transferred to Lawrence-Memorial hospital as a precautionary measure, although Dunmire did not display symptoms of having taken poison. Dunmire refused to go to the hospital and the police were requested to assist the physician in having his order carried out. Patrolmen William Riordan and Augustus Ray were dispatched to the Dunmire house and the supposed suicide victim then decided to enter the ambulance. At the hospital Dunmire's stomach was washed out and no semblance of poisoning was found.

Dunmire, several months ago, operated an automobile at Quaker Hill, which car overturned with its occupants. The accident resulted in the almost instantaneous death of Ray Nelson, a former resident of Uncasville.

MARKED MONEY TRAPS LEON NEFF, OF WATERFORD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 14—Leon Neff, residing on Clark Lane, Waterford, and employed in the transferring of mail matter between the Waterford postoffice and the Waterford railroad station, is scheduled to appear before Judge Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court Monday afternoon, on a charge of theft.

Dimmock has made a practice of waiting on himself in the supposed purchase of smoking material at the general store of William C. Saunders, in which building the postoffice is located and of which Mr. Saunders is also postmaster. Neff followed the habit of taking whatever he wanted in the way of cigars and was supposed to have deposited money for the smokes in a drawer near the cigar case. From time to time Mr. Saunders detected a shortage of money when the day's receipts were counted and suspicion pointed to Neff as being the thief. Several days ago it was decided to lay a trap for Neff and prior to his arrival from the railroad station with mail, every coin in the cash drawer was filed on the edge and the bills were marked, after the entire contents of the draw had been counted. When Neff appeared with the mail he went to the cigar case and took several smokes and was supposed to have dropped money in the drawer to pay for them. After Neff had left the store, he was confronted by Constables Peabody and Brigham, who engaged Neff in conversation until such time as Postmaster Saunders had counted the contents of the drawer. When this was done it was discovered that the drawer had been relieved of $1.75. Postmaster Saunders informed the constables to that effect and Neff was escorted to the fire house of the Waterford department, where he relieved himself of what money he had in his clothing. The marked money was included in the sum that Neff displayed and his arrest followed. Neff is married. His salary for carrying the mail is but $15 per week.

NEW LONDON RAILROAD MEN PREPARE FOR COAL SHIPMENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 14—Employes in the freight service of the New Haven railroad are anticipating enormous traffic in the transportation of coal, when the mines begin sending out their product, in about three weeks. All the coal that comes to New England except such as is transferred in barges, must come over the lines of the New Haven railroad, and that quantity will be vast, for the supply of coal in New England now is meagre. The railroads and manufacturing establishments stocked up before the strike of miners began the first of September, 1925, but others did not have the foresight to do so, even if they had the cash to pay for the coal and the places in which it could be stored. Dealers here do not anticipate that there will be any considerable quantity of coal received at New London until some months have elapsed. When mining ceased at the outbreak of the strike the mines were practically deserted and things have been allowed to remain unused in that time. Now everything must be made ready for use, and that will take a considerable period after next Wednesday when the agreement to return to operations is perfected. The yards here have disposal of all the coal of every quality they could produce during recent weeks, and the bins were never so nearly empty as they are now. The price is up to $18 a ton for soft coal and for the mixtures that can be supplied. Dealers declare they cannot remember a period that is the counterpart of that which they have just passed through.

The New London police early this morning, were requested by the Providence authorities, to be on the lookout for two youths, who had escaped from the Rhode Island State reformatory. The youths are William Douglass and Raymond Evans. Douglass is described as being 17, five feet two inches in height, dark brown hair, blue eyes and wearing the reformatory regulation clothes. Evans is described as being 17, five feet 10 inches in height, light hair, blue eyes and fair complexion, and is also attired in the reformatory uniform.

Superintendent Darrow, of the street department had a gang of workmen cleaning the snow and ice from the lateral street connecting with State and Bank streets today. They got rid of hundreds of tons of material that clogged the streets and made traffic dangerous. The refuse was dumped into the river at the foot of State street, where it provided food for sea gulls. There was a large quantity of vegetable matter in the snow that was cleared away and this floated on the surface of the harbor where it could be picked up by the gulls which flocked about the dumping spots by hundreds. The sea gulls get much of their food from the vessels that throw refuse into the harbor, but they had an abundant supply today. These birds are becoming tame, as hunger comes to them and they perch upon the spiles of the piers awaiting the appearance of food in the water. Some of the gulls are beautiful specimens large and fat and of elegant plumage.

The rain today came to the assistance of the street laborers in getting rid of the ice and fog lent a hand in the same direction, cutting the ice so that the streets were veritable rivers during much of the day.

There has been so much in the way of entertainment outside the theatres during the week that the patronage of the playhouses suffered diminished patronage. The coming week the attractions will be of a higher class of excellence than is usual.

A report from the committee is expected Monday evening on the hearing by the compensation board on the establishment of a building line on the east side of Bank street. It is generally agreed that this proposed undertaking will be a more expensive one than was anticipated if it is carried into consummation. So the report of the compensation board and the director of law, the latter as to the legal phases of the proposition, will be of interest to citizens generally.

Miss Gladys Ronan of 20 Williams street; Miss Josephine Jones, 57 Colman street; Mrs. Lewis Main, Noank; William Gender, United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 236, state pier; Mrs. Carl Cutler, West Mystic and Hugh McPartland, 288 Ocean avenue, patients at Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, were dismissed Saturday.

The funeral of John Saunders was held Saturday morning at 9.45 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, a high mass of requiem being sung by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan. The bearers were Anthony Alexander, Samuel Sousa, John Burgess, John Enos, Frank Silva and Manuel Costa. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral of James H. Goff, of 45 West Colt street, was held Saturday morning at 9.45 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by many mourners. A high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger. The bearers were John Cullen, William G. Murphy, Thomas Cahey, Sr., William F. Murphy, Michael Ahearn and Frank Quinn. Among the attendants at the services was a delegation of members of Knights of Columbus, Mr. Goff having been one of the order's oldest members. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Deeds transferring building lots on Lower Boulevard from the Pequot Realty company to Eleanor B. Simms and Albert J., and Gertrude Brewsters have been received for record at the office of the town clerk.

Mrs. Annie Stanners has sold a tract of land on Park street to John F., and Mary Montague.

Supernumerary Patrolman Henry Sylvia has been relieved of patrol duty by Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney. The removal of the officer from duty was the result of all of the patrolmen who have been off duty because of illness or injury having returned to duty. Supernumerary Sylvia has been performing regular patrol duty about a year and will probably be reassigned to duty in the spring or early summer.

Francis Sullivan, 23, a painter, was taken into custody early this morning charged with intoxication. He will be given a hearing tomorrow morning in the police court. Sullivan was in the vicinity of the union station, being on railroad property, when he was discovered there by Sergeant Edward McGrath of the force of special agents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, who arrested Sullivan.

An automobile owned and driven by Shirley B. Kilbourne, 135 Ashcroft street, struck Ethel Weiner, 5, of 61 Cott street late Saturday afternoon, the child sustaining bruises and a slight cut on the head.

The child was on Bank street, near the Empire theatre and had been left unattended by her mother while the latter entered a store to do some shopping. Suddenly the girl darted into the street in an effort to reach the opposite sidewalk and as she did so, she ran directly in front of the automobile, which was traveling in a northerly direction. Before Kilbourne could bring the car to a stop the child was knocked down. Kilbourne conveyed the girl to a nearby drug store, where it was disclosed that her injuries were not of a serious nature. At the same time the mother appeared at the pharmacy and took charge of the child.

An automobile truck operated by Joseph J. Holland of Bradford, R. I., was in collision with a trolley car of the Groton and Stonington Traction company, Saturday night at the corner of State and Main streets. Practically the only damage occasioned was the smashing of a window of the trolley car. Holland reported the accident at the police station and stated that he would pay for whatever damage had been incurred.

Frederick H. Gavitt, of Bank street and William Elwood, bank night watchman, have returned from New York, where they attended the annual dog show in Madison Square Garden.

Alonzo Ashcroft, 72, mate of the New London Line steamer of the New England Steamship company's line, plying between New London and New York, died suddenly of cerebral hemorrhage at his former residence, 63 Ransdell street, late Friday. He is survived by his son, Harry A. Ashcroft, 63 Ransdell street, and by a granddaughter, Miss Bernice Ashcroft, of the same address. He is also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Mr. Ashcroft had been employed on various steamers of the New England Steamship company's lines, but mostly on the New London line, for 56 years. During this lengthy period of time, Mr. Ashcroft had been employed principally as mate, and in which capacity he was probably the oldest mate in term of service on any of the Sound line steamers. Mr. Ashcroft was born in Northfield, Vt., and with his father, removed to Poquonoc when the former was but nine years of age. When 15 years of age he entered the employ of the steamship company, gradually rising to a rating as mate. Mr. Ashcroft had enjoyed apparent sound health until Friday when the stroke that caused his demise occurred.

Patrolman William Graham, late this afternoon, discovered a litter of kittens in a bag on the door step of a residence on Main street, the kittens have been deposited where they were found apparntly by some one who desired to get rid of them. Dog Warden John Sweezy was notified and took charge of the animals.

One of the nurses at Lawrence hospital communicated with the police early this evening, stating that Ocean avenue was flooded and that she had to wade knee-high in water in order to cross that thoroughfare.

Mrs. Martell, 277 Pequot avenue, complained to the police, late this afternoon, that some one had taken possession of her automobile without her permission and that when the car was returned to her two of the fenders were damaged.

Desk Sergeant Frank Howard is absent from his duties at the police station, being confined to his residence, Walker street, by illness. During his absence from duty Patrolman Timothy Sullivan is officiating as desk sergeant.

Warren C. Duane and Horace Cross were taken into custody shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by Constables Peabody and Brigham, Waterford, charged with poultry theft. The accused were brought to the police station here and locked up and will be given a hearing in the Waterford town court late Monday afternoon.

A young married couple, the husband stationed at the Submarine Base, were brought to the police station early this evening by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Augustus Ray, following the police receiving a complaint that a row was in progress at a Brewer street residence. When the couple were questioned, the husband of the young woman accused the latter of wrong doing and exhibited his face to show what he received when he rebuked his young wife. The husband declared that when he remonstrated with his wife she scaled a dinner plate at him with the result that the plate cut him the entire length of the nose. The couple were married last December, by Justice of the Peace Perry J. Hollandersky. After Lieut. James C. Sullivan had given the couple some sound advice they were allowed to return to their home, but with the assurance that if any further disturbances occurred they would be lodged in a cell.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

"Kick," "pep" and "jazz," stirred together, whipped into consistency and spread thickly over a plot full of love scenes and thrills—what a meaty fruit cake the new bill at the Breed theater is!

If you would laugh, snicker, smile or chortle, see "We Moderns" at that playhouse with Colleen Moore at her best. That little whirligig of giggles and grimaces is back at it again, this time as a British prototype of the character she has made famous upon th American screen.

There is, incidentally, a world of worth-while sight-seeing in "We Moderns, the story of which is laid in London. There the picture was made, and there the audience is transported on viewing the, moving panoramas—perhaps the most gorgeous background with which a regular book picture ever has been supplied.

Miss Moore is surrounded by such universally liked talent as Jack Mulhall, Carl Miller, Claude Gillingwater, Clarissa Selwynn, Cave Moore and others. The story, produced by John McCormick and developed under the direction of John Francis Dillon, easily shows the earmarks of June Mathis, master scenario, who gave the screen public such prime entertainment as "Four Horsemen" and "Blood and Sand."

"We Moderns" is a screen version of Israel Zangwills novel of post-war frivolities in London society.

Al-Pierre Tabarin—Willimantic

As the period of curtailed social functions during the Lenten season approaches the management of the Al-Pierre Tabarin of Willimantic have made extensive arrangements to give to dance and music lovers and the hundreds who appreciate a "good-time" something really big and worthwhile in the form of a Mardi Gras dance, Tuesday night. The Peerless orchestra whoch has been for some years a powerful box office magnet will furnish the music. Reorganized some time ago the Peerless, although retaining Willimantic's best is also featured for having among its prayers some of the outstanding orchestra musicians in the state. But the orchestra and the dancing will not be the only drawing cards. It has always been the policy of the management to give every patron of the Al-Pierre Tabarin his or her money's worth at all times. They maintain that amusements, like merchandise in a store, are purchased and should represent in calibre and quality the amount paid for them. So it is that thousands of pretty and novel favors, paper hats, balloons, streamers, noise-makers, etc., will be distributed about the hall. The dance will be held Tuesday evening, February 16.

Final Number in Y. M. C. A. Course

Seldom indeed have the public of Norwich and vicinity had the privilege of such a rare evening of magic and mind-reading as is offered by the Y. M. C. A. management, on Tuesday evening of this week.

America's premier lyceum entertainers, The Floyds, are rare artists who have been in the front rank for nearly twenty years, and are well known throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. They are always up to date, constantly inventing and presenting the most startling novelties. An evening with this company combines every possible point of excellence. Elaborate stage settings, beautiful costumes, expensive paraphernalia and a real gift for entertaining. Mohala, the marvelous mind-reader is most original and refined; she has mystified millions; she is like no other. The "Y" management expects a very large audience on the occasion of The Floyds' appearance Tickets are priced at seventy-five cents, and may be secured at the Y. M. C. A. office or at Smith's Shoe store on Broadway.

On Saturday evening about 100 friends of the Wyman family met in the chapel of the Baptist church to give them a farewell party as they are soon to move to White Plains, N. Y., where they have bought a new house. Their many friends regret their having to leave but Mr. Wyman's business in New York makes the change best for them. A very interesting program was arranged by Miss Dorothy Cummings. At the close of the entertainment Rev. A. G. Littlefield presented a Thermos auto lunch kit to the family as a token of the friendship felt for them by neighbors and church people. Mr. Wyman responded thanking the people and expressing his regrets at leaving Lebanon. Light refreshments were served.

On February 2 the Mission Circle met with Mrs. Frank Bruce for an all days meeting and to tie a quilt. Besides tying the quilt white cross work was done.

The Ladies' Aid society held an all day meeting at the church parlors on Feb. 3 to tie quilts.

The milkmen, cream gatherers and mail carriers are having a hard time getting around as the snow blows into the roads filling them up about as fast as they are dug out.

UNION

The snow storm of last week was of absorbing interest here. The road breakers were still at work on Friday. The wind blew so hard Wednesday and Thursday, that much of the drifting portions had to be shoveled again. The Red school was in session every day during the week, and Rock Meadow school missed only one day. Mashapaug school was not so fortunate. No mail came through from Stafford Springs, Wednesday and Thursday. The state road was opened from Stafford Springs to Union Center Thursday afternoon. On Friday afternoon, the mail came by team from Stafford Springs to Union Center and then turned back to Stafford Springs.

There was a service at the church, as usual, last Sunday. The roads had been opened (from the first hard storm) in nearly all parts of the town and sleighing was quite good.

The meeting of Mashapaug Lake grange is to be held on Wednesday evening. The lecturer's hour is to be devoted to a Valentine party, in charge of the following committee: Miss Della Heck, Miss Helen Millard, Mrs. George Koster, Mrs. Raiza E. Horton.

The meeting of the Union Parent-Teacher association set for Friday evening of last week, was postponed because of the drifted condition of the roads.

Miss Emily Kelela spent the week-end at her home in Mashapaug. She is now at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin, in Stafford Springs, and attending the Borough school.

Mr. and Mrs. George Coolidge, who have been living in Newington, are at the parsonage this week.

Mrs. Abiel Towne, who was seriously injured by a fall a few weeks ago, was no better at the last report.

Word has been received here of the recent death of Emmons Bruce Horton. He had been in California for several years and was engaged in work on mining machinery. He was born in Union, Sept. 17, 1863, the son of Ezra M. Horton and Mary Bartlett Horton.

WEEKLY BUSINESS REVIEW

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—(AP)—Trade currents were confused last week by unsettling reports from industries whose operations usually reflect most accurately the trend of current business. No fundamental weakness was apparent, however, and business circles refused to concede that any trade reaction was in prospect simply because the new year had got off to a slow start.

Restoration of peace in the anthracite history, was the outstanding constructive development of the week. Because of the generally stable condition of business, the suspension of mining had little serious effect outside the coal region, but it was approaching the point where its prolongation would have been fraught with grave dangers. The settlement was welcomed by all business interests, particularly the railroads which were suffering from a loss of coal traffic.

The first decline in unfilled tonnage of the United States steel corporation since last August aroused misgivings in some quarters, where it was feared that the report signalized the beginning of a downward trend in the industry.

New business so far in February shows improvement over January, the weekly reviews reported, but last week brought a slight abatement of activity in the steel industry on the whole. Experts attributed the loss of January tonnage to the slack demand in the first fifteen days of the month, but found that buying thereafter picked up and that specifications against contracts were rather urgent.

One of the most wholesome developments of the week cited by bankers was the heavy calling of bank loans, spite a tendency to attribute this reduction to the "trimming" of loan accounts inspired by the unexpectedly large total of brokers' loans reported by the New York stock exchange at the end of January, recognized banking authorities asserted that this action really represented the movement of funds into business channels.

In view of the trend toward consolidating corporate enterprises, the "anti-trust" action launched by the government against two proposed food combines last week was considered of great significance to the business world.

After a series of favorable developments for oil and sugar companies the copper industry had its turn last week. Producers agreed that the market outlook for the red metal had been noticeably brightened by the decision to form a new export association, complying with the provisions of the Webb-Pomerene law. The plans are expected to result in greater co-ordination in foreign selling and to stiffen the price of copper.

TAFTVILLE

A pre-Lenten card party was held Thursday evening at the rooms of St. Veronica's T. A. and B. society, on Providence street. The ladies' prize went, first, to Miss Imelda Raymond; second, to Miss Mary Hanlon, and consolation to Miss Elizabeth Ward. Joseph Phalen had the high score for gentlemen; Stanley Finiski the second and John Foster was awarded the consolation. Following cards refreshments of home made cake and coffee were served by a committee consisting of Miss Annie Dailey, Miss Mary Ward, Miss Agnes Dougherty and Miss Sue Nolan.

When the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor of the Taftville Congregational church, had its regular Sunday evening meeting in the church vestry, the leader was Mrs. Eugene N. Monty.

Mrs. David Murphy has returned to her home on South Fifth avenue, after spending several days with relatives in Camden, N. J., and Philadelphia, Pa.

Those entered at the fiddlers' contest on the closing night of the joint carnival conducted by the Sacred Heart church and the Army and Navy club, were David Lussier, Leo St. Marie, Desire Bourdon, Henri Bourdon and Eugene Frechette. As told before in the columns of The Bulletin, the prize was won by Leo St. Marie and he was proclaimed the champion fiddler of Taftville.

Carl Krauss, of Lisbon, trapped one of the largest minks ever seen in this vicinity Friday. The animal was placed on exhibition in the window of the store of George W. Weller, of North Second avenue, where it was greatly admired for its size and the fine quality of the fur.

James Harroun, of Willimantic, has been a week-end guest of George M. Beardow, of Providence street.

Matthias Morrell has resigned his position with the weaving department of the Ponemah mills.

People who climb to the tops of Gallows hill or Ox hill, are well rewarded for their pains. The view of the surrounding country for miles, blanketed with snow, has been snapped by scores with cameras. Because of the heavy drifts at the top of Gallows hill, with room for only one car to go through, this road is not being used as much as it was before the storm, although a trip to Norwich via this route is exactly the same distance as the old route through Greeneville.

Miss Helen C. Aberg, of the Willimantic State Normal school, has been spending several days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Axel L. Aberg, of North Third avenue.

A meeting of Court Wequonnoc, No. 88, Foresters of America, was held Thursday evening at the court rooms in the St. Louis hall building on Dion street, with Chief Ranger Joseph E. Benac presiding.

It is learned by Taftville people that no arrests have been made in the shooting affair at the gasoline station and refreshment stand near Holyoke, Mass., conducted by Andrew Smith, formerly of Taftville. A man named Connors was the victim of the shooting affair and is at present a patient at the Springfield hospital.

DOES "DOMESEIC SERVANT" APPLY TO GARDENER?

The question whether the term "domestic servant," which was used in the will of Commodore Morton F. Plant, applies to a gardener is to be decided by Judge C. B. Waller, of the common pleas court in the suit of Robert Smith Catto against the Plant estate executors, which was on trial Saturday in New London, before the Judge.

Judge Waller denied a motion for non-suit which was made by the defendant's attorneys and he took the papers, reserving decision after both sides had concluded their evidence. Attorney John T. Barry, of this city, appeared for Catto and Charles B. Whittlesey and Charles Smiddy for the executors.

When Commodore Plant died at Eastern Point, Nov. 4, 1918, he left an estate of about $30,000,000 and a will which contained one paragraph making bequests as follows: "And to each of the domestic servants in my employ at the time of my death who shall have been continuously in my employ for the period of 10 years prior thereto, the sum of $1,000."

In his testimony, the plaintiff qualified as to his period of employment under the terms of the will, but the executors claim that he is not entitled to any legacy from the estate because he was a gardener and they claim that "domestic servant" as used in the will applies only to those who were employed inside the Plant mansion, and does not extend to working out around the grounds of the mansion as the claimant did in his capacity as a gardener.

INVITATION TICKETS FOR OLD TIME DANCES

Public dances were quite the style even a hundred years ago, according to two old invitations brought into this office by Ernest House of Hanover. Mr. House showed a ticket for a Thanksgiving ball given at Canterbury in 1813 and an invitation for the opening ball of the season in 1859 in Canterbury. The ticket to the 1913 social event read as follows:

Thanksgiving Ball

The company of .....(Name)..... is solicited at Freemason's hall in Canterbury, Nov. 26, 1813 at 6 o'clock p. m. Managers—A. Bacon, J. Hutchins, J. Buswell, E. M. Johnson.

The other invitation is engraved on embossed paper and reads as follows:

Opening Ball

Sir: Your company with Ladies is respectfully solicited to attend a Thanksgiving ball to be given at the hall of E. R. Hawks, Canterbury, Nov. 24, 1859. Managers, George T. Kendall, Lyman Dutton, Charles R. Lyon, William Burnett, Henry N. Smith, Pearl Williams. Floor managers, Charles Morse and L. F. Eaton. Ensworth's Cotillon Band will play. Tickets, including supper $2.00.

Many of the older residents of Hanover and Canterbury will remember when Joe Ensworth conducted dancing schools in the various towns. Joe could play by ear and he learned all the new numbers by hearing his wife, Lucy, hum them over to him.

REDS WIN METHODIST MEN'S ATTENDANCE CONTEST

An attendance contest that has been carried on for ten weeks by the Everyman's Bible class of Trinity Methodist Sunday school ended Sunday with the Reds, under command of Col. E. O. Rodier, winners over the Blues, under the command of Col. Lloyd Cochrane. The attendance on the final Sunday was 49, a record breaker for the class. The losing team will entertain the winners at a supper on a date to be determined. The speaker at that time is to be Rev. Charles Spaulding of New London, who is now in Porto Rico doing special work.

The class has accepted a challenge from the City Bible class of the Central Baptist church for an attendance contest in March.

POULTNEY BIGELOW, N. F. A. 73, IS SUING H. G. WELLS

There is Norwich interest in the fact that Poultney Bigelow, of Maldenon-Hudson, American lecturer and author, has announced he is starting a $50,000 slander suit in London against H. G. Wells, the English novelist, because he presents being classified as a bore.

The trouble started at a "mad tea party" given some time ago by Countess Russell at her London apartment.

Mr. Bigelow published a version of the party in a London paper, to which Mr. Wells replied vigorously in an open letter.

WILLIAMS-GUILE WEDDING CULMINATION OF ROMANCE

It has become known that the marriage Sunday, Feb. 7th, of Miss Lucile Winifred Guile, elder daughter of Letter Carrier and Mrs. Albert A. Guile, of 6 Kinney avenue, Norwich, and Lloyd Williams, an interne at Backus hospital, culminates a romance which had its origin at the hospital when the bride played there. Mrs. Williams is a member of the Guile Trio, playing the piano with her sister, Miss May Louise Guile and her brother, George A. Guile.

Their fine music has won them numerous invitations and engagements to play, including afternoon musicales at the hospital for the pleasure of the patients and nurses. About nine months ago, Lloyd Williams, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Williams, of Cape Cod, came to Norwich from Boston to continue at Backus hospital his course of training as a surgeon. There he met Miss Guile, admired her and her skill as a pianist, and they became engaged. A week ago they slipped down to New London and were married by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ.

February 27th Mr. and Mrs. Williams are to leave Norwich for Cambridge, Mass., where the young physician will take a course in surgery for several weeks at Harvard Medical school. They will then leave for Syracuse, N. Y., that he may fill an appointment in Syracuse hospital.

Mrs. Williams has a class of sixteen piano pupils in Norwich, and her musical ability has made her widely known. She is a member of Christ Episcopal church, of Norwich Rebekah lodge—for which she has been pianist at initiations for over two years—also is a popular member of Norwich grange.

The announcement of the wedding brought many sincere congratulations to the young surgeon and sincere good wishes to his accomplished bride.

LOOT OF JUVENILE CRIMINALS REACHED $400

Charged with petty thieving and various small breaks throughout the city, a score or more of boys were presented in the juvenile court Saturday morning, before Judge Arthur F. Libby. Four crimes were laid to as many groups of youthful thieves.

One boy, who has been in trouble with the police before, is to be sent to the State School for Boys at Meriden. The remainder of the gang have been placed on probation. The boys' parents will have to pay for the damage they did, amounting to about $400.

Two groups were charged with plundering and pilfering hoisting engines from which they took valves, petcocks and other brass fittings, disposing of them to local junk dealers.

Another group of boys broke into a shed owned by Archibald Torrance, local contractor, where they stole brass from hoisting engines. Other boys broke into the People's Coal Yard on Thomas street, where they stole brass. Brass fittings were also stolen from Jeffrey Colt, local machinist.

Shoplifting at the Porteous and Mitchell store, where fountain pens were taken from the counters, was responsible for charges against several boys and a burglary at the plumbing shop of Robert Goldstein, caused the arrest of other boys.

William Schacter, of this city, was presented in the city court on a charge of receiving stolen goods. For lack of evidence Schacter was discharged.

THREE WOMEN'S CLASSES FOR Y. M. C. A. PRIVILEGES

Plans for extending the privileges of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, swimming pool and games to women and girls have advanced so far that the opening of this activity is announced for Wednesday, Feb. 24. There will be three classes of 35 members each on every Wednesday, the Academy class and the juniors from 2.30 to 5.30 every afternoon and the seniors in the evening from 7.30 to 9. So great has been the interest shown in the opening of these women's classes that it is expected the limit of enrolment will be quickly reached and exceeded.

There are to be two women instructors, but Miss Marion L. Bishop, chairman of the committee making the arrangements, said Sunday evening that these have not been definitely secured as yet.

GEN. C. H. SHERRILL'S GIFT TO AID SOME ART STUDENT

A. Jcick, but was unable to keep his appointment.

NORWICH TOWN

"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel," Mark 16:15, was the text of the very interesting talk by Ralph H. Marsh, who presided at the Sunday afternoon service at the Sheltering Arms. After reading the Scripture lesson Revelation 21 and offering prayer, Mr. Marsh in referring to the text, said in substance: I am not going to tell you to go into all the world and preach the Gospel, as you are older than I and have had much more experience; but I am going to tell you something of what many of the young people of today are trying to do. You people here are not through preaching yet; you can still preach Jesus right here in your daily life. I have often thought it would be nice to go to some far-off land as a minister, or missionary; but when I look about this country and I haven't travelled far, right here in our own city there are so many opportunities for preaching Christ, that it is not necessary to go to India and other foreign countries. Of course we must send some missionaries, because Christ has commanded us; when He says—Go ye into all the world." There is a big work right here.

Mr. Marsh mentioned the benefits derived from Christian Endeavor and its world-wide expansion among the young people; girls and boys are started when very young, and advance into larger societies, etc., until fitted to be missionaries. In speaking of the local society, of which he is a member, Mr. Marsh alluded to two of its members now engaged in missionary work, Miss Gertrude Avery in India and Miss Face, to be with Him forevermore, Mr. Alabama. Mr. Marsh said in closing: "Jesus said just before He returned to the Heavenly Father: 'In My Father's house there are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you,' but in order to secure this place we must obey His commandments and follow Him. He came and lived here and taught us what we should do. He not only lived for us but died for us, that we might be saved, that we might go to that beautiful city that was so well described in the Scripture passage, to be His servants and to meet Him Face to Face, to be with Him forevermore. Mr. Marsh brought his violin with him and at the conclusion of his talk played a violin solo "Face to Face."

During the service, as the choir of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Greeneville, which was scheduled to provide the singing, did not put in an appearance, one of the visitors present, Dr. Charles H. Lamb, sang the following hymns, with violin accompaniment: Abide With Me, Bringing in the Sheaves, God Will Take Care of You, and I Need Thee Every Hour. The Mizpah benediction brought the meeting to a close.

Although very active in Christian Endeavor work, being vice-president of Norwich C. E. union, Mr. Marsh is the youngest person to conduct a service of this kind at this institution, and he was warmly received by the members of the family, who expressed the hope that he would come again, so pleased were they with his talk.

The meeting of Troop No. 20, Boy Scouts of Norwich Town was held Friday evening at the scout camp in Mediterranean Lane.

In the absence of the scout leader, Frederick H. Wyant, who was called to Jewett City in the interests of the Connecticut Humane society of which he is District Agent for Norwich and New London, the meeting was in charge of Irving Manning junior assistant scout leader. The scouts were put through first aid and signal work, later listened in on the radio.

Scattering grain for the winter birds took place Saturday being done by several scouts from Troop 20, the boys felt well repaid for their efforts, which in many places necessitated plowing through some exceptionally high drifts, most of the time up to their knees and over.

The group divided in three sections, John Dodge and two other boys who were his guests, worked for a mile, or so at the rear of the scout cabin, while Irving Manning with Harold Smith and Joseph Sullivan went over Scotland road and a section of Plain Hill, cutting through until they met Scout Master Wyant and Luther Whaley and Warren LaPierre at a crossroad, which runs from Canterbury road to a location near Scotland Road hall. In some places the boys walked on a level with stone walls, the drifts were so high.

The plan laid out was to follow the road until they came to a wooded section and after working into the woods for a distance, to return to the road. On one of these expeditions for about a half mile, the boys broke trail, through a country road with snow up to their knees. This road had not before been opened up. All the while the boys kept up their spirits by singing and having snow-ball contests. Food for the birds was distributed in many places. It was reported that James Mullen and others from Troop 12, hit the trail over Wauwecus Hill.

At the Sacred Heart church Sunday morning, the pastor Rev. Charles W. Brennan announced that at the recent food sale held in the basement store of the Boston store under the auspices of this parish $107 was netted. Mrs. Patrick T. Connell was the efficient chairman of the committee in charge.

After passing ten days at his home on Town street, John C. Hinrichs Jr. N. F. A., 1925, returned to Providence Sunday evening, and this (Monday) morning, will resume his studies at Brown university. He was awarded a scholarship for this term having attained such a high stand in his studies at the closing of school for the mid-year vacation period. Young Hinrichs who carried off high honors when graduating from the Academy, for the best all around athlete during his four year athletic course, is aiming hard to attain similar rank at Brown.

PREMIER BRIAND LOSING PATIENCE WITH DEPUTIES

Informs Obstructionists That He Will Not Brook Further Delay on Financial Policy—Direct Statement Created Consternation Among the Radical-Socialist Groups—Premier Declared That He Intends to Appear Before the Senate Without Further Delay.

PARIS, Feb. 15—(AP)—Premier Briand took a strong stand in the chamber today against those who are opposing the government in its endeavors to restore normal financial conditions in France.

He reproached the socialists for dodging responsibility of participation in the government when it was offered to them, because the difficulties made such participation uninviting. But the necessities of governing France could not be disregarded at the behest of any single party, he declared, and if the socialists desired to remain outside the majority which would save the financial situation, it would be done without them.

Measures which had been introduced increasing the selling price of tobacco were referred back to the finance committee, to join that which raised the taxes on spirits produced by fruit growers for home consumption under the present laws. The chamber's action today, in the way of amendments and rejections reducing the yield of the 16 wtax measures is practically nothing and brought M. Briand again to the floor with the declaration that the deputies were assuming a grave responsibility in refusing to vote the new resources which the government demanded.

"The left refuses to vote indirect taxes," he said. "The right opposes all direct taxes, between two fires stands the country upon which the effects of the political maneuvering will fall. If it were the government only that was likely to suffer from this situation, it would not be serious, but it is the treasury and people on whom the consequences will weigh. Speeches cannot remedy the situation; only money can do so. The government means to have it, and cannot remain at the mercy of any single party.

The premier mentioned the fact that three ministers of finance had been overthrown before the chamber had been given an opportunity to pass on their projects, though all of them were ready to co-operate with the chamber and prepare new taxes in a spirit of conciliation, and exclaimed emphatically:

"It is time that this sort of political play cease. The government is ready to do its part. It has prepared a stamp tax in a conciliatory spirit and will go with it to the senate. If, when it comes back, its efforts to arrive at a decision fail, then it will appear that this chamber is unable to vote financial restoration."

This veiled allusion to possible dissolution created consternation among the radical-socialist groups. The deputies listened with strained attention, particularly when M. Briand, referring to yesterday's defeat of the cartel at Belfort through the election of Andre Tardieu, cried:

"The country is beginning to give material evidence of its impatience with the present methods of legislation."

The socialists seemed stunned when the premier added:

"If any party here wants a divorce from its present associations it can have it. But it must be legally pronounced, and it must be understood that when once decreed it is final."

At the conclusion of M. Briand's speech it was decided to hold a night session to continue the discussion, which M. Briand announced must be finished early tomorrow because he intended to appear with his financial restoration scheme before the senate without further delay.

DISREGARDED WARNING OF PREMIER BRIAND

PARIS, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Premier Briand's words of warning in the chamber today apparently had little effect on the finance committee, which, after hearing M. Doumer, the finance minister, rejected by a vote of 13 to 8 with several abstentions, the stamp tax on business transactions at the rate fixed by the government of 1.20 per cent.

The tax, it was estimated, would yield just under 2,000,000,000 francs.

The committee, on the other hand, appears disposed to agree to the inclusion of the revenue from M. Loucheur's taxes voted December 4 among the receipts of the 1926 budget.

GILPATRIC WILL ANSWER HIS CREDITORS TODAY

HARTFORD, Feb. 15—(AP)—C. Harold Gilpatric returned to Hartford tonight. Shortly after the 7:05 p. m. train from Putnam rolled into the station, his guard, George E. Hughes from the Atlanta penitentiary, registered for his prisoner and himself at Hotel Bond.

Gilpatric tomorrow morning will appear for the first of what is expected to be a series of examinations by his creditors. He has volunteered his assistance in unravelling the tangle created by his embezzlement of nearly a million from the First National bank of Putnam for which he is serving a fifteen year sentence at Atlanta.

Shortly after the prisoner, his guard, and brother, Raymond, had gone to the third floor front double room with bath which Harold Gilpatric and the guard will occupy indefinitely, Walter G. Gilpatric, another brother, who is a lawyer of White Plains, N. Y., arrived and went to the room.

Those who had known the former cashier of the Putnam bank and former state treasurer, remarked tonight that he had aged and that he had grown stouter.

Dressed in a gray suit with a dark overcoat and brown hat and wearing smoked glasses, G. Harold Gilpatric utilized the stick he carried as he was led into the hotel. He appeared uncertain of his steps.

BOARD OF FISHERIES AND GAME TO MEET IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Feb. 15—(AP)—Approximately 150 sportsmen are expected to attend the annual conference tomorrow with the members of the state board of fisheries and game in the hall of the house at the capitol at 10 a. m. The chief purposes of the meeting will be to outline the policies and proposed program of the board and to give those interested an opportunity to express their views on phases of the work.

William L. Finley of Oregon, well-known lecturer on natural history, will open the program with an illustrated talk. Among the subjects which will be discussed by the meeting will be administration of streams on which the state has acquired fishing rights; stream pollution; regulations for white perch; creel limit on pickerel and black bass; calico bass protection; ice fishing; game refuges; quail season and bounty on crows and gray foxes.

AMENDMENT IS AIMED AT "LAME DUCK" CONGRESSES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(AP)—By a vote of 73 to 2, the senate today again adopted and sent to the house a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment aimed at "lame duck" congresses.

It would provide that a new congress meet on the first Monday of the January after it was elected, instead of more than a year afterwards, as at present. The terms of the president and vice president also would begin in January instead of on March 4.

The senate reinserted a provision under which if a presidential election is thrown into congress the vice president automatically shall become president in the event the house fails to elect by March 4, after the general election in the preceding November.

SEIZURE OF OPIUM BY BOSTON CUSTOM OFFICIALS

BOSTON, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Two cans of smoking opium and a pound and a half of raw opium were seized today by custom officials in the quarters of Chinese members of the crew of the Dutch steamer Medan which docked today with a valuable cargo of raw rubber, silk, waste, teas and spices. Four opium smoking sets and 60 gallons of whiskey and gin also were confiscated.

TROTZKY ON HIGH TIDE OF POLITICAL POPULARITY

MOSCOW, Feb. 15—(AP)—Greeted as no public man in Russia has been received since the days of Nikolai Lenine, Leo Trotzky, now on the high tide of political popularity, made his first public appearance tonight since his return from political exile.

More than 7,000 persons paid from five to fifteen dollars to hear the builder of the Red Army discourse on America's might, industrial supremacy and pacificism.

Trotzky pictured the United States as a mighty monster of capitalism, ready to devour all Europe and become the majority stockholder of all the resources of mankind. But, capitalism was expiring, he declared, and America's colossal wealth was her most vulnerable spot.

"The higher America climbs to power," he exclaimed, "the more dreadful will be her fall.

The only way to conquer America's supremacy, said Trotzky, was with Europe and Asia united. Russia's only basic enemy was American capital.

Declaring that America had created a system of standardization of production, he asserted that the productiveness of the American worker was two and a half times that of the German worker.

The count proceeded to vent his enthusiasm by playing several sets of tennis with his friend and adviser, William Anhiet, publisher of the Pictorial Review.

Captain and Crew of Roosevelt Lionized

Rescue Heroes as the Liner Steamed Slowly by New York Harbor Yesterday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15—(AP)—The nation, through New York, today flung wide its arms and took to its heart Captain George Fried of the liner President Roosevelt. It also received as heroes his crew who transcended sea traditions in rescuing 23 seamen from the sinking British freighter Antinoe in mid-ocean on January 27.

The Roosevelt steamed slowly up from Quarantine with two empty bunks—those of the two men who lost their lives in the first rescue attempt.

Hooting whistles, bright bunting, roaring cannon, and the spoken words of high officials—these were the outward manifestations of honor. Silent handclasps, brimming eyes and wistful, understanding looks—these were the tributes from seaman to seaman, which brought a lump to Captain Fried's throat, and set his crew to stirring nervously in the limelight of acclaim.

First to go over the side from the tug Macon, which bore the official party to meet the Roosevelt at Quarantine, was Mrs. Fried, hat in hand, flushed and embarrassed. Captain Fried stood at the head of the gangway and took his wife in his arms. A dozen roses which she wore were crushed in the embrace, and a host of cameramen shouted in glee as pictures were snapped.

While Captain Fried and Chief Officer Robert B. Miller received an official welcome from Grover Whalen, representing Mayor Walker; Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, representing the navy; and General Charles P. Summerall, representing the army, the Roosevelt prepared to get under way. Flanked to right and left by the Macon and the navy tug Iuka, both bright with bunting and tuneful with bands, and with a navy cutter leading, the procession started up the harbor.

Everything that floated from waspike speed boat to palatial liner, greeted the Roosevelt enroute. A twenty-one gun salute, greatest honor the nation accords, blazed from Governor's island. The din was increased by aircraft which thundered overhead, skimming the topmasts of the rescue ship. The Firehost John Purroy Mitchel, throwing graceful plumes of water from every available nozzle, joined the review which swept majestically up toward Hoboken on the Jersey shore.

On the hurricane deck of the Roosevelt, fifteen bewildered seamen looked out over the harbor—attempted to joke, and subsided into silence. Each wore a gold medal appended to a bright red ribbon, an official decoration of the British government. Every now and then a seaman would look down at his medal, and gaze thoughtfully astern.

Down in Captain Fried's cabin, nestled among other gifts, reposed two more medals, gleaming in the light of early dawn. Their owners, Uno Wirtanen, master at arms, and Bosun's Mate Ernest Heitman, will never wear them. Wirtanen and Heitman made the supreme sacrifice, often demanded of those who sail the seas.

"Best men on the ship," said Chief Officer Miller, his voice husky.

One "double hero" was among the group. He was Fourth Officer Frank Monroe Upton, holder of the congressional medal of honor which he won during the world war.

Not a word was spoken of the rescue by the crew during the celebration.

As the Roosevelt was warped into her Hoboken pier, next to the Leviathan, two more bands struck up. The gangways fast, another delegation headed by Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, marched aboard, radio broadcasting apparatus was installed and another ceremony of welcome began.

Standing opposite Captain Fried, Governor Moore got half way through his address. "No further eulogy is needed," said Governor Moore. It was not. Captain Fried, a "down-east Yankee," was unable to stand the praise and rose from his chair, with a trace of tears in his eyes, he turned abruptly and left the gathering. Five minutes later he returned and the ceremony was concluded.

Captain Fried made a brief address. "This rescue," he said, "called for every man in the ship. They all stood behind me!"

Finding further talk of the rescue impossible, Captain Fried trailed off into expressing the hope that the rescue would stimulate American shipping, and the audience smiled in appreciation of his embarrassment.

Officers and crew of the Roosevelt will be guests at the Hotel Roosevelt during their stay in New York, Mayor Walker will welcome them at city hall tomorrow after a parade from the battery, and a dinner in their honor will be held in the evening. During the entire week they will be feted and entertained as heroes.

Chapman is Within Shadows of Gallows

Decision Against Bandit's Appeal Rendered in U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15—(AP)—Only the United States supreme court or possible executive clemency remained tonight between Gerald Chapman, convicted mail robber and murderer, and the gallows at Wethersfield prison, Connecticut. Chapman is under sentence to hang there on March 3.

Today he lost another battle in his legal fight to escape hanging for the murder of a New Britain, Conn., policeman. The United States circuit court of appeals, in a decision written by Federal Judge Manton, sustained the order of Federal Judge Thomas of Connecticut in dismissing Chapman's application for a writ of habeas corpus. Such a writ would return the notorious bandit to Atlanta penitentiary to complete a 25-year-sentence for mail robbery before being executed for the New Britain murder.

Admitting that Chapman's sole hope to escape the noose rested with the United States supreme court, Frederick J. Groehl, the bandit's attorney, said he would ask the supreme court for a writ of certiorari for a review of the case. The lawyer said he had not had time to read carefully the appellate court's ruling, but that a hasty reading indicated that the court had no ruled upon the principal points at issue.

Judge Manton's ruling held that Chapman's contention that the president's grant of commutation of the federal sentence for mail robbery was ineffectual because Chapman had not accepted it, was in error. Judge Manton held that the state of Connecticut had jurisdiction to prosecute the prisoner for murder; that a prisoner may not commit another and more serious crime and be protected from trial and punishment for that crime because of another sentence, and that his first sentence is no bar to law enforcement.

The court held that the prisoner had no right to demand which sentence could be satisfied first; that only the U. S. government had the right to object to the execution of the state's sentence, and that the federal government had not so objected.

The appellate court concluded by ruling that the sentence of the state court could be legally carried out without infringing any constitutional rights claimed by the prisoner.

DEADLOCK IN FIRST SESSION OF THE TAX BILL CONFEREES

Controversy Over Senate Amendments Which Added $125,000,000 to Amount of Reduction Voted by the House—Groups of the Conferees Later Held Separate Meetings—A Compromise Involving Concessions on Each Side May Be Expected Within a Few Days.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(AP)—Senate and house conferees on the revenue bill stood pat at their opening meeting today behind the action by their respective chambers on the measure, involving a difference of $125,000,000 in tax reduction for this year.

While the senate representatives are expected to make considerable concessions in the reductions voted by that body in addition to those approved by the house, and thus bring hte measure closer, at least, to the limit of tax relief declared safe by the treasury, the conference today developed no agreement along these lines. Secretary Mellon has been represented as holding that a total reduction of $350,000,000 is all the treasury can stand without danger of a deficit, whereas the senate increased the total from $330,000,000, as voted by the house, to $450,000,000.

The house today ordered the bill sent to conference without debate and by almost unanimous vote, and representatives of the two branches of congress immediately went into session and for two hours discussed their differences. After their conference, both groups of conferees held separate meetings, with a compromise involving concessions on each side expected within a few days. This would permit the senate and house to ratify the agreement and send the measure to the white house for the signature of President Coolidge in time to assure tax reduction by March 15, when first income tax returns are due.

While the house leaders are insistent that only a few of the senate amendments making further tax cuts can be accepted, they are understood to be favorable to the action of the senate in increasing the reductions in surtax rates applying on incomes between $24,000 and $100,000.

The conferees named today by the house were Chairman Green, of the ways and means committee; Representatives Hawley, Oregon, and Treadway, Massachusetts, Republicans, and Garner, Texas, and Collier, Mississippi ranking members of the committee. The senate conferees were chairman Smoot of the finance committee; Senators McLean, Connecticut, and Reed, Pennsylvania, republicans, and Simmons, North Carolina, and Gerry, Rhode Island, democrats.

SENATE VOTES $868,515,501 POSTOFFICE APPROPRIATION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(AP)—The senate today, without a record vote, approved the treasury and post office appropriation bill.

The measure, as reported to the senate carried $868,515,501, which was $903,000 more than was approved by the house. The measure now goes to conference to adjust the differences between the two chambers.

There was scarcely a ripple when the senate disposed of the section of bill providing funds for prohibition enforcement. Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, an advocate of light wines and beer, asserted that he was in favor of as large an appropriation as could be justified so it could not be said of congress that a sincere effort to enforce the prohibition law was not being made. While he asserted that he did not approve of some of the methods used in obtaining evidence for the enforcement of the law, for which was $250,000 was designated, he made no objection to any part of the appropriation.

$165,000,000 FOR NEW PUBLIC BUILDINGS VOTED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(AP)—The Elliott bill to authorize appropriation of $165,000,000 for new public buildings was passed today by the house.

Carrying the endorsement of the administration, the bill was called up under suspension of the rules, a procedure that shut off amendments, limited debate to 50 minutes, and required a two-thirds vote for passage. It was passed by a vote of 263 to 126 and sent to the senate.

Of the total amount $100,000,000 is for new buildings in various states, $50,000,000 for structures in the District of Columbia and $15,000,000 for buildings already authorized.

A similar bill was passed by the house in the last congress, but failed of senate approval.

GROVER C. BERGDOLL FACES DEPORTATION FROM GERMANY

BERLIN, Feb. 25—(AP)—Grover C. Bergoll, under arrest on hte charge of impairing the morals of a minor, faces the possibility of deportation, foreign office officials indicated today, if the government decides he is an "objectable alien."

The federal authorities, however, are not likely to take a hand until the Baden authorities, who have Bergdoll's case in charge, conclude their secret investigation and obtain a conviction. The government would not care where Bergdoll went, but would have him escorted by a military guard to which ever frontier he chose.

A definite clue as to the age of the girl or girls Bergdoll is alleged to have attacked was obtained when it was learned he was held under the section of the penal code dealing with crimes against girls under fourteen years of age. Conviction on this count carries a penitentiary sentence of from one to ten years for each offense, without the opinion of a fine.

The minister of justice at Karlsruho has clamped down the lid of secrecy, ordering the jailers and state's attorney to say nothing. Not even relatives, who scoff at the charges, are allowed to visit the prisoner.

COUPLE CHARGED WITH MURDER OF THEIR SON

BALTIMORE, Feb. 15—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Ralph T. Coursey were charged with the murder of their five year old son Eldridge, in blanket indictments returned against them today by the grand jury.

The authorities allege that Eldridge was beaten to death with a strap and a small broomstick wielded on separate occasions by Coursey and his wife. The indictment covers charges of first and second degree murder and manslaughter.

An autopsy showed the child to have died from the effects of "blows administered with a blunt instrument," and from shock and convulsions.

The Courseys, in statements to the police prior to their indictment, declared Eldridge to have been "unruly," and to have caused trouble between them.

Coursey admitted beating the boy with a broomstick and the night before his death because he was slow on an errand, and Mrs. Coursey admitted that she had beaten him twice with the broomstick, just before he died, because he refused to get into the bath tub. Eldridge died Feb. 6.

IMMEDIATE RATIFICATION OF COAL PACT EXPECTED

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 15.—(AP)—The consensus of opinion among delegates to the tri-district convention which opens here tomorrow is that endorsement of their tentative working agreement signed by the joint sub-scale committee of operators and miners will be complete and almost unanimous.

Some opposition is expected from members of several locals in the three anthracite districts but their delegates number so few as to make their protests almost negligible.

Mr. Lewis will interpret and explain the various technicalities in the new pact and answer any questions that may be asked from the convention floor.

Meanwhile mine workers who left the region to seek employment in other industrial centers are returning to the hard coal field. Several Lockawanna railroad trains yesterday carried extra coaches bearing miners.

Coal companies are expediting the work of preparing the collieries to mine and prepare coal again by using extra forces of maintenance and repair men.

Empty coal cars routed to local yards are being shunted to mine switches in readiness to receive their cargoes of anthracite from breaker pockets. Coal will be moving to tidewater by Saturday, railroad officials say.

PROTEST BY COUNSEL OF COUNTESS OF CATHCART

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(AP)—The "legality, the common sense and the justice" of deporting the Countess of Cathcart from New York on grounds of moral turpitude because of her elopement with the Earl of Craven, were challenged before the labor department of review today by her counsel.

Issuance of any such order, it was contended, would constitute an unwarranted invasion by the government into the field of domestic relations under a law which made such action not mandatory but merely discretionary.

Prior to the hearing, which was held behind closed doors over the protest of William A. Deford, of New York, and Wilton J. Lambert, of this city, counsel for the countess, the labor department, at the request of Immigration Commissioner Curran at New York, issued an order for the arrest of the Earl of Craven.

This was done before it was learned that the earl had gone to Montreal but Assistant Secretary White, in charge of immigration matters, said the "primary purpose", which "was to get him out of this country," had been accomplished. Should he return he would be liable to arrest under the warrant for hearing on deportation charges.

MORE TROUBLE BETWEEN GREECE AND TURKEY

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 15—(AP)—Relations between Greece and Turkey are strained once more by disputes growing out of the exchange of populations.

The Turkish press is demanding that the government seize the properties of Greeks living in Constantinople unless the Greek government agrees to return properties alleged to have been taken from Turks living in Macedonia and Western Thrace who do not belong to the classes to be exchanged.

The exchanges of populations between Greece and Turkey have resulted in the transfer of 2,000,000 people, but no one yet has received reimbursement for the properties they were forced to abandon. Once prosperous men are walking the streets of Constantinople and Athens without other assets than promissory notes from their respective governments.

MANSFIELD PEELS THAT DECISION IS NOT FAIR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 15—There is yet the possibility that the difficulties existing between the Windham and Mansfield school boards over the payment of tuition fees is not as definitely settled as they were believed to have been with the rendering of a decision. This decision was rendered in State Board of Education. It was generally understood that in taking action on an ultimatum issued by Windham the Mansfield board had consented to present its version of the controversy to the state board and abide by a decision This decision was rendered in favor of the Windham board to recover an outstanding bill for tuition of about $200. Monday, however, Secretary E. A. Case of the Windham committee received a letter from Sec. W. F. Kirkpatrick of Mansfield to the effect that the decision was unfair as Mansfield had not as yet presented its side of the case to the State School Commission. In stating this Secretary Kirkpatrick said that he would bring the matter up for discussion at the meeting of the Mansfield school committee this (Tuesday) evening. Should that committee refuse to abide by the decision on the ground that it had not yet had voice in the matter more trouble will naturally develop. Those interested in the controversy feel that Mansfield has had as much time to confer with the state board as Windham has had and that there was an ulterior motive in hesitating to do so. Windham school committeemen stated Monday night that what ever new issue evolved in Mansfield it would not deter the local board from standing pat to its ultimatum that Mansfield must pay up or abide by a decision, else suffer the refusal of entrance to its children in Windham High school next fall term. Mansfield was required to give a final reply this month in accordance with the decree.

The drowning of Professor William McLean of Philadelphia, father of Lieutenant Frank McLean of the local police department, as a member of the Coroner's jury on a murder case has caused several sport publications to take up anew a review of grand old days of the 50 year old pugilist. The Philadelphia Record says of him, "We are reminded that in this city we have the greatest veteran of the boxing game, a man fairly hale and although 90 years of age—a man who was a great athlete, boxer and perhaps the best teacher of boxing the country has ever known, famous from coast to coast before any of the present day boxers were born."

Billy McLean, as he is familiarly known, has visited Lieutenant McLean here on various occasions and his son, William Jr., of Westerly, and on each trip he added to his wide circle of acquaintances. For many years he taught successful businessmen and the young lads in school and academies the manly art of boxing. For some time he was assisted in this work by Lieutenant McLean who at an early age entered the ring at 117 pounds pitted against opponents tipping the scales at 135 pounds and over. He was generally recognized in the Quaker town as the fastest young boxer to step within the ropes.

Although no damage was reported Willimantic was one of the cities in Eastern Connecticut to find sidewalks and streets flooded as a result of a heavy rainstorm and a rise in temperature. The rain swelled by large quantities of melting snow was boring both good and bad effects. Pedestrians found themselves water-bound as they attempted to cross gutters. Superintendent Irvin M. Famous Voices.

The British Broadcasting Co. and the British Museum have made an arrangement whereby some of the phonographic records of famous voices will be broadcast, says Scientific American. The tentative list includes Tennyson, Sir Herbert Tree's record of Hamlet's soliloquy on death and Roosevelt's speech against the trusts.

It was hoped that a record made by Queen Victoria could be put on the air, but this was decided against because the words were registered on an old cylinder, which does not give a true idea of her voice.

WESTERLY

MANY CASES BEFORE THE SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Feb. 15—The February term of superior court for Washington county opened at West Kingston Monday morning with Associate Justice Arthur P. Sumner of Providence on the bench. With more than seven attorneys from Westerly and not over three from the vicinity of Kingston in attendance, the needless waste of time for Kingston sessions, and the facilities available for court sessions at Westerly, caused the following statement of Judge Sumner. "It is much more convenient, gentlemen, to try cases at Westerly than at Kingston." This statement was made when Attorney Dunnof, Westerly, asked that in the action at law Frank L. Caswell vs. Frank W. Coy that it be set down and tried as the first jury day this session at Westerly. Judge Sumner added, "I don't want to force you against your will for Westerly trial, but my experience has been that at the adjourned Westerly session, the docket there is soon disposed of and most cases passed." However the case was made the first jury case at Kingston.

With F. C. Buffum, Jr., of Westerly, named foreman, the grand jury was empanneled as follows, D. Harold Rogers, Westerly, being excused until the April term; George E. Broughton, Stanley W. Edwards, Howard D. McFarland, F. C. Buffum, Westerly; Grant Johnson, Henry A. Webster, John K. Knowles, Steward A. Gavitt, South Kingstown; Edward N. Sprague, William R. Spink, Edward H. Straight, Hubert V. Fielder, North Kingstown; Walter L. Perrin, Morton Niles, Hopkinton; Horace J. Arnold, Exeter; Courtland B. M. Rathbun, Richmond; John Beresford, Charlestown; and Peleg Brown, Jr., Narragansett. The grand jurors were charged by Justice Sumner and retired in charge of Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell for their deliberations in the grand jury room below. At 12.18 p. m. the jury returned to the court room and Foreman Buffum presented two true bills or indictments. These were State vs. Edward Joplin for breaking and entering in the day time and larceny and State vs. John Zuzu, charged with false pretense in disposing of poultry secured in Hope Valley. Zuzu is out on bail and will be brought into court next Wednesday to plead.

Edward Joplin, colored, who will be 23 years old next June, when presented before Judge Sumner pleaded "guilty" to entering the place of George H. Smith in Exeter on Dec. 25, 1925 and the larceny of an overcoat valued at $28, which he was wearing at the time he was apprehended, also a pair of shoes valued at $3.50, to a total value of $31.50. In answer to Assistant Attorney General Louis V. Lackvony who represented the state, Joplin said that he had been in jail twice previously, once for larceny in Providence and served 94 days and once on a vagrancy charge and that he lived with an aunt. In imposing a sentence of three years, Judge Sumner said, "You've got to cut out that stuff or spend the rest of young life in jail."

Bolick Puckas of Hope Valley, represented by Attorney Roche, entered a plea of "nolo," when on complaint of Deputy Chief of Police William L. Kay of Hopkinton he was arraigned on the complaint of using profane and obscene language in a dance hall in Hope Valley. Attorney Jackvony asked for a deferred sentence and although the Judge said he did not like the deferred sentence and that he would fine the young man instead, a search of the law showed that no fine was named only a minimum imprisonment of 6 months, which Attorney Roche said was the reason of appeal from the Third District court at Westerly. With the admonition from the Judge that next time he would be sent to jail, a deferred sentence was given.

Following the retirement of the grand jury came the calling of the docket, in which criminal complaints were to be taken up on Wednesday. Divorce cases to be heard were set down for today (Tuesday) trial at West Kingston. On the presentation of marriage certificate Ellen S. Rose of Peacedale, R. I., will be granted a divorce from Daniel H. Rose of parts unknown. Ellen S. Rose testified that she was married at West Chester, N. Y., Oct. 25, 1882 and had lived in South Kingstown for 20 years and had received no support from her husband since June, 1918, although she estimated her husband's estate, exclusive of an orange grove in Florida, as between $30,000 and $25,000. They had five children, only two of whom are now living. Other witnesses were a married daughter, Mrs. Mary Gray, John Baptiste, a boarder and a son John D. Rosa. Pending the divorce a weekly allowance of $25 was ordered together with attorney's fees $50.

The assignment docket of cases entered in superior court for Washington county were disposed of as follows on Monday Assignment day, by Judge Sumner, at West Kingstown: Actions at law, Abbie J. Morrow et al vs. Charles T. Clarke, alias. An automobile accident case in which parties were killed, assigned to first jury day, Feb. 17th at Kingston. Elizabeth N. Smith vs. Arthur A. McGuire. When members of a family quarrel a lot of truth is apt to leak out.

The bagpipe, which was threatened for a while last spring when an American jazz operetta introduced the saxophone to Scotland, has come back into its own. The bagpipe was recently introduced in a jazz band in Glasgow and in this new role has been going strong ever since. Only large men are engaged as jazz bagpipe players, because of the necessity of having individuals with an enormous lung expansion who are capable of keeping pace with the saxophone and double quick time.

POETRY

Gray Dawn

The poets sing of the endless day
When shadows gently fall
With the fleeting sun on its blazoned way
When the night birds softly call.

Night, when a lazy, smiling moon
Climbs o'er its starlit trail
Night, when lovers softly croon,
Wrapped in enchanted veil.

But give me the stillness of unborn dawn
When the gray mist adds a chill,
While the weary world is sleeping on,
And things seem ghostly still.

Give me the shock of the chilly stream
As the decoys splash and quack!
Give me the thrill of a hunter's dream
Far from the beaten track.

Give me the call of a good decoy,
Answered with whir of wings;
Give me the wonder and then the joy
The first good shooting brings.

Give me bite hunger for just plain bread,
Bacon 'n coffee—Gee!
Cooked o'er a fire with embers red,
For just the dog 'n me.

Give me the sun with its soft salutes,
Bringing the daylight on;
Give me my gun and my hunting boots;
Give me the cold, gray dawn.

Philip C. Braniff in Outdoor Americana.

The Rose of Stars

When Love, our great Immortal,
Put on mortality,
And down from Eden's portal
Brought this sweet life to be,
At the sublime archangel
He laughed with veiled eyes,
For he bore within his bosom
The seed of Paradise.

He hid it in his bosom,
And there such warmth it found,
It broke in bud and blossom,
And the rose fell on the ground;
As the green light on the ground;
As the red light on the sea,
Through fragrant belts of summer
Came this sweet life to be.

And the grave archangel seeing
Spread his mighty wings for flight,
But the glow hung round him fleeing
Like the rose of an Arctic night;
And sadly moving heavenward
By Venue and by Mars,
He heard the joyful planets
Hail Earth, the Rose of Stars.

—George Edward Woodberry.

Far from the beaten path of travel a new national park is being planned in the James and Sangre de Christo mountain ranges in northern New Mexico. At the southern entrance of the proposed park is a beautiful canyon which has a high water fall that roars and sparkles. The ordinary Japanese public rarely, if ever, has been permitted to view the interior of the Imperial palace. The motion picture is to change all that, in accordance with an agreement reached between the educational and household authorities, says an Associated Press dispatch. In order that every Japanese may have an idea of what his majesty's home looks like from the inside films will be taken of every interesting room in the magnificent palace. Among the "shots" will be those of the main entrance, the Imperial porch, Homei hall, Chiguas hall and Phoenix hall. Films also will be taken of the Imperial ancestral shrines, as well as the Fukiage garden.

The body of the machine is watertight and buoyant and would float several hours.

DANIELSON

NO SIGNS OF ICE BEGINNING TO BREAK UP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Feb. 15—There were no signs during Monday that heavy ice in the Assawaga and Quinebaug rivers was near to breaking up and going on a rampage. However, great quantities of surface water were finding their way to the riversand some effect from this may be noticeable by today.

Motor coaches were again operating on the Providence-Willimantic line Monday. The keeping of this route open even part of the time since the first big snowstorm of a week ago Thursday has been anything but an easy task. It appeared Monday as though the greatest of the difficulties had been overcome, at least for the time being.

A Valentine dance under the auspices of the Killingly High School Alumni association at the assembly hall of Killingly High school Monday evening was a very pleasant affair for those attending. It was the second of a series of dances planned by the association and had been postponed from a previous date on account of bad weather conditions.

There was fuming and fussing Monday over streets not having been relieved of some of the snow that still blankets Danielson. The fact is that there has been so much of this work to do that it has been impossible to keep abreast of it. A number of streets in the borough have received no attention at all, though crews have worked steadily every day. However, progress is being made and conditions will be improved from day to day.

In view of the present prospect of an enlarged Killingly High school being ready for the opening of the next school year in September, it is regarded as very probable that a considerable increase in enrollment may be looked for. It is held that the splendid high school the town is to have is almost certain to claim the interest of more students ready to enter such a school than would be the case if the building remained as it is at present, with its facilities overtaxed.

Soon after completing his high school course he entered the employ of Whipple and Gilpatric at Putnam and from there had a clerical position in a bank for a time. Receiving a civil service appointment in Washington some thereafter he went to that city. For a time he filled a secretarial position for a United States government official in Porto Rico and again returned to Washington. During the World war he was in a confidential position in the United States Marine corps. Following the war he resumed his place in the government service in Washington. For sometime past he has been in the Shipping Board organization. Mr. Tetreault was about 38 years of age. In addition to his wife and a five year old son he leaves his mother, Mrs. Arcelia Benoit, and two sisters, Misses Florine and Blanche Tetreault of Danielson. His father died a number of years ago.

Frozen catch basins prevented the easy running off of water that was streaming down various streets in the borough during Monday's thaw. Relief was gained at some points through the active work of citizens plying implements that are effective in cutting ice.

Lightning flashes during the rain of Sunday night were regarded by some who make a study of the weather as forecasting that the worst of the winter is over and that mild times are to be anticipated from now on, with only occasional real coal spells.

The snow storm on Wednesday was the worst in many years. The high wind and piercing cold made it the most tedious of winter days. The drifts cripled traffic even on the state road and a number living here, who are employed in the cloak factory, at Colchester, were unable to get home at night.

The automobiles are having a rest on country roads and people are traveling only when it is absolutely necessary. The thoughtful driver always takes along a shovel to help in emergencies, however.

The winter birds now noted in February, is the sprightly little flock of 13 juncos that daily come to the farmhouse door, the blue jays and chickadees. Once in a while the flicker is noted to venture out from his winter home in the hollow tree. Even the crows of late are conspicuous in their absence.

HOW ATHLETES TREAT STRAINS AND SPRAINS

Gymnasium director advises simple, easy treatment

Hard exercise brings lame muscles—and often bruises and strains as well.

An athletic director in a gymnasium at Utica, N. Y., writes that he has found a simple and always effective way of treating them.

"Just put on a little Sloan's Liniment, as the bottle says, without rubbing. It takes out stiffness and pain as nothing else will. We have it always on hand and we think it is the best ever."

Sloan's gives real help because it doesn't just deaden the pain: it gets at the cause. Right to the place that hurts it brings a healing tide of fresh new blood—builds up the injured tissues—clears out the fatigue poisons.

Almost at once you feel relief. Stiffness, swelling, inflammation go down. The pain stops. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

PUTNAM

GILPATRIC SAYS STATE HAS ALL MONEY DUE IT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 15—G. Harold Gilpatric left here at 5:30 this afternoon in charge of Guard Hughes of the Atlanta prison. He is to appear in bankruptcy court at Hartford Tuesday morning. He arrived in Putnam at 3 o'clock Saturday evening and was taken directly to the home of his parents on Fremont street where he remained in close seclusion until this evening. With the exception of the members of his family he saw no one but his local attorney, E. C. Morse and two or three intimate friends.

During his stay here he kept up his spirits in an admirable way but to one of the friends who saw him he admitted that the days at Atlanta were very long and went by very slowly.

"To the very best of my ability," he said, "I want to help straighten the accounts between the State and the First National bank and I will answer every question that is asked me that I can remember; but," he added, "it is simply impossible for me to recall the details of the many transactions in the purchase of bonds or other securities. The bank benefited in the ordinary business way by being the agency through which these securities were bought and sold, and the State has all the money due it. As to whether some bond purchases were paid for with money belonging to the bank will, I presume, be disclosed by the accountants who are going over the books."

Speaking of his visit here, he said that no one could understand how much it meant to him to hear the voices of his parents, and his wife and children, even if he could not see them. He is totally blind and a noted eye specialist after an examination three months ago said that he would never regain his vision.

PLEASED WITH APPOINTMENT OF RALPH C. JENKINS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 15—(AP)—The citizens of Putnam are naturally pleased over the selection of Ralph C. Jenkins of this city as president of the Connecticut Association of Public School Superintendents. His interest in civic affairs are best attested by the fact that he is president of the Putnam Rotary club.

It was also voted to empower the above named officers to create a legislative committee to cooperate with Dr. A. B. Meredith and the state board of education in all matters of legislation affecting the schools which may come before the next session of the legislature. He was sentenced to thirty days in Brooklyn jail but was put on probation for six months, during which time he is to report to the probation officer, Meni Coderre once a month.

Mr. Bolak is 22 years of age and was employed at the Grosvernordale mill at the time of his arrest and escape. He secured work at Jewett City where he says he was making $33 a week.

George A. Hammond, aged 82, one of Connecticut's pioneer silk manufacturers and one of the eleven veterans of the civil war is suffering from a broken hip. He has been confined to his home for a number of years with a nurse in attendance. In attempting to reach for something on the table near him, his chair slipped from under him. Because of his advanced age and physical infirmities his injuries are regarded as serious. Mr. Hammond is one of the best known citizens of Putnam, has served in city offices and in state house of representatives and the state senate.

JEWETT CITY

FOX HUNTING REPORTED EXCELLENT IN GRISWOLD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Feb. 15—Not in some years have fox hunters in Griswold been meeting with such fine success. Town Clerk John Welsh has paid a dozen bounties, to fortunate followers of the trail within a few weeks. Recent information from one of the town's leading fox hunters was to the effect that not for 10 years has Mr. Reynard been as bold as since the two recent heavy snow storms. His ground feeding activities, with a field mouse or two to top off with, have been cut short by the foot of snow that covers his hunting grounds. Unwary chickens are more liable now than ever to receive an unwelcome call from the king of hencoop marauders. Some few years ago the state of Connecticut paid half the fox bounties but today the two dollars comes from the town treasury, and any of the poultry owners of Griswold will say that it is a good investment. As about now is the time that it is possible that the experience of one of Lisbon's most noted fox hunters may be duplicated, this true story is told again.

The late Henry Read, one day, just at dusk on one of Lisbon's distant hills that overlook the borough, shot and killed a more than usually fat fox. Mr. Read whose prowess and unerring skill with his long barrelled army musket, is well remembered hereabouts had been watching this particular burrow, under the overhang of a ledge of rocks for several days. Being only a mile or so from the town clerk's office Henry hit upon the plan of going there at once to claim his legal bounty. Entering the town dignitary's office, which by the way was only the back kitchen of a country farm house, the hunter threw Mr. Fox on the floor and allowed as how he would relieve the town treasury of $2, the prescribed bounty. Was there something said about Mr. Fox? Well! that's all wrong. As Mr. Read, removed the pelt, preparatory to selling it for a future sale, when the peltries peddler should make his rounds among the hunters. Lo! and behold, it was found that Henry had seven foxes, where he only thought he had one. The town clerk demurred, but there they were laid out on the floor, Mrs. Vixen and six beside. When the hunter left he had 14 iron men in his jeans, being overheard to remark, "Some luck, I calls it."

Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky has a new and added significance since Sunday evening's unheralded electrical storm.

There were vivid flashes of regular lightning and man sized thunder right behind it.

A few minutes past nine a bolt connected up with the electric lighting system. One of the big down town transformers was put out of commission, with the result that the lower section of the town was in darkness the balance of the night.

Rain fell in more or less quantity all day and late into the evening. Monday, a temperature that rose to above 50 in the warm sun gave the great piles of snow an appreciable jolt. Lake Monday evening the Quinebaug was beginning to near the bank full stage.

Miles McCarthy died in Waterbury on Sunday. He was born in Franklin, N. J., about 50 years ago. He was the son of Michael and Johanna McCarthy and the family have lived in Jewett City nearly 50 years. He was married to Mary Melady in Jewett City 18 years ago. For a number of years they lived in Waterbury. Mr. McCarthy was a mail carrier there and while on his route two years ago last November fell and injured his hip. Several operations were performed, but tuberculosis of the hip was the result and for many months he has been a great sufferer. He is survived by his wife and two children Margaret 17 and Miles aged 6. He leaves two sisters Jennie and Johanna, two brothers Joseph and Michael, all of Jewett City and Luke of Sterling.

A meeting of all rifle shooters of Jewett City is to be held in the legion room on Wednesday evening.

Asher Popple who lives in the south part of the town, feeds a flock of twelve unll every day. He has been in the habit of feeding birds in his vicinity every winter, even going to Stone Hill.

Look for Film

(Run your tongue across your teeth and feel it!)

That's what makes your teeth look "off color." That's what invites decay and gum troubles.

Just accept, please, this remarkable dental test which gives "off-color" teeth dazzling whiteness and firms delicate gums by removing that dingy film from teeth

In a few days you can work a transformation in your mouth this new way. Dazzling whiteness will supplant that "off-color" look of your teeth. Your gums will become firm and take on a healthy coral tint.

Film . . . the trouble

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film, a viscous coat that covers them. That film is an enemy to your teeth—and your gums.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It absorbs discolorations and gives your teeth that cloudy "off-color" look. Germs by the millions breed in it, and they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea, and gum disorders.

Old-time methods fail in successfully combating it. That's why regardless of the care you take now, your teeth remain dull—your gums soft and toneless.

New methods remove it. And firm the gums

Now, in a new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent, dental science has discovered effective combatants. Their action is to curdle the film and remove it, then to firm the gums.

"It's a fact—they are Life Savers between smokes."

Smokers tell each other

"My boy has recently taken a great fancy to Life Savers," one man said. "You know, those candy mints with the hole."

"Yes," his friend smiled. "My kids like 'em too."

"But the funny thing is," his friend went on, "the kid's got me eating them now, too. They're the greatest thing you ever discovered between smokes. I'm never without a package—at the office, at home or travelling like this."

• • •

More and more smokers are doing the same thing. We wondered if you knew this about Life Savers, those little candy mints with the hole; how they freshen your mouth between smokes, soothe your nerves and make the next smoke taste so much better.

It's a fact: Life Savers easily double your smoke enjoyment. Their wonderful aromatic flavors freshen your mouth like a good drink of water when you're really thirsty—and steady your nerves for work or play. Once you try them this way between smokes, you'll always have a package handy.

Six flavors are displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: Pep-o-mint, Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Cl-o-ve and Vi-o-let. Five cents a package.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

"Upheaval" Hoax

The stir caused some two months ago by the alleged discovery by a French government worker that the floor of the Bay of Biscay had undergone a sudden upheaval, and that in place of the abyss marked on the marine charts there was now a comparatively shallow plateau, seems to have been a hoax. A special survey ship of the French government, the Gaston-Rivier, was sent out to check the soundings reported, and Dr. Charcot's scientific ship, the Pourquoi-Pas, collaborated in the work. After the most thorough investigation it was found that the bottom of the Bay of Biscay had not changed in any way since the charts in general use were made.

CREDIT WHERE IT BELONGS

In connection with the settlement of the coal strike credit should rest where it belongs. There are those who are laying claim to it because they hope to use it for political advancement and there are those who actually injected themselves into the dispute for that purpose.

Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania saw in the strike a chance to advance his campaign for the United States senatorship. He was quick to rush in with a plan of settlement, but he had done so before and thereby hangs the reason for the opposition to his one sided proposition. Pinchot's connection with it simply meant that the operators and the public wanted nothing to do with his plan. Once was enough.

Senator Copeland of New York seems to think that he ought to have a feather in his cap for trying to get the president to act, but his effort of course amounted to nothing. The president declined to step in and the interesting observation is made by one close observer that if the president had undertaken to interfere the strike would still be underway.

Former Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania and Secretary Davis of the department of labor made their attempts to bring the leaders of the two sides together but without result.

President Coolidge maintained from the first that he was powerless to act and that he would maintain a hands off policy. He declares that he had no part in the settlement and he makes no attempt to claim differently.

Richard F. Grant of Cleveland believed that he saw a way of convincing the miners and operators that they could get together. It may have been a time when another might have done the same thing but that doesn't detract from the credit of it. The fact remains that it was Grant who gradually won over each side. He has been given credit by the respective leaders for what he did and it is folly for those who are seeking political preferment put of it to try to picture the situation differently. Had Grant not appeared the strike would in all probability be as far from adjustment as ever.

OUR OIL PRODUCTION

Not more than a year or two ago there were experts who were telling us that the gasoline supply would not last over a quarter of a century. That seems only a short time but now we are told by an expert appearing before the federal oil conservation board that the oil supply in this country will not last more than seven and a half years unless other sources of supply than now known are found. If we cannot get oil we cannot get gasoline.

During the past year, according to government figures, there was a production of 764,000,000 barrels of oil in this country, or about three quarters of the entire world production. This indicates that we are drawing heavily upon the oil resources of this country in addition to drawing from Mexico. But in Mexico there has been a falling off in the production of oil and the question naturally arises as to whether we are giving due consideration to the fact that we are steadily increasing our demands for petroleum products and whether we are as mindful as we should be of the waste that is going on unchecked.

More and more are uses being found for oil. It is being used for the driving of automobiles, but it is also employed for the driving of steamships, warships, airships, submarines and locomotives. It is also used for operating Diesel engines for power and more and more are bringing it into use for heating purposes. The demands are multiplying as if there was no limit to the source of supply. The fact, however, that we are leading in the production of petroleum may simply mean that we are heading just that much quicker to the exhaustion of the supply.

Whether this will mean that due attention will be directed to the development of a substitute fuel for the auto, steamship, airplane and locomotive remains to be seen. We have experienced such changes in other directions and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility, but the statements to the effect that we are moving toward the time when there can be expected to be an exhaustion of oil should spur on the invention of something to take its place.

ALIEN CRIMINALS

Those who argue that alien criminals should be deported either when they are eligible for parole or when they are released from the penitentiary are finding additional support for their attitude in the case of Joseph P. Murphy who was found dead following a fight with the authorities and in whose pocket was disclosed a pardon from the governor of Kentucky.

Murphy had been convicted of a felony and served four years of a seven year sentence in the Kentucky reformatory when he was pardoned by the governor. He had been a good prisoner and was eligible for parole some time before he received his pardon but would not accept it because if he had accepted parole he would have been deported. He served a short time longer and getting a pardon was permitted to go his way.

In his case it doesn't appear that he profited by his imprisonment. Only a matter of two months had elapsed before he was engaged with others of his class in preying upon the public. He was armed and someone in his gang, possibly Murphy himself, had shot at and killed a deputy sheriff who was pursuing them.

Had Murphy been sent out of the country and back whence he came at the time he could have been released on parole, or even after he had been granted a pardon, one life would not have been sacrificed, even though he might have brought about his own end quite as quickly elsewhere. Just why such persons should be tolerated in this country to make life miserable for others and to carry out their law defiance even to the point of killing those who seek to uphold the law is hard to understand.

It can be urged that there are enough of such persons who cannot be deported without displaying an attitude of tolerance for those who can be. They cannot be classed as a benefit to this country and the sooner such are sent away and kept away the quicker will there be an end of the undesirable alien and a lessening of the criminal class. The country certainly owes them no support.

DRAFTED BY OHIO

That the Connecticut chamber of commerce deeply regrets the decision of Secretary George B. Chandler to give up his activities in this state and take up similar duties in Ohio, and at the same time regretting its inability to provide sufficient inducement to keep him here, can be thoroughly appreciated.

In whatever activity Mr. Chandler has been engaged he has given to it thorough devotion and a high degree of conscientious service. Whether it was in the legislature, as a compensation commissioner or as secretary of the state chamber of commerce he was everlastingly on the job, administering his duties in an efficient manner and getting results.

It is not surprising that Connecticut's Western Reserve in looking about for a state secretary of the chamber of commerce has decided that Secretary Chandler fills the bill. His work was bound to make an excellent impression outside as well as inside the state. It was inevitable that sooner or later he would be drafted for duties that would command a larger return than similar activities in this state warranted.

The feeling of Connecticut is that Ohio has certainly made no mistake in obtaining the services of Mr. Chandler and he will carry west with him the confidence of his many friends that he will make as great a success in his new field as he attained here. Mr. Chandler isn't the first Connecticut man that has been called to the aid of Ohio and by his and their records there is every reason to believe that he will not be the last.

AGAINST MONOPOLIES

However much it may be claimed that big business is more efficient and economical it has been made evident this month that this government has no intention of stimulating a monopoly.

It was clearly demonstrated when the move was made by the department of justice against the combination of big bread companies and once more it is displayed by the suit for an injunction that has been brought against the officers and directors of the National Food Products corporation a $160,000,000 organization, which though much smaller than the $2,000,000,000 bread merger has been regarded as tending to the same result.

Perhaps it can be shown that these combinations would not establish monopolies and it may be possible for those back of them to convince the courts that they would be a benefit to the people of the country, but that must be the verdict of the court if they are permitted to go through. The government has indicated that it is unwilling to be responsible for permitting the mergers to be carried out. They are looked upon as violations of the law and as such they must be treated accordingly.

These two actions stand out conspicuously relative to the government's attitude concerning monopolies and convincingly sets forth its position in regard to the enforcement of the anti trust law. Those who have maintained that the law meant nothing or that it was being ignored are sitting up and taking notice.

EDITORIAL NOTES

By this time the sidwalks of New York must be visible once more.

Possibly it has been a hard winter but the present price of eggs doesn't confirm such an opinion.

If that thundershower represented the snapping of the spinal column of winter it was certainly some backbone.

Some cities have been getting a better idea of what was meant when Pittsburgh was referred to as the Smoky City.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 16—One of the local newspapers recently received the query "When was the Washington monument moved and who moved it?"

As the Washington monument is seemingly as steadfast as the obelisks the question and answer attracted considerable attention at the capital.

Here is the story—but though the foundation was changed the monument did not move.

Somebody was overheard to say the moving of the monument was one of the greatest engineering feats of the ages. The monument was not moved but putting a new foundation under it was in fact a great engineering project.

When about one fourth the monument had been built, it was discovered the foundation would be inadequate to hold the great weight for ages; it was therefore decided to replace the old foundation of masonry for one of concrete. To do this it was necessary to undermine every inch of the foundation of the great shaft, and this was done by removing it bit by bit, replacing every piece as it was taken out. The base was broadened, and so perfectly and accurately was the work done that not even a crack in the wall has followed, though this work was done well along to a century ago. The work and plans for it were directly under Colonel Casey, chief of the board of army engineers.

It's safe to say that "going up the Washington monument," is the most popular of all sightseeing excursions in the capitol as the records show.

Senator Walsh of Montana has taken the initiative in a get-together of leading democrats to plan an active campaign for 1926. The Walsh dinner last week to Franklin D. Roosevelt, and senate leaders was the beginning of the move, and that has been followed up by several smaller conferences. The task of putting the democratic cause very plainly and forcefully before the people of the country seems to have been the main topic. And it is to that end that the leading democrats of the senate are now devoting their thought, though fighting along factional lines.

Apparently the tariff will hold the front rank, though no definite issue is yet agreed upon. They will also endeavor to line up the farmers of the middle west against a high protective tariff on the ground that the farmers have to buy in a highly protective market and sell in a market largely governed by world prices. This is of course, disputed by the republicans and the feeling here is that the president holds, and will continue to hold the confidence of the west. The democrats will also attack the republicans as being friends to big business, with now and then a slap at the various commissions appointed by the administration.

The democrats are boastful of the fact that they have wiped out the last penny of the debt contracted in the 1924 campaign, and are now insisting economy shall govern the campaign to be waged this year. Cordell Hull of Tennessee, who is the author of the income tax bill, believes the tariff should be the main campaign issue, according to recent quotations made from Hull's public speeches. Democrats here frown down mention of presidential candidates for 1928, believing they should make capturing congress the first thought of the present year.

When Copeland of New York, referred to Al Smith as the probable presidential candidate, Caraway of Arkansas rose, and sarcastically remarked he wished the New York senator would let the democratic party do their own picking of candidates. Copeland and Caraway are both democrats.

A survey of the Parent-Teachers association shows that parents are beginning to take back some of the responsibilities that have for several years been allowed to rest on schools alone. This survey was made under the U. S. bureau of education by Miss Ellen Lombard, assigned to the task of reporting the outcome.

Miss Lombard says that in the recent past too many parents have turned their little children over to schools without a thought of their physical fitness, and perhaps with a sigh of relief that the morals, manners and habits of the children would now be directed by a teacher instead of by "mother".

But now, says Miss Lombard, the Parent Teacher associations are aiming to have much of the preliminary training accomplished at home, so when children enter school they will be fit to do so.

"In a number of states," says Miss Lombard; student loan finds and scholarship prompted by a Parent-Teacher association have been the means of keeping children in school when they otherwise would have been unable to attend.

According to the latest figures for 1924, the membership of Parent Teacher associations had then reached 651,387, California leads in number for any one state, with a membership of 79,808.

Fortunately the New England congressional delegations seem to live in peace and harmony among themselves, notwithstanding some splits in party affiliations. But occasionall we hear words quoted from other states that tend to show quite another spirit. For instance someone reports that when Senator Blease of South Carolina was asked whom he would prefer as a candidate in the forthcoming senatorial campaign in that state, when Ellison D. Smith comes up for re-election, replied: "I'd name Lillie Summers Blease." And that happens to be the name of Blease's wife.

If you note that hereafter wedding and other formal invitations come to you in only one envelope, you may credit it to economy at the white house. Mrs. Coolidge, under a new social secretary, is having the white house reception invitations sent out with only one envelope, into which are tucked all the various cards, for admission, the invitation itself the windshield card and the little green card that must be handed the usher for filing. Formally several small envelopes were enclosed in the big one for mail or personal distribution.

The women of the Connecticut delegation are taking a pleasant part in social affairs this winter. Representative and Mrs. Freeman entertained a party of 12 at dinner at the Congressional Country club a few nights ago; and other women members of the delegation have observed their customary Tuesday afternoons at home; Mrs. Tilson, as wife of the floor leader of the house, has held an unusually brilliant series of at-homes during the session.

Ayer of Kansas introduced a bill in the house a few days ago that is so drastic that it copies with the exception of a single word, an old state law. The Ayer bill is directed against buyers or sellers of liquor. It classes them with pirates, and makes the punishment ten years in the penitentiary.

Except for the substitution of the word liquor for slave and the sentence of ten years in the penitentiary for a death penalty, the bill is identical with the old slave bill.

President Coolidge has pricked the Guamscott bubble and get at rest, for the present at least, that he is intending to make Massachusetts his summer home this year, and take part in the Butler campaign for reelection. The president was evidently dismissed at the statements that he intended to aid Massachusetts candidates by his presence in the state this summer. It is well known, of course, that the president stands strongly for Butler's reelection, but he doesn't purpose to be drawn into a local campaign by being on the ground all summer. In fact it is doubtful if the summer white house would have existed last year had it not been for the repair work being done at the white house that made it almost uninhabitable in July and August.

THE SEWING CIRCLE

"Why its it," speculated the young matron with the auburn wave, "that it requires so much more effort to write a letter to England, for instance, than to dash off one that only goes out to Peoria or down to Indianapolis? The financial outlay is the same in both cases, so it is not a subconscious concession to the cost of overhead that weighs on one's mind."

"Well, I don't know," said the fluffy-haired blond, consideringly; "your subconscious ego or something may be reminding you that it takes a strong man two weeks to haul your letter to Sussex or Bromley, Kent, and you feel a personal responsibility in making it somehow worth his while. I use the word 'haul' advisedly, dear, but not with special reference to your epistolary efforts. I've been getting long letters lately from a girl in Colorado who uses that thick white stationery that looks so like a bath rug, and she affects nine words to the page. I've had to buy an extra waste paper basket to accommodate her, and a fireproof one at that, because the general quality of her communications is so temperamental that I wouldn't trust 'em to a wooden receptacle."

"Is she unbalanced or what?" inquired the young matron with the auburn wave, sympathetically.

"Well," hesitated the fluffy-haired blond, with a twinkle, "she's just married. Of course it's a matter of opinion."

"Snf," said the black-haired member discreetly.

"Exactly, darling," agreed the fluffy-haired blonde. "This girl comes from down east where they do things exclusively in the way their great grandfathers did them, if you get my meaning. She had a lot of preconceived ideas.

"They were particularly strong on the subject of the man she should marry, if any. She had made up her mind irrevocably to at least three things he was not to be. Capital N in not. She would by no means marry a person with red hair, or a railroad man, or a democrat. She came from New York state you see, and——"

"Did she go west for her health or what?" demanded the black-haired member, who loved details.

"Hmmmm," said the fluffy-haired blond, doubtfully. "I always suspected it was for her family's health back home. She was such a temperamental soul that she gave them no peace. I think—one of these humming bird humans, you know—and I fancy that when they had persuaded her a year out west would broaden her outlook on life, as she put it, they sat back with a sigh of content to enjoy themselves. At least, I had a letter from her recently in which she said the family was strangely reconciled to her continued absence."

"What kind of man is she marrying?" demanded the black-haired member.

"Oh, yes, I asked her that myself" said the fluffy-haired blond. "She wrote in reply that he was a tall man with light auburn hair and blue eyes. He was in the law, she said, although he had very little time for private practice, because he had been running for the legislature on the democratic ticket. But she was glad to say he was not elected, because now he could accept a position offered to him by the M. & N. railroad, and they could travel everywhere on passes."—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Daniel J. Keefe, the Lumber Jack

"Look at that lumberjack work," said one of two men who stood watching a gang of men using their muscle and brawn to remarkable advantage. "But what's he going to get out of it except something to eat and drink and a place to sleep in—a poor place at that!"

The man they were looking at was plain Dan Keefe—strong, hardy, willing to work, full of energy and gifted with will power. Instead of going to school as other boys had done, he had been put to work, when only a child, in a shingle mill. There he had learned to the full what "work" means, and there, too, he had learned about lumber. As the years had passed he had gone on in the field of toil, and had moved from the shingle mill to the work in lumber. He was still a young man, keen eyed, energetic and manly. As he had grown older he had become more and more interested in the men with whom he worked. He had taken an active part in organizations and he was well regarded by his fellows. Because of the manhood that was in him, and because of his good use of opportunities that came to him, when Dan Keefe was double the age at which the men had seen him, he was known far and wide. When he was but little more than double the age of that when one man had thought him only a lumberjack, who could never lift himself higher than daily work, he was Commissioner General of Immigration for the United States. It is indeed a fact that the door of opportunity is open to all.

The man's independence and energy led to his being made an officer in a labor organization. His hard work made him the choice for head of the organization. When he was 27 he was president of the Lumber Unloaders' Association. Good work in that position led to his becoming president of the International Longshoremen's, Marine and Transport Workers' Association. Continued good work made him an important national figure in labor activities. As he developed wisdom and knowledge of men, he was more and more looked upon with favor. In 1908 the man who had been only a lumberjack was found to be the man to serve as Commissioner General of Immigration.

No one who looks upon any group of laborers can say with certainty what lies before them. To youth, honesty, willingness to work, and ambition, all doors are open.

Stories That Recall Others

Don't Have to Now

Dorothy and Ruth were members of the same Sunday school class. They met on the street one day and Dorothy asked:

"Ruth, why aren't you in Sunday school any more?"

"Oh," replied Ruth supercilliously, as she tilted her snub nose as a token of superiority, "we don't have to go to church at our house any more—we've got a radio."

To Him Who Waits

A new moving picture machine was being set up at a hospital replacing one which had been put out of commission.

A representative of the sales company which sold the equipment suggested to the electrician that two machines be used to eliminate the obvious long waits between changes of films.

Shorty a patient but the electrician's helper, spoke up:

"Wait! Say, mister, these people can wait. They ain't going nowheres."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, who believes that something is wrong with the present system of higher education when football coaches in more than one instance are paid more than the college presidents, is a distinguished educator who for more than a quarter of a century has held the presidency of Brown University. Prior to going to the Providence institution Dr. Faunce was an instructor at Harvard and at the summer school of the University of Chicago. He is a native of Massachusetts and a direct descendant of Thomas Faunce, who was ruling elder in Old Plymouth church for 40 years. After graduating from Brown in 1880 young Faunce took a course at Newton Theological Seminary, and was ordained in 1884. For a number of years after he entered the ministry he occupied the pulpit of the fashionable Fifth Avenue Baptist church in New York City, retiring in 1899 to become president of Brown.

Why the "EASY" Washes dainty things so satisfactorily

Women who once would never have dreamed of washing their own precious georgettes and underthings, their own treasured sweaters and scarfs except by hand, now confidently commit them to the gentle action of and its three nickel plated cups. There are good reasons for this change.

1 Fine things of this sort cannot be entrusted to unskilled hands and rough treatment.

2 Delicate silks should be washed as soon as they become soiled. To leave such garments for several days in a damp, dark hamper or bag is to cut months from their life. It is so convenient to wash with the "EASY" that many women cleanse these important things as soon as they become soiled.

3 The "EASY" washes without friction. Air is the medium used to impel the warm sudsy solution thru the meshes of these finer garments. Carefully conducted tests have demonstrated that clothes actually last longer when washed the Easy way than if washed by hand.

For delicate modern things, only the Easy air pressure and vacuum cup method—so gentle, yet so throughly cleansing—will do.

Little Talks on Thrift

BUDGETING

"Is there any rule to be followed in budgeting one's personal and household expenses?"

This excerpt from a letter recently received reflects the attitude of many persons on the same subject.

What percentage of one's income should be saved? What is a fair proportion to be paid for rent, food fuel, education, recreation and other items that go out?

No general rule can apply to all cases. The standards of thrift necessarily must vary with circumstances. In fact one of the elements of thrift practice is to study one's problems and gain added wisdom and resourcefulness therefrom.

Some time ago the United States government savings system issued a statement that a thrift man should spend 50 per cent of his income for living expenses; 10 percent for education; 10 per cent for giving; 10 per cent for recreation and save 20 per cent. The treasury department has stated that a family of three with $2,000 income should save $200; a family of four with $3,000 income should save $300; a family of four with $4,000 income should save $4,000; a family of four with $6,500 income should save $1,400 and a family of five with $10,000 income should save $2,400.

While it may be true that the average man in America should save 20 per cent of his personal income, it does not follow that a man who under certain circumstances only saves 10 per cent or even 5 per cent of his income is not just as thrifty as some other man who might save 50 per cent of his income.

There are rightful duties and obligations that must be met, and their fulfillment might preclude the saving of any considerable sum of money. On the other hand, a man might be so situated that even if he did lay aside 20 per cent of his income he would be wasteful.

Thrift is self-discipline; strength of character; efficiency and a commonsense administration of one's affairs.—American Society for Thrift.

WEDDING GUEST SHOT IN STRUGGLE WITH BRIDEGROOM OVER REVOLVER

As he grabbed a 22 calibre revolver from the hands of Albert J. Plante, who married Sophie Wolinski Monday morning, John Sawicki, 18, a wedding guest from New London, was accidentally shot in the right hand and leg during a reception at the home of the bride's parents, No. 175 Hinckley street, Monday evening. This is the explanation given the local police who are investigating the affair.

From what can be learned of the affair Sawicki came from New London to attend the wedding reception. He informed the groom that a group of New London men who knew the groom and who were not invited to the wedding, were planning to show up at the reception and make trouble. As a matter of precaution the groom borrowed the gun from a neighbor.

When the bride saw the gun in the groom's hands she told him to give it to her and he did so. Then after giving it to her, realizing that it was loaded he took it back and started to pry the bullets out of the chamber with the aid of a hair pin and jackknife. He had gotten one or two of the bullets out of the gun when Sawicki happened to see the gun in his hands.

The story goes that Sawicki remarked, "What are you doing with that gun?" and made a grab for it. Just as Sawicki grabbed it, the gun went off and the bullet went through his right hand and down into his right thigh.

The next move was to get the injured man to the hospital. A horse and buggy were hitched up and the bride's father and Frank Lowanic started to drive Sawicki to the hospital. They proceeded as far as the Chelsea Bank building when a Yellow Cab was hailed and the wounded man assisted into the cab from the buggy. He was unable to walk. The cab driver, Anthony Mierjewski, hurried Sawicki to the hospital.

Mierjewski, on his way back to the city, stopped in at police headquarters and informed Captain Thomas P. Murphy that he had just taken a wounded man to the hospital. Police headquarters was already aware of the fact for Officer Hugh McAvoy, on duty at Franklin square, noticed the man being aided to the cab and notified headquarters.

Police Sergt. John T. Casey and Officer Patrick Murphy were sent to the hospital to interview the wounded man as to how he came to get shot. They got Sawicki's story and reported back at headquarters.

Police Sergeant Mathew Delaney and Officer Frank Gwiazdowski were despatched to the scene of the shooting to investigate. After interviewing several of those at the house they took Plante to headquarters where he was questioned by Captain Murphy, afterwards being allowed to go as the investigation pointed to accidental shooting. Sawicki's condition is not thought serious. An effort to remove the bullet will probably be made today (Tuesday).

The bride and groom were united in marriage Monday morning at St. Joseph's church by the pastor, Rev. S. A. Icisk. The groom has resided at No. 151 Cliff street.

EXPENSES FOR DETOURS COST STATE $63,860

For the laying-out and maintenance of detours in Connecticut during the active road-construction season of 1925, the state highway department expended $63,860, it is shown in a report of its detour supervisor. The work, which involves the creation of suitable substitute roadways encircling roads closed due to construction activities, extended from April 1 to December 31, 1925.

The largest expenditure in connection with this activity was for maintenance of one-way traffic, including special guards and a system of field communication by telephone from each end of the one-way traffic posts. An aggregate of 1,375 signs of varying sizes were used at a total cost of $6,603.20.

A total of 141 miles of detours was required throughout the year, and the total cost of repairing these roads and restoring them to their former condition before heavy traffic was transferred over them, was $15,228.65. A total of 52,000 gallons of road oil was used on these surfaces and the cost of inspection of the travel paths, signs, lights and investigating complaints amounted to $3,926.16, the statement shows.

WESTERLY WOMAN'S SUIT AGAINST NORWICH MAN

On behalf of her three year old daughter, Dorothy May Riley, and on her own behalf, Mrs. Florence Riley, of Westerly, has brought suits for $6,000 against Aristotle Sideropoulos, his wife, Jane, and Angelo Dimitry, all of Norwich, for injuries the plaintiffs received in an automobile accident on Sept. 7, 1925. Treble damages in each instance are claimed by virtue of the statutes in such cases provided. The suits are returnable in the superior court in March.

The claim made is that the woman and her little girl were passengers in the automobile owned and operated by Arthur Peltier, of Versailles, on the Norwich-Montville highway near the tuberculosis sanatorium when it was hit by the Sideropoulos machine which was driven by Dimitry.

The child was thrown against the side and front of the Peltier car, being seriously injured, suffering cuts on the forehead, concussion of the brain and of the spinal cord, with injurey to her nervous system. Mrs. Riley also claims injuries to herself.

It was reported at the meeting that the council had gained in membership to the number of 700 during the past three months.

President Taniseul of the American Federation of Textile Operatives was the guest of the meeting and spoke of the work of the state council in organizing the workers. He said that he found that the textile workers in eastern Connecticut were among the poorest paid in the state, which, he said, was due largely to not being organized. The principal speaker of the day was Mr. Johnstone of Biddeford, Me., who spoke on work done by textile workers in that state. He also thanked the Connecticut organization for the donation of $8,000 to the textile workers in Biddeford, who had been on strike since Dec. 9th. SUZANNE SHOWS MUCH AGITATION WHILE MISS WILLS IS VERY CALM

CANNES, France, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The ambition of Miss Helen Wills' life to satisfy which she alone with her mother crossed the American continent and the ocean, is on the eve of fulfillment. Tomorrow in the finals of the women's singles of the Carlto Tennis Tournament, the California girl will meet Suzanne Lenglen the French wonder and undefeated champion for the past five years.

Both Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Wills easily passed the semi-finals today, the former defeating Henriette Contostavos, 6-0, 6-2, and the latter winning from Didi Vlasto, 6-1, 6-4.

To those who did not see the matches the French champion's figures seem more impressive than those of Miss Wills, but in the opinion of experts the American girl's performance was more inspiring than that of the French woman.

Mlle. Vlasto, Miss Wills' opponent, stands second to Mlle. Lenglen in the tennis lists of Europe; she was finalist in the Olympic championships. Mlle. Contosstavos ranks fifth in France, and never before won a single game from Suzanne. She today also succeeded by winning two games, in breaking Mlle. Lenglen's famous love series in the present matches.

But it was the demeanor of the two champions on the courts, rather than the points, that impressed the spectators. Mlle Lenglen was pale and drawn; her usual smile and debonair manner were absent. She played as if in fear of losing, and her agitation, when her opponent electrified the spectators by winning two games, was curious to behold.

Some of those who had watched the French champion for years looked at one another and asked: "Has the break come?"

Miss Wills, with courage and cool play even when with the score 4-1 against her in the second set things looked gloomy, was a distinct contrast. Mlle. Lenglen walked off the courts railing at the linesmen, whose decisions she had disputed several times during the match, and complaining of a pain in her side.

Miss Wills chatted quietly with friends, and said: "It was a wonderful match and I enjoyed it greatly. Mlle. Vlasto is a great player."

Suzanne had allowed it to be known that she expected to reach the finals with an unbroken string of love games, and her disappointment when the little Marseilles girl won the first game in the second set was eloquent. Suzanne had been playing very careful tennis, taking absolutely no chances, remaining on the baseline and returning the ball softly, evidently intent upon avoiding errors.

Mlle. Contolaivos, realizing the champion was below form, might possibly have won the set, but the emotion which seems toaffect all continental players when meeting Mlle. Lenglen, overcame her, and there is no manner of doubt that had some of the weak-hearted returns sent back to Mlle Contoslavos been directed against Miss Wills, the point would have been killed there and then by her lightning cross-court beforehand drives.

Royalty was again strongly represented. Former King Manuel of Portugal—for whom a seat in the distinguished guests row was finally found, and Prince George of Greece sat through the entire Wills-Vlasto match. The absence of the Duke of Connaught, however, was commented upon. He has never missed a match of this importance on the Riviera, and his failure to appear gave rise to reports that he was again in poor health. But word was received later that he would be present at the finals tomorrow.

Miss Wills, paired with Mlle. Contoslavos, may have a second chance to meet Mlle. Lenglen, paired with Mlle. Didi Vlasto, in the finals of the women's doubles. This match, however, has been regaded as an anti-climax, and it will not take place if either Suzanne or Helen desires to withdraw after the singles match.

Both champions are entered in the Beaulieu tournament, which began today. Miss Wills playing in the singles and women's doubles, and Mlle. Lenglen in the women's and mixed doubles. It is not expected there will be another singles meeting between the two stars in the Riviera, unless, perhaps, in the second Nice tournament in March which is the only one Mlle. Lenglen has entered for the singles.

MISS WILLS INJURED HER KNEE IN FALL ON COURT

CANNES, France, Feb. 15—(AP)—The injury to the knee of Miss Helen Wills, sustained when she fell during her match with Didi Vlasto, was more serious than was first thought. Notwithstanding her courageous statement that she was unhurt, it develops that she suffered a rather deep gash on the right knee.

The wound bled profusely and it is thought the knee may be sore and somewhat stiff when the American champion meets Suzanne Lenglen tomorrow.

The French dinner hour, which lasts for two hours—from 12 noon until 2 p. m., was responsible for the wound not being attended to immediately. Miss Wills and her mother and friends went to four drug stores, but found them closed for luncheon. It was 2 p. m. when the fifth drug store was visited and the proprietor gave the knee the required attention.

HOFF CHALLENGES OSBORNE TO ALL-AROUND CONTEST

NEW YOAK, Feb. 15—(AP)—Charley Hoff, of Norway, record-breaking pole vaulter, has challenged Hal Osborne of Chicago, Olympic and American decathlon champion, to an international all-around test in this city on March 15, A. A. U. officials announced today.

The challenge grows out of friendly rivalry between the two stars which began last summer during Osborne's European tour with other American athletes. Hoff at that time expressed a desire to meet the Illinois A. C. man in an all-round test The discussion of their respective merits was renewed at the recent Millrose A. A. meet, when Osborne indicated, according to officials, that he would be willing to meet Hoff.

The Norwegian today signified his willingness to stage the event at the Knights of Columbus games in Madison Square Garden in March, and his challenge was forwarded to Osborne. The test would include eight events, probably a pole vault, high jump, broad jump, one sprint, one middle distance race, one distance run, a hurdle event, and shot put.

Hoff did not oppose Osborne in the last Olympic games, owing to an injured ankle.

Harvard athletes grabbed a major share of the honors for the meet, but the threequarter mile special, with Willard Tibbetts, of Harvard leading the runners home after a thrilling race, was one of the best events of the program.

Alan Helffrich of the New York Athletic club, only conqueror of Nurmi, in this country, won the second heat of the 600 yard special, another feature event of the evening, in a hot race, but one in which the lead remained with the former Penn state flier from start to finish.

The running high jump of six feet, two and one half inches, by Charles Major, of Coburn Classical institute, of Waterville, was the outstanding performance outside of the running events.

SUSIE SAYS, "BOOST NORWICH, DON'T KNOCK IT," IN LETTER TO SPORTS EDITOR

Susie during her stay in the house has been reading, with interest, the letters to the editor between the times when she was not operating the radio which the Boy Friend has had installed for her. Susie's comments on the letters and the radio follow:

Dear Sports Editor:

Well, me and the meesles has parted company for good'n all I hopes. Gosh, I put in a punk week for a active jane like meself, nothin' to do but read the papers and listen to one of them radios what the Boy Friend gives me. Gosh I getta great kick outa both of them especially that thing what you hears New York like you was there.

Speakin' about them letters was writ to the editor askin' what's the matter with Norwich I don't know who writ 'em except that one what that feller Jiggs Donohue had the courage to sign his name to. Oh yes, they was a nother one from a photographer feller what just come to town. Well them last two fellars hadda lotta good stuff but I wisht I could say as much for the first one what was signed by Observer. That first letter musta been wrote by somebody what got out the wrong side the bed and wanted everybody to know that he been outa town once in his life. As for 'not bein' able to get things in the Norwich stores let me tell you I can get more'n I can pay for now and I don't mean maybe Our stores ain't no worsen lotta stores what you see in the big towns.

Why when I went to Boston to that football game up where they is supposed to grow beans in their back yards you remember I couldn't get no beans in one of the biggest hotels in the city. I didn't write no letters to the papers about it though. Yes and the boy friend went to New York, which is quite some village, and hadda go inta three stores, the biggest in the burg, before he could get a pair of them things what hold up a man's sox. They told him they had somethin' just as good but he want takin' no chances on havin' his sox fall down an' step on them college fellers He didn't write no letter buumin' up the town, he thought them store fellers probably didn't carry his brand.

As for real estate I don't know much about an' never expect to own none unless its a place in some cemetery where I gotta be buried. But I'll bet things ain't no different here than they is anywhere else. Its human nature to get as much for a thing as you can and if Observer would have things different I guess he'll have to go out an' put on one of them educational campaignes. It ain't no cinch to tell a feller he's gotta change his nature 'cause you don't like it. I tried it onct on the old man and he told me plenty.

I'm here to say I ain't never been hungry in Norwich an' there's some stickels comin' into the family pocket-book every week, which more'n I can say when we lived in some other town when the old man was lookin' for work. What if they have been set city meetin's for if it ain't to get together to talk things over for the benefit of the city? If the town ain't run right there's the place to get action. Go up there an' talk but don't stand back an' let the other feller do what he think's best an' then squawk about it through the papers. Boost Norwich, don't knock it. You is a part of Norwich an' if it's your city and the city is what you make it. Like that wisecraker said a long time ago, "the chain is as strong as its bummest link." Don't be no bum link, throw away the old hammer and buy a horn.

Gosh, I got kinda all het up over that knockin' of Norwich didn't I? I may be all wet but them is my sentiments.

Well, ain't radio a grand thing—that is for a girl whats gotta a lotta patients. It ain't nothin' for no nervous folks to play with 'cause they sure would go down to the booby hatch after a coupla weeks. The Boy Friend opened up his heart while I was sick. I guess he thought I was gonna kick in, and buys me a radio. It ain't no expensive set but I have a great time when Pa lets me work it. Its one of them kind what you operate with things over your ears like a telephone girl. Pa heard one onct and he says he wouldn't give a nickel for a cart load but you oughta see him now. He says he's goin' to get one with a loud speecher 'cause his ears is to big for them phones. Ma says she hopes he won't 'cause he don't do no work around the house now and if they's any loud speakin' to do she can do it.

Well, outside hoots and howls I getta lotta good stuff like music and talks for women and the latest news in sports and other things. I find outa lotta new ways of pronouncing names what I never knew before. If they keep on with the radio pretty soon I'll be writin' an' talkin' like I was edicated. If you wanta know how to say that French girl's name, Lenglen, you wanta hear 'em say it on the radio.

It don't sound nothin' like it's spelled, it sounds like Longlon. Well when I first got the thing I had it set up an' I starts in, and all I got was a lotta squeels an' funny noises an' if I want sic. I'd of throwed it outta the window. By a coupla hours I gotta a station and then I heared a lotta music which made me wanta dance but I got them things on my head and I pulls the radio off on the floor. Gosh, I thought I'd busted the darn thing but a feller says somethin' about a station and I starts to talk back to him tellin him I was sorry I'd stopped the music 'till I thinks how he can't hear me. Gosh, ain't I a dumb Dora.

I was listenin' to some woman talkin' about makin' soup with onions when Pa comes home. He sees the thing and right away wants to horn in on it. I give him the ear phones and he sets down an' I guess he'd be there yet but Ma says supper's ready and there ain't no stoppin' Pa when its meal time. As luck would have it Ma was givin' us onion soup and Pa wants to know how its made and Ma tells him. Pa says that aint the right way and Ma says if you don't like it you can goes where they serve better. Pa tries to tell her what the woman on the radio says about onion soup and Ma says probably that woman ain't never made no soup and only read it outa a book. Well, Pa goes back to the radio an' I have a fat chance of hearin' anything, and he sets there all evenin' till I gets peeved an' goes to bed seein' its my radio. Ma likes the idea of Pa gettin' a radio if it keeps Pa from spin' out nights an' gettin' lit up on bum hooch.

Well I gotta stop now 'cause I'm goin' out on a sleigh ride with the boy friend. This is first time I been out in a coupla weeks.

SUSIE.

TENNIS CIRCLES AGOG OVER MATCH BETWEEN HELEN AND SUZANNE TODAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Not much more than four years ago a little dark haired girl in pigtails came out of the west to startle the tennis world with the beginnings of a campaign which led her to the national championship. Tomorrow, this same girl, now a matured and experienced star, will hold universal attention, as she gives battle to the foremost woman player of Europe, the generally recognized champion of the world.

Helen Wills of the United States will face Suzanne Lenglen of France in a struggle as dramatic as anything tennis has ever staged, one that has aroused scarcely less excitement than a heavyweight championship prize fight or a world's series game.

From the mass of opinion and predictions published about the match, however, it is apparent that the 20 year old American champion faces her 26 year old French rival with the prospects of her triumph expressed more in hope than conviction by her supporters.

Abroad the tennis public at large, as well as the experts, are convinced of Suzanne's invincibility. Even in this country, fandom concedes the French star an advantage while also "rooting" for "our Helen." Nearly all the experts have predicted a Lenglen victory.

The general disposition among experienced observers here is to concede Miss Wills only a "fighting chance" but at least one outstanding critic, George W. Wightman, of Boston, believes that the American girl has "better than an even chance." Mr. Wightman looks upon the contest as "anybody's match" with Miss Wills' harder hitting likely to prove decisive. Among the wagering fraternity, however, the odds are about 3 to 1 in favor of Lenglen.

The experts generally, such as "Big Bill" Tilden, Wightman and Sam Hardy, agree upon one point—that Miss Wills' chief chance of victory lies in the crushing power of her driving game; a smashing attack, backed by aggressiveness, which, they believe, may pierce Suzanne's defense or upset her uncanny control.

That Miss Wills herself knows this to be her best bet is evidenced by the manner in which she has brought the full force of her dynamic strokes into play in advancing to the finals at Cannes. The steady improvement in her control and effectiveness as the all-important duel with Suzanne approaches has tended to heighten the confidence in America's champion.

Two more opposite types, in play as well as in personality, have seldom been brought face to face in a battle for tennis honors of the world. Suzanne, temperamental to an usual degree, and nervously on edge, plays a dynamic brilliantly versatile game. Helen, cool and self-reliant—she has been nick-named "Poker Face"—depends upon her steady and consistent power in her strokes, delivered with almost masculine severity.

To sum up the chief qualifications of each, Helen's stroking "pace" is her greatest asset, plus a keen fighting spirit and steady nerves, while Suzanne's advantages lie in her speed of foot, strategy and experience, supporting an unusually effective and accurate bag of strokes.

Tennis fans who expected to "listen in" for the result of the Wills-Lenglen match probably will have to combine it with their radio setting-up exercises tomorrow morning. The contest is scheduled to start at 11 a. m., Riviera time time, or 6 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, and would be completed probably between 7 and 8 a. m. when such broadcasting stations as are on the air will be devoting their time to physical culture programmes.

News About Women In Europe

PARIS, Feb. 15. (AP)—Thirty-seven women in a St. Denis factory have offered to help solve France's financial troubles.

"If a lot of gold francs could be struck, no doubt French money would improve," they wrote the editor of Intransigeant's women's page. "But there is no gold, except in jewellers' shops.

"Well then, we are all ready to give the bank of France the only gold objects we possess, our wedding rings, to be made into gold coins. Madame, we ask you to communicate our offer to the gentlemen of the government. We are sure millions of women will follow our example."

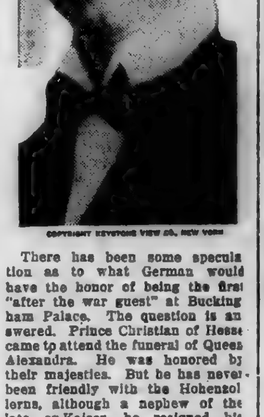
Militant mothers head the French movement for women's suffrage, which many believe is close to success after 30 years effort.

These leaders have reared children while campaigning for suffrage. Among them are Mme. Avril de la Saint Croix, president of the National Counsel of French Women; Mme. Leon Brunschvicg, president of the French Union for Women's Suffrage; Mme. Maria Verone head of the French League for Women's Rights, and Mme. Elizabeth Fonseque, president of the Society for the Betterment of the Conditions of Women.

The policy is one of constructive agression, the members having adopted the attitude of mothers who peacefully but firmly administer castor oil to unwilling children. If this case, the child is the French senate, which has not yet ratified the bill, granting women equal rights with men, passed in 1919 by the Chamber of Deputies.

Mme. Avril de la Saint Croix, who also heads the Affiliated Women's Clubs of France, is well known in America, having lectured there. She was prominent in war work and holds the Croix de Guerre in addition to being a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

First German To Dine With King George Since War



COPYRIGHT KEYSTONE VIEW CO., NEW YORK

There has been some speculation as to what German would have the honor of being the first "after the war guest" at Bucking ham Palace. The question is answered. Prince Christian of Hesse came to attend the funeral of Queen Alexandra. He was honored by their majesties. But he has never been friendly with the Hohenzollerns, although a nephew of the late ex-Kaiser, he resigned his naval commission when submarine warfare was ordered. His wife is an American, formerly Elizabeth Reid Rogers, of New York. They have a beautiful home in Cannes, France.

Flame In Water

Submerged in water, an oil flame invented by a Belgian scientist, Oscar Brunler, will burn for weeks without going out, it is claimed, and so avoid most of the heat loss of an ordinary boiler. A device similar to a carbureter, says Popular Science Monthly, blows a spray of crude oil mixed with air into the burner under pressure. Water is kept out of the burner until the flame is well started, then allowed to ride around the flame and cover it.

In all boilers loss of heat is avoided by bringing the flame of the fuel into the closest possible contact with the water. The Belgian inventor is said to have obtained almost perfect efficiency by putting the flame directly in the water.

MOGRIDE IS SOLD TO THE BOSTON BRAVES

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(AP)—George Mogride, veteran pitcher recently acquired by the Yankees in a trade today was sold to the Boston Braves for the inter-league waive price.

Mogride had been slated by Manager Miller Huggins for a pitching berth in the west with either the St. Paul or Salt Lake City clubs as part payment for players purchased last season. Mogride declined to accept a transfer to a minor league team, however, because he is a 10 a year man, and the transaction for his disposition to the Braves followed.

Coincident with the closing of the Mogride deal, the Yankees announced that 21 of the 30 players ordered to report to the training camp have signed contracts. Still outside the fold are pitchers Shocker, Jones, Piperas, and H. Johnson, Catcher Bengough, Infielder Ward and Outfielders Meusel and Paschal.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 15—(AP)—Clas Thunberg, of Finland, Olympic champion, smashed another world's record, the fourth in his series of races with Charles Jewtraw, former international champion, in the three quarter mile race against his American opponent on Pontiac rink here today. The Finn skated the distance in 1.55 4-5, lowering by 6 2-5 seconds, the record formerly held by Joe Moore, of New York, and made at Lake Placid in 1924.

Thunberg, besides winning the three quarter mile, also defeated Jewtraw in the 440 yard sprint, sprinting into the lead at the last turn. His time was 38 seconds and the record for the event is 36 3-4 seconds made by Charles Gorman, of St. John, N. B., made in 1924.

In the longer race, both racers followed a terrific pace. Jewtraw was in the lead when he fell and had to be carried from the ice.

In the three days of racing, Jewtraw has won only one event, the 220 yard dash on the opening day at Lake Placid. The match will be concluded here tomorrow.

WANT BETTER SEWERAGE AT CONNECTICUT COLLEGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 15—The girls at the Connecticut college bathe every day and they need a lot of water—40 gallons each—it was disclosed by Councilor James A. May, at a meeting of the city council this evening. Councilor May was making an appeal for a sewer on Nameaug and Oneco avenue, in the vicinity of the Connecticut college and its contiguous streets. He complained that the city was derelict in its duty in not providing the sewer facilities needed. He said the sewers would be an improvement and indeed they are a necessity the public health was to be cared for, and that real estate in that whole vicinity would increase in value with the advent of the sewers. Cesspools, he said, were not feasible as the character of the soil was such as did not permit the sewage to leech away and that the soil would not hold more water than it had already absorbed. He declared that property owners were asking for sewers, imploring the council to provide them and the members of the body had turned a deaf ear to the appeals for relief. He went further and said it was his opinion that if the parents of the students believed the health of the students was in danger they would take them away from the college.

Councilor May was told by the mayor that if the conditions were as represented the health department of the city should have been advised of the situation that a remedy might be applied. Mayor Fox pointed out that the state required a refining apparatus to be placed in the river to take care of the sewage and that the expense, it was believed, would approach some $100,000. That was the reason a sewer had not been laid in Riverside avenue and in the latteral streets. Manager Holt pointed out that no complaint had been made to the health department and said he doubted if conditions were as they were represented to be. Councilor May said he was not placing the blame for the situation upon the officials of the city, but said that additional cesspools were not feasible for the section and he represented that sewage was now flowing on the surface of the streets. Still, if the conditions were as represented, there should be relief afforded. Mr. May said he was advised by President Marshall, that if a remedy was not applied he would go to the state for relief. "Have him stop at the city hall on his way about the state," was the mayor's reply as to that. The matter was referred to the city manager for a report and for recommendation in the premises.

BUILDING APPLICATIONS CAME BEFORE COUNCIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 15—An ordinance referring to and governing improvements that are contemplated in Church street had its first reading at the meeting of the city council this evening. The whole matter has been cancelled, a hearing has been given to the parties in interest and now the ordinance is on its way through the council. It was disclosed that the cost of the proposed work will be $9,700 and the benefits accruing of the properties affected will be $9,070, so that the city will pay $670 for the work according to estimate. The work contemplates the acquisition of a little land at the corner of Church and Union streets, the relaying of curbing and a portion of sidewalk and the establishing of storm drains.

Application for permission to build two cottages and a one-story frame store were presented to the council and were granted. The cottages are to be located on Ocean and Dell avenues, and the store at 213 Huntington street.

Ordinances providing for a sewer on Guthrie Place and a storm sewer at the same location were passed as was an ordinance establishing a place in the lobby of the city hall to be used as a "public sign post."

Arthur J. Prechette gave notice of a claim for damages against the city for injury he sustained when he fell at the corner of Ocean and Willettes avenues on an icy sidewalk. That matter went to the director of law and the city manager for report.

"Colds" Afflict Holland

In Holland "catching a cold" is a national trouble. During the winter half of the Dutch people snuffle while the other half recover from colds. The raw sea winds of the lowlands seem not yet to have hardened the Hollanders. In no country is the handkerchief industry more prosperous.

A scientific inquiry into the causes of "colds" in the Netherlands and means to prevent them has been organised by the sanitary section of the University of Amsterdam. The inquiry will last 35 weeks. From all parts of the country signs of sympathy have reached the heroes of science who will try to cure Dutch of a great affliction. Eight thousand Hollanders offered to support the inquirers in their campaign.

Engine Depreciation

An airplane engine worth some $10,000 lasts only 500-hours, even with several overhaulings. Allowing carefully for the cost of overhauling and for the salvage value of the parts left over, Mr. Black in Automotive Industries nevertheless estimates that such an engine depreciates per hour to the expensive tune of $10.50. This is not quite so bad as would appear at first, since at a cruising speed of 110 miles per hour the engine would have propelled its plane a distance of 55,000 miles.

If the average passenger automobile does 7,500 miles a year, the airplane engine gives at least the equivalent of 12 years of automobile engine service.

If love would only make men's cash go round they wouldn't worry about the revolutions of the world.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Way back in the days when caravans were popular instead of automobiles and caravansaries were the forerunners of road houses, the prodigal son left home to become a self-made-man—with the aid of his father's coffers and advice. The former he clutched and the latter he cussed as he mounted his mule and set out for the city under the villainous guidance of a wicked merchant. For then, even as now, there were sirens and scoundrels, gamblers and pawnbrokers to make the road to the city attractive and easy going for the country boy.

William Collier, Jr., plays the part of Jether, the country boy, Ernest Torrence is the professed protector and Greta Nissen entices as the beckoning city girl.

Whether you are a willing or an unwilling twentieth century wanderer, or even no wanderer at all, you will be sure to be fascinated by this Paramount picture at the Palace theatre. You will be convinced, more than ever that the old song is right—"there's no place like home."

Wallace Beery, Tyrone Power and Kathlyn Williams complete the featured cast of the production, which was written for the screen by J. T. O'Donohoe from the stage spectacle of the same name by Maurice Samuels. Raoul Walsh directed.

Old Fiddlers contest will be in its glory again Thursday night with many new contestants on the list. There will be the usual five big acts of vaudeville and Rin-Tin-Tin, who will be seen at the Palace Theatre on Thursday, Friday, Saturday in the Warner Bros. production of "The Clash of the Wolves," is the idol of his company. From June Marlowe, his leading lady to the newest and greenest "prop" boy, they all swear by him.

If it were not for the careful watch kept over him by his trainer he would be spoiled beyond all reason. Besides an inordinate amount of petting, everyone in the company is always saving something for him from their lunch. His gifts vary all the way from a dead rat found on location by an eight-year-old actor and saved several days for "Rinty," to maraschino chocolate-creams offered by Miss Marlowe.

The office of the company manager at the studio is fairly littered with statuettes of Rin-Tin-Tin in various poses made from modeling clay, flour, water and salt, breadcrumbs; carved from various sorts of wood, and the walls are covered with pictures painted on all sorts of materials, snapshots of "cuts" poses, "stills" a bas-relief in plaster, etc.

Lyceum Theatre, New London

This year is made memorable by the appearance of an all-star cast in a revival of the Eighteenth Century English classic. "The Rivals," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, whose sesquicentennial as a playwright is being celebrated this year. The tour, which is to include the entire United States, ending perhaps a year hence in New York, began in Pittsburgh on November 10, 1924. Since then the trip has become a tour of triumph. "The Rivals" playing to capacity houses in almost every city that has been visited. The company includes Mrs. Fiske who plays Mrs. Halsprop, Thomas A. Wise, James T. Powers, Brandon Tynan, Lotus Robb, Jean Ford, Marie Carroll and others of like distinction.

"The Rivals" comes to the Lyceum New London tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Broadway Theater

Those who read and enjoyed Share and Share Alike will have no faults to find with its film version. Reginald Wright Kauffman's narrative is followed faithfully, the acting is good and the mounting splendid.

And those who have not read it—even the most critical—will also find the picture extremely interesting, keeping them keyed to the highest pitch with its mystery and suspense.

Jane Novak is the girl and James Rennie, the man. Barnard Randall as the super-villain makes shivers run down your spine. As far as technical qualities are concerned Share and Share Alike leaves little to be desired. The plot is strong and has been cleverly unfolded and those incidents which made the book such a popular one have been faithfully translated to the screen.

Joseph Burke, Henry Sands, Cortlandt Van Deusen, Mario Majeroni and Henri Myrial are the other artists featured.

This fine attraction will be shown on Tuesday and Wednesday only in addition to a comedy Cupid's Victory news of the world at a glance.

Mirrors for Macaroni

By using mirrors to supplement the sun in drying macaroni, manufacturers of the product have found the color to be more satisfactorily preserved, since the deep yellow tint is not bleached so easily, and the flavor also is said to be improved. The process is quicker than sun bleaching.

It is as hard to impose on some men the second time as it was easy to do it the first time.

Mocker Becomes a Prisoner

Be suspicious, of mayhap
You'll be the victim of a trap.
—Mr. Mocker.

Of course, it isn't nice to go about always suspecting that things are not what they appear to be. It isn't nice to be suspicious of the people around you. Of course not. But, just the same, Mocker the Mocking Bird is right in warning not to be altogether unsuspicious. What he means is, that it is just as foolish to go about thinking that no one can do you a wrong, as it is to think that everybody intends to do you a wrong.

Mr. Mocker never in his life had been trapped. He knew nothing about traps. So, when he saw a frame covered with wire netting, raised at one end so that it was easy to go under, and in under it saw raisins and currants spread, he wasn't suspicious. Of course, he ought to have been. He ought to have been wise enough to know that it is best to keep away from things you do not know about. But Mocker was hungry. He knew that those raisins and currants had been put out especially for him. He walked all around that wire thing—it looked perfectly harmless. Finally he walked in under it. Almost at once the raised end fell and there he was, a prisoner. He had been trapped!

Then he found he was a prisoner

Even then at first he didn't realize what had happened. He went on eating, and it wasn't until he saw Farmer Brown's Boy coming toward him that he started to fly. Then he found he couldn't fly. Then he found he was a prisoner.

For a few minutes Mocker was terribly frightened. It is always rather a frightful thing to find you are a prisoner; that you cannot go and come as you will. So Mocker beat his wings against the wire until he was sure in his own mind that this was useless. Farmer Brown's Boy came slowly up to the trap. Every movement he made was slow. He talked to Mocker soothingly. Finally Mocker found an opening at one end. He ran through it. He did it before he had really looked. Then he discovered he was a prisoner in a smaller cage. Almost at once Farmer Brown's Boy slipped his arm through an opening in the top and caught Mocker in his hand. Very gently he lifted Mocker out. He held Mocker in a peculiar way, on his back, and so that Mocker could not well struggle. And somehow, after a moment, Mocker didn't mind. Very gently Farmer Brown's Boy stroked him and talked to him all the time. Then he slipped something around one leg. Mocker didn't notice it at the time. After this Farmer Brown's Boy talked to him for a moment, then held his hand open. It was almost a minute before Mocker realized that he was free. Somehow all fear had gone. He got to his feet and for a second or two he sat on Farmer Brown's Boy's hand. Then he flew to the nearest tree. He had been a prisoner, but once more he was free.

It wasn't until after Farmer Brown's Boy had disappeared into the house that Mocker noticed he had something he hadn't had before. There was something queer, something bright, around one leg. He pecked at it with his bill, but it wouldn't come off. He found that it was hard. He didn't know what to make of it. But it didn't hurt and it wasn't uncomfortable, so it wasn't long before Mocker had forgotten all about it.

In the house Farmer Brown's Boy had written in a little book a date and a certain number. That number was on the shiny thing around the leg of Mocker. It was a tiny metal band and Farmer Brown's Boy was making a record of the date when that band was put on Mocker's leg. You see, Farmer Brown's Boy wanted to know if Mocker remained there through the summer. Or, if he didn't remain if he came back another summer or winter. That little band would tell the story. So it was that Mocker was banded. (Copyright, 1926, by T. W. Burgess.)

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas: The Nurses' Alumnae association of the William W. Backus Hospital Training school, is called upon to mourn the death of one of its most active, faithful and enthusiastic members, serving as president, from 1921 to 1924, and as a member of the board of directors for the past three years:

Resolved: That in the death of Annie Hammond Yallin, the community has lost a woman of exceptionally high ideals as wife and mother, who, in addition to the faithful performance of her duties as such, gave freely of her services as a graduate nurse, to the public at intervals for the past 25 years and was thus engaged to within a few days of her death; that the nursing profession has lost a member generous in her relations with her fellow nurses, possessed of unbounded loyalty and devotion to the best interests of the profession and the training school;

It is therefore the desire of the association at this time, to publicly express appreciation of her many noble qualities, to make these resolutions a part of the permanent records of the association, a copy of which is to be sent to her family; and out of respect to her memory the members of the association will attend the funeral in a body.

(Signed)
RUTH COOPER RAYMOND, president;
KATHLEEN A. DOWD,
FREDERICA A. ROOS,
FRANCES M. TINGLEY, directors.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

People interested in Laurel Hill were endeavoring to have a bridge built across the Shetucket in 1851, the favored location being at the rear of the Norwich Bank.

News of the week as taken in part from the Norwich Courier of 75 years ago is as follows:

Tuesday February 18, 1851—Our river, which has been fast locked up for some weeks past, is making a vigorous attempt to free itself. Judging from the progress it has already made we believe that it will accomplish what it has set out to do within a short time, probably by tomorrow morning.

A Cleveland paper carries the story of a flight of thousands of pigeons over that city on a recent date. These pigeons, all headed north, strung out for miles and took hours to fly over. Reaching the undows of Canada they turned back and again appeared over Cleveland. It is believed that the weather south of here fooled them and they came north, only to find the country still snow-bound.

The New London, Willimantic Palmer railroad has notified the public that the passenger car attached to the morning and mid-day freight train would be discontinued for several days.

At the meeting of the court of common council, Mayor Buckingham presenting the petition of R. W. Routh and others for privileges for a Gas Co. was referred to a special committee. Jesse D. Noyes reported the names of two local people who have failed to meet the orders relating to the flagging sidewalks on West Main street. It was voted that certain repairs be made to the city pump, front of Town hall, under the direction of Alderman Huntington.

Thursday February 13, 1851—The railroad fare between New London and Palmer on the New London and Palmer railroad, has been raised from $1.25 to $1.50. This company has constituted a mail route and a gentleman from New London has been appointed Mail Agent on the cars.

Jenny Lind is now singing at New Orleans and two concerts have netted her the sum of $40,000. The accomplished singer recently gave a large sum of money for hospitals and in fact, continues to give freely of her money to other worthy causes.

Rev. Dr. Bond has consented to lecture before the Mathew Institute in this city next Monday evening at Franklin Hall.

It is understood that the enterprising proprietors of Laurel Hill are going in for a new bridge across the Shetucket. They say it is immaterial to them whether the bridge starts from Shetucket street or Franklin square so long as it is built. In this movement the Courier backs them heartily and suggests that the bridge be built across the river opposite the opening at the rear of the Norwich Bank. A bridge here would satisfy the purse and public to a nicety for the ledge of rocks at this point would form a ready and substantial abutment for the north end of the structure, while the height above the railroad tracks on the south and would be sufficient to allow locomotives to pass beneath the bridge. The approach to a bridge located at this point would be a slight incline, so easy as to be unobjectionable.

Saturday February 15, 1851—A Yankee has been credited with the invention of a suspender which contracts as the wearer approaches wifer, and, the moment the wearer reaches a puddle, lifts him up and drops him on the other side. The suspender then regains its proper shape and length.

BREAK IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Feb. 15—(AP)—Stock prices broke 1 to 5 points today under the weight of a large volume of selling for both accounts. There was nothing in the day's news to account for the reaction, which was generally attributed to professional selling, inspired by the failure of the market to respond to constructive trade news last week, and commission house advices suggesting a lightening of long accounts until the trend became more definitely established. Total sales ran about two and one-quarter million shares.

The sharp break Saturday resulted in a heavy accumulation of week-end selling orders, with the result that initial quotations showed net losses of 1 to 4 points in many cases. Bear traders sensing an apparent absence of buying support for many specialties in which pools were reported to have been working, increased selling pressure, touching off a number of stop-loss orders and bringing about heavy liquidation by frightened investors.

Devoe and Raynolds which broke from a high of 104 1-8 to 60 1-2 last week, collapsed 14 1-2 more points to 46. General Electric broke 17 1-2 points to 365 and then rallied to 368. Net declines of 3 to 10 points were recorded by Allied Chemical, American Can, American Smelting, American Snuff, Baldwin Locomotive, Burroughs Adding Machine, A. M. Byers, Coca Cola, Commercial Solvents A and B, First National Stores, International Combustion Engineering, International Harvester, R. H. Macy, Mathelson Alkali, Pressed Steel Car, Remington Typewriter, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, Sears Roebuck, South Porto Rican Sugar, United States Cast Iron Pipe, United Drug, United Fruit, Ward Baking A, Westinghouse Airbrake and Woolworth.

Heavy selling by pools was reported to have been influenced in part by reports that banks were demanding increased margin requirements as a result of the heavy volume of brokers' loans outstanding. The chief financial news development of the day was the raising of the Dupont dividend from $6 to $10 annually, but it failed to have any influence in the stock which closed 6 1-4 points lower at 222.

Commodity markets were mixed. Active wheat futures advanced 1 1-2 to 3 cents a ushel after an early period of heaviness on buying influenced by reports of a decrease of 1,100,000 bushels on the visible supply. Cotton closed 10 to 18 points net lower, with favorable crop reports an important factor in the selling. Coffee futures were unchanged to six points higher, but the sugar market displayed an easier undertone on Cuban selling.

There were a few stocks to move against the downward trend. Marine Preferred, which has been reported under steady accumulation for the last few weeks, closed 1 1-4 points higher at 44 1-4 after having sold at 45 1-4. American Telephone and Telegraph, which was rumored to be considering a special distribution to stockholders, touched 150 3-4 and then eased to 143 1-4. Cuban American Sugar, Fan-Handle Petroleum Preferred, Savage Arms and Universal Pipe, also closed higher on the day.

Pails yielded with the industrials. Atlantic Coast Line broke to 215 1-4 and then rallied to 220 for a net loss of 10 points on the day. Eastern Coal Carriers which rallied on the announcement of the anthracite settlement last week, again turned weak. Lackawanna broke 6 1-4 points to 165, and Reading, Delaware and Hudson, Lehigh Valley and the Erie issues declined 1 1-3 to 2 1-2 points.

Call money renewed at 4 3-4 per cent., and then dropped to 4 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Strength of the Scandinavian and Japanese exchanges featured an otherwise reactionary foreign exchange market. Danish Krone scored 30 points to 26.00 cents, or within 80 points of gold parity, the reported objective of Danish government buying, and Norwegian krone soared 45 points to 21.03 cents, both new peak prices for the year. Japanese yen touched 45 cents, the highest rate in years, also an apparent anticipation of an early return to parity. Demand sterling was slightly lower at 4.85 7-8, and French francs sagged to a new low level for the year at 3.67 cents.

GREENEVILLE

The Community workers held their February meeting with Mrs. George A. Howard, of Central avenue, on Friday afternoon. This was a social meeting and was in the form of a valentine party. The house was prettily decorated with red crepe paper and red candles and a number of interesting valentine games were enjoyed. Mrs. Charles Lewitsky took the prize in the guessing contest and Mrs. Charles F. Sears won the honors in the oration contest. Mrs. Allan Brown was the first to 'put the "broken heart," together and so won the prize. Several piano duets were rendered by Mrs Howard and her daughter Elinor, and a solo was delightfully given by Miss Nellie Hayes. Dainty refreshments were served at a prettily decorated table, in keeping with valentine day and Mrs. Howard was given a rising vote of thanks for the delightful afternoon. Mrs. Charles F. Sears, the president, distributed silk heart needle cases to each of the members of the society, which were made especially for them, by her mother, Mrs. T. A. Perkins, of Winchendon, Mass. Mrs. Perkins was formerly of Greeneville, and although she is now eighty-five years old, the needlework which she still does, is hard to equal by the younger people. The next meeting is to be held with Mrs. Allen Brown, of Fourth street, and the ladies will sew on patch-work. They have finished a nice new quilt, which was voted to be given to the Sheltering Arms, for use in their new home.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church, will hold an all day meeting in the chapel on Thursday, to tie quilts, one of which is being donated to the orphanage in Kodiah, Alaska, which was recently visited by a disastrous fire.

The 'Mission circle of the Baptist church, held a well attended meeting in the chapel last Thursday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Herbert Peckham, presided and after the devotional exercises, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. William A. Lund, whose subject was "China." Interesting papers and material from "Missions" was read by the members and then the business session was taken over. As the ladies sewed patch work, interesting letters from Mather school Beaufort, S. Carolina, were read by Mrs. James Spicer and it was voted to give the quilt they were working on to an orphanage in Alaska. It was also voted to donate some sheets, pillow-cases, soap and talcum powder to the White Cross Work society for overseas. After the meeting a bountiful supper was served by Mrs. George Dorrard and Mrs. William Lund, to the members and their families.

The World Wide guild held a valentine social in the chapel of the Baptist church, on Monday evening. It was prettily decorated with red hearts, and an interesting programme of music and readings were given after which the young people played games. The social was in charge of Miss Jennie Sebastian, who served refreshments assisted by the guild girls.

Mrs. James Blackford and daughter, Jeane, have returned to Danielson, after spending a week with Mrs. Blackford's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Shea, of Prospect street.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

NORWICH ENGINEERS PREPARING TO ENTERTAIN STATE CONVENTION

Norwich Association, No. 6, Stationary Engineers, is preparing to entertain the annual Connecticut State Convention which meets in this city Friday and Saturday, June 25 and 26. The preliminary moves were taken at the February meeting of the local, which was well attended, and at which it was voted to secure the Community house on Church street for the convention meetings.

It is expected that at least 200 delegates and their friends will attend the convention and several of the national officers will be present.

The following general committee has been appointed by the Norwich association: John A. Holland, Otto Heebner, John E. Casey, William B. Tiroop, and George P. Thomas. Sub-committees are to be appointed later.

A tentative program was discussed at the meeting which was as follows:

Friday, June 25th, at 1 p. m., opening of the mechanical exhibit and the public will be invited. At 8 p. m. an address of welcome will be delivered by the mayor. Elmer L. Bassett of Hartford, state president, will open the convention. He will introduce a speaker yet to be selected. Then a mechanical picture will enjoy a social hour. Selections will be given by an orchestra and the Supply Men's association will render songs and funny sayings by their own association members.

Saturday, June 26th, at 9 a. m. sharp, President Bassett will open the business meeting. At 12 p. m. a buffet lunch will be served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Norwich. The visitors and their guests will visit the municipal gas and electric plant and the plant of The Eastern Connecticut Power company at Montville and Taftville.

The convention will close at 6 p. m. with a dinner to the delegate and guests.

MADE SHORE BY SWIMMING FROM AUTO IN RIVER

Carried in an automobile, in which they were driving, down an embankment and submerged in about six feet of water in Long cove, near Riverbend casino, on the Military highway Saturday night, three New London men had a narrow escape from drowning. Half dazed they managed to crawl out and swim ashore.

George Bairer was driving the machine and had with him William Packer and Harold Myers.

Driving along at a moderate rate of speed about 8:30, the three were driving across the bridge, preparatory to ascending the hill and curve. Suddenly the car lurched to one side and before the driver could regain control of the machine, pitched down the steep embankment to the left of the road and in the water.

The side curtains of the car prevented escape and almost before the occupants knew what had happened the car was submerged in the cold waters of the cove and the men trapped. Although shocked by the sudden plunge, all managed to crawl out of the sunken car and swim ashore.

Going to the casino kept by Capt. Berndt Erickson, which was nearby, they were able to dry their clothes and they were taken home none the worse for their experience.

An automobile wrecker was summoned and soon raised the car from the water, revealing that only the top and windshield had been damaged. An investigation into the cause of the car swerving from the road showed that the skid chains on the left rear wheel had become caught in the brake drum, locking that wheel and causing the car to swerve.

The Jolly Six gave a very delightful birthday surprise party in honor of Miss Doris Fowler at her home at 66 School street.

Piano selections were given by the Misses Doris Fowler and Lenny Warstock. A banjo uke was presented to her by the Jolly Six. The guests were as follows: Irene Blake, Babe Fowler, Lenny Warstock, Joy Carlson, Agnes Carlson, Mary Preskop, Stella Preskop, Winifred Quidgeon, Helen Ryan, Tillie LaBlanc, Helen Sufleski, Ruth Whitten, Marian Brown, Mrs. E Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Fowler, Louis Geer, Wallace Atterbury, Charles Drew, Urban Kates, Karl Dilday, Jasper Cole, Elmer Pierson Arthur Ellison, Bob Enwright, Charles Burdick, Herman Austin, Herbert Hammond, Ralph Johnson, Jack Moody, Hammond, Ralph Johnson, Jack Moody Lorenzo Lamoureaux, and Richard Ortolani, from Springfield, Mass.

Refreshments were served.

Valentine Party for Leona Guertin

A pretty valentine party was held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Guertin, in honor of their daughter Leona's second birthday. The dining room was decorated with red and white streamers, hearts and cupids. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. Each child received a valentine basket filled with candy hearts. Little Leona received many gifts.

Those present were Andrew, Omer, Dora and Irene Guertin, Winifred and Donald King, Isabelle and Carl Erickson, Jr., Violet Guertin and Leona Guertin.

Could Not Get to Funeral

Mrs. Martin, wife of Rev. Theodore Martin, of Hebron, was unable to attend the funeral of her father, who died recently in Michigan, for she could not get from her home to the station at Anston because of the snow.

Seven men remained at the home of Lucius Robinson on Post Hill, Columbia, Thursday night, for they were unable to get any further toward Willimantic. The group included men working on the road and a salesman whose heavy car was stuck in the snow; also Randal Tennant, who teaches school in Lebanon.

For Southern Trip

Edward Crawford, of the Charles F. Noyes organization of New York city and Manrice Mandelbaum, junior member of Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum, are bound for Florida. They have set ten days as the time they will spend under southern skies. If weather conditions about the end of February are not favorable they may extend their stay.

Mr. Crawford is a former resident of this city where he graduated from the Norwich Free Academy.

LINCOLN TALK AND PICTURE AT Y. M. C. A.

Notwithstanding the very stormy afternoon on Sunday the large gymnasium at the local Y. M. C. A. was filled at the 4 o'clock service. All the seats were occupied and several had to stand. After the opening exercises consisting of a hymn, scripture reading, prayer and a vocal solo well rendered by Hugh Kinder, an unusual scenic film of Yosemite Valley was shown; it was at once beautiful and inspiring, portraying as it did some wonders of nature. The special picture feature was four reels on Abraham Lincoln, and these brought to the large audience the scenes of the childhood of the great American in a manner to deeply impress the fact that from exceedingly humble beginnings came one of the world's most superb characters, whose ideals may well be followed by this and future generations. The second part of the Lincoln picture emphasized the trials of Lincoln while president and especially when his native state of Kentucky hesitated to remain in the Union, and he wrote in a letter to the leaders of Kentucky that he would rather die than to have the state of his birth remain outside the Union, whereupon Kentucky remained in the Union.

Between the reels Rev. Charles H. Ricketts gave a most impressive fifteen minute address on Abraham Lincoln, and as is usual with Mr. Ricketts his words made a strong impression. The speaker emphasized the fact that Lincoln absolutely refused to allow his poverty and his many handicaps to keep him down, but used every possible means at his disposal to rise above these handicaps, and he proved for all time that "where there's a will there's a way." Lincoln believed that every man should have his rights in America, and that the color of a man's skin had no more to do with a man's rights than the color of his eyes. Lincoln though not educated like the men surrounding him at Washington, yet his great personality was more than a match for his opponents when he used his plain Anglo-Saxon language. Lincoln's emancipation paper is a religious document and no man in history among the potentates of earth past or present seems to have come quite so near the sermon on the mount in his life and acts as did this great character, and if we constantly follow the ideals that he set forth, the time will come when peace will reign supreme, and "government of the people, by the people and for the people will not perish from the earth."

Mr. Ricketts' address was heartily applauded. The music furnished by Mr. Kinder was most appropriate for the splendid patriotic service.

SOFT COAL CAMPAIGN CONTINUES IN NEW ENGLAND

The soft coal campaign in Massachusetts and New England will go on, regardless of the settlement between the anthracite operators and miners, according to a statement by Eugene C. Hultman, fuel administrator of Massachusetts and vice-chairman of the New England Governors fuel committee.

Mr. Hultman, upon examining the terms of the anthracite settlement, issued a blast in which he referred to the settlement as a "patched up affair and called the so-called five year truce a period of "armed neutrality" which he intimated might break out into hostilities at any time.

There will be no let-up of the activities of the smokeless coal operators of West Virginia, who came into the New England market last fall and opened up service bureaus and employed a corps of demonstrators to show the public that soft coal can be burned in a household heater or kitchen stove.

Officials of the smokeless coal operators association of West Virginia said that the demonstration stations which have been opened in Boston, Hartford, New Haven, Providence and Springfield will continue to operate. Since the station on Boston common was opened, early in December, there have been 40,000 visitors and there has been large attendance at the other stations. The association has also equipped three traveling demonstrations which are touring industrial cities and making stops at industrial plants in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

That the soft-coal campaign of the New England Governors has been successful to a marked degree is shown by the report of Mr. Hultman that in Massachusetts alone over a million tons will be used by the householders before the end of the winter. The educational work of the West Virginia smokeless coal operators in the New River and Pocahontas fields has helped the campaign materially.

Gasoline Price Goes Up

Price of gasoline at wholesale was advanced one cent in this city since Saturday according to announcements made by local offices of four different companies. The Gulf, Rethning and Texas companies announced an 18 cents tank wagon price with an additional two cent tax; and the Standard Oil and Colonial companies announced a 19 cent tank wagon scale with one cent state tax additional.

Retail prices in the city average 23 cents, a corresponding increase of one cent.

Workmen's Compensation.

Two workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner J. J. Donohue:

Robert Gair Co., Montville, employer, and Dominic Quartarone, New London, employe, hernia, Nov. 25, at rate of $15.52.

Ponemah Mills, Taftville, employer, and Ellen Newsham, employe, strained wrist and back, Dec. 21, at rate of $7.57.

The average man considers other men wise only when they came to him for advice.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

The value of the Women's Auxiliary of the Backus hospital is clearly demonstrated by the increasing activities in its several departments. The gradually growing membership means a wider interest in everything pertaining to hospital matters and a dissemination of information, which the public eagerly anticipates finding in the monthly reports.

One cordially agrees with a recently expressed opinion: "How did we ever get on without the Women's Auxiliary?" We are glad to note that generosity of gifts and thoughtful attentions on the part of the public have been steadfastly continued since the holiday season. The contributors of linen the past month are: Mrs. Edmund W. Perkins, Mrs. E. La Rue Bliven, Mrs. Ruth Gregson, Mrs. Thos. H. Beckley, Mrs. Chas. Frink, Miss Martha Johnson, Mrs. Frank Palmer of Fitchville, Miss Gladys Crombie of Hanover and M. E. Purcell of Meriden. The hospital authorities are grateful for this addition to their stock of old linen, for which the demand is ever present. In so large a family of invalids the shelves are being constantly drawn from and the thoughtfulness of the public must be the means by which they are re-stocked. Use can also be made of small cold cream jars and of clean bottles holding from 1 to 8 ounces. The chairman, Mrs. J. Edward Driscoll, will gladly collect these, if notified, or they can be taken directly to the hospital. Many thoughtful friends send regularly the current numbers of their magazines, which help the patients to pass pleasantly the tedious hours of convalescence. In addition to the regular contributors this month are: Mrs. Raymond B. Sherman, Mrs. Aurin Payson, Mrs. R. F. Smith, Mrs. W. S. Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Adams, Broadway United Congregational church, Mrs. Roy D. Judd, Mrs. Chas. L. Stewart and Joseph Taylor.

Other gifts recently sent to the hospital are flowers, a scrapbook for the children's ward, from the children of the Broad Street school, books, among which is a five volume edition of Les Miserables, nine packs of playing cards, seven records for the victrola at the Nurses' home, tickets for the musicale at Park church, cream, ice cream and wafers for the nurses, and a check for $50 from an out of town friend.

The list of donors includes Mrs. Charles A. Saxton, Mrs. Allen Latham, Mr. Doolittle, Dr. Markoff, Dr. L. T. Cassidy, Mrs. Joseph Hall, the Misses Williams, Mrs. Alfred Bliven, Don Houghton, G. Warren Davis.

January and February have been exceedingly busy months at the hospital, the daily average of patients being 86.

It is gratifying to learn that the list of probationers is constantly receiving additions. The recent entrants are Miss Hazel Brown, Providence, R. I., Miss Ruth Hansen, Yantic, Miss Catherine Holden, South Windham, Miss Ethel Richards, Versailles, Miss Birdie Stanton, Willimantic, Miss Katherine Spellman, Westerly.

Owing to the stormy weather and absence from town of several of its members the production committee has not made quite so many dressings as usual, the number for the past month being 295.

In order to add to the fund, which enables the Auxiliary to accomplish so much, the finance committee, on the evening of Feb. 2, at the Nurses' residence, gave a very enjoyable benefit bridge party of thirty-five tables, which was a great success and from which about $150 will be realized. This committee announces the receipt of the wheel chair which has been eagerly awaited. Finding it impossible to obtain one at second-hand, they finally made the purchase of one quite up to date, which is already in use at the hospital.

The neuropsychiatric clinic committee anticipating a busy season, has added the following new members: Mrs. Alfred Allen, Mrs. Alexander H. Abbott, Mrs. Flint Brayton, Mrs. Louis M. Crandall, Mrs. Frank Hempstead, Miss Ruby Vaughn and Mrs. William C. Tark of Hanover. The committee plans to organize itself into sub-committees for general community work, developing activities intended to supplement the work of the clinic. A project in which all are much interested, and which will be very useful in the community, is the organization of a bureau of part time workers. It is hoped that this will be organized before the month has passed.

Amid all the practical work, it has been forgotten that the nurses need a bit of fun, as a relaxation from tired nerves which must be held in control during so many hours of bedside nursing. For the nurses' recreation committee Mrs. J. J. Donohue, chairman, reports a festivity on the evening of Feb. 8th; called a snow party, which is quite suggestive of old-time customs. A friend provided a quantity of pure maple syrup, which, boiling hot, was poured on plates filled with snow, furnishing much merriment as well as appetizing "sundae." Later in the evening other refreshments were furnished by the recreation committee.

It is hoped that a theatre party for the nurses can be arranged in the near future.

Through the thoughtfulness of a kind friend, on the evening of February 11th, eighteen of the nurses enjoyed a delightful sleigh ride to Fitchville and return. After the ride, hot coffee and crackers were served. The same friend has promised to act as host to the remainder of the nurses, some night this week, providing there is sufficient snow for a sleigh ride.

For St. Valentine's day, the holiday committee provided favors for the trays, and received sixten loaves of cake from Park Congregational church, and seven gallons of ice cream from Trinity Episcopal church.

It is a cause for congratulation that there is no abatement of interest in any of the committees, all the members being sincerely anxious to contribute whatever time or energy is necessary to make value and of efficiency.

TAFTVILLE

An appropriate exercise entitled "Lincoln and You" in observance of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln was carried out Sunday at the session of the Taftville Congregational church school. Those taking part were Victor H. Davis, E. Tracy Clark, John Wood, Albert Airey, Jr., Frank Moors, Lester McNally, Newell Beardow, Lawrence Parsons, Leonard Pingree, Walter Wohlleben, Edmund Mathewson and Herbert Airey. The hymns used were America, and America the Beautiful, and the exercise included the salute to the flag, which hung on one side of the chancel, with the church flag on the other. Robert E. Schmidt interpreted the Spirit of Lincoln. The exercise was arranged by the Rainbow division of the Congregational Fellowship of the American Missionary association, and during the service, a special offering was taken up for the work of that organization. The offering was received by Curtis Hedler and Reginald Monty. After the service there was a business meeting of the members of the Workers conference. Superintendent Victor H. Davis, presiding. It was voted to distribute the lenten contribution boxes to the scholars and others who may be interested, th boxes to be opened after Easter and the contents turned into the treasury of the church school.

The scholars of the Sunday school classes of Miss Flossie M. Meyer and E. Tracy Clark held a valentine party Saturday evening in the vestry and parlors of the Taftville Congregational church. The decorations were in red and white, with hearts strung on red and white streamers. In the heart hunting contest, the winner was Albert Airey, Jr., and Miss Edith L. Heap and John Wood were awarded prizes in the heart puzzle game. For blowing out the candle Miss Mary Alice Watts received the prize; Henry Archibald was the winner in the musical chairs game, and Edward Troeger won the peanut race. Each girl brought a basket lunch to share with her partner, and refreshments of ice cream, cocoa, fudge and marshmallows were served by Miss Flossie M. Meyer, Miss Elsie Heap and Mrs. E. Tracy Clark. The favors were heart-shaped candy boxes filled with small candy hearts. Mr. Clark had charge of the games. Those present were Miss Margaret Sticht, Miss Edith L. Heap, Miss Eva Nagle, Miss Ruby Houston, Miss Dorothy M. Aberg, Miss Gladys Kinder, Miss Charlotte Pilling, Miss Mary Alice Watts, Miss Marjorie McNally, Miss Edith Adams, Miss Marjorie Troeger and Miss Helen Troeger; Henry Archibald, Leonard Pingree, Frank Moors, Herbert Airey, Albert Airey, Jr., Carl Rimeck, John Wood, Lester McNally, Edmund Mathewson, Howard Kloss, Walter Wohlleben and Edwin Troeger.

Because the country roads were so deep with water and slush Monday, it was impossible for any of the local milkmen to deliver their milk by truck. All used sleighs or horse-drawn milk wagons of the 1915 vintage. The new state road over Gallows hill to Norwich Town was practically impassable again over the week end because of drifts, and neither had the Newent road been broken through for its entire length to Jewett City. Several motorists who took that route believing it to be open, found themselves within two miles of Jewett City, at which point there had been no travel over the road, and they had to return to Taftville and take the river road which is being kept open.

Miss Emily Pollard of South Second avenue has been confined to her home by an attack of the grip.

Today (Tuesday) is Shrove Tuesday, the day before the beginning of lent. Not so many years ago in the village, the carnival spirit showed itself on this day, by bands of maskers going from house to house to eat pancakes. And so the day has always been known to villagers as Pancake Tuesday. Now the maskers have vanished from the streets, and with the exception of a few pre-lenten parties and dances, the day has no carnival celebration.

On Ash Wednesday, the first day of lent, there will be a low mass read at Sacred Heart church at 7.30 a. m., with an evening service at 7 p. m. At both services there will be the distribution of the penitential ashes, which are obtained by burning the blessed palms left over from Palm Sunday.

Miss Louise White entertained at cards at her home on South A street Saturday evening. The gentlemen's prizes were won by Alphonse White and Theodore Belval, and the ladies' prizes went to Miss Mary Hanlon and Mrs. Fred White. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Richard Cotton of Kingston, R. I., is spending several days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Snow of North Third street.

A French play was given Sunday evening at Parish hall by members of the Council Gagnon, Union St. Jean Baptiste. A large crowd attended. The proceeds are to be added to a fund which is used annually to purchase prizes for the pupils of the Sacret Heart school.

At a nuptial high mass at St. Joseph's church in Occum, Monday morning, the pastor, Rev. Frederick S. DesSureault united in marriage Miss Germaine Boisvert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Boisvert, and Louis Bazinet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bazinet. During the mass Arthur DesSureault sang, accompanied on the organ by Miss Irene Lavalle. The witnesses were Eugene Boisvert and Joseph Bazinet, fathers of the bride and groom. The bride wore an attractive gown of white canton crepe, her tulle veil being caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

After the church ceremony there was a reception and wedding breakfast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bazinet in Occum. There were numerous gifts. Later in the day the happy couple left on a trip that will take them to Bennington, Vt., and upon their return will reside in Occum. The groom is employed by the Hygienic Fibre Mills of Versailles, and both he and his bride are very popular among the younger set in Occum and Taftville.

GILPATRIC PERFECTLY AT EASE AS HE TOLD WHERE EMBEZZLED MONEY WENT

Four Major Financial Transactions Were: To Cobert Machine Company, $100,000; the Monson Worsted Company, in Excess of $100,000; To Meet Transactions With John J. Burns of Hartford, $150,000; Advanced $75,000 to Vito Construction Company—Told of Aiding a World War Veteran, of Helping Two Young Women Finance a Tea Room, of Assisting a Man Afflicted With Tuberculosis, and of Contributing to Other Young Persons Whom He Considered Worthy of His Help.

HARTFORD, Feb. 16—(AP)—The efforts of a banker to aid the young people of his home town to get a start in life accounted for some of the funds embezzled by G. Harold Gilpatric, former state treasurer, and former cashier of the wrecked First National bank, of Putnam, he admitted today.

Gilpatric, blinded by a bullet he fired into his head in an attempt at suicide in August 1924, and now serving a 15-year sentence in Atlanta prison, is back in Connecticut to aid his creditors in unscrambling the financial tangle left by his frenzied effort in 1924 to find funds to stave off disgrace and imprisonment. It was at the first of a series of hearings, held before Referee in Bankruptcy Saul Berman here today, that the story of how he had given financial aid to Putnam's young men and young women came to light.

Deeds as a Benefactor

Explaining notes found in his possession after the financial crash, Gilpatric disclosed that he had aided a young war veteran just back from France to get started in the garage business; he had come to the financial assistance of two young women who desired to open a tea room; he had helped another young man open a machine shop; he had advanced money to a young man suffering from tuberculosis, and in need of food and fuel for his home, and had loaned additional funds to aid other young persons he considered worthy of his help.

The former banker was questioned for three hours regarding his manipulation of the funds of the Putnam bank after which the hearing was adjourned to be continued in Putnam tomorrow.

Appearing perfectly at ease on the witness stand, showing no embarrassment whatever, and seemingly gazing at his questioner, Attorney Lawrence E. Howard, counsel for the trustee of the Gilpatric bankrupt estate, diligently attempted to explain scores of checks, notes and mortgages as they were read off by Mr. Howard.

Four Financial Transactions

Nearly half of the more than $300,000 embezzled by Gilpatric was covered by the former banker in his examination of four financial transactions. He estimated that the Cobert Machine company had received from him or from the First National bank of Putnam, $100,000; the Monson, Mass., Worsted company, or D. J. Cochran, Jr., whom he considered as one, received in excess of $100,000; another $150,000 went to meet his transactions with John J. Burns, of this city, he said, and another $75,000 was advanced to the Vito Construction company, road builders of Thompson.

Gilpatric had the appearance of the banker, the public office holder and the prominent citizen, the position he once held, rather than the federal prisoner, his lot at the present time, as he sat in the witness box. He was dressed in a neat, well fitting suit of grey color, a watch chain and charm were visible across his vest, a band ringing encircles one of his fingers and his gray hair was neatly combed. A large pair of dark colored glasses hid his sightless eyes.

Was a Willing Witness

The former banker proved to be a willing witness and needed but little prompting as he told his story of his efforts to raise funds in every conceivable manner to meet his mounting debts. He was accompanied to the court room by his brother, Walter Gilpatric, a White Plains, N. Y., lawyer, who is acting as the former banker's attorney, but the assistance of the lawyer was little needed, Walter Gilpatric making but few objections to the questions asked by Mr. Howard.

Gilpatric qualified many of his answers with statements that he wasn't exactly sure of his figures, that he couldn't remember all of the facts without reference to the records. Most of the time, however, he was able to state with little hesitation what the notes, claims and mortgages stood for how much money he paid for certain blocks of stocks and the persons involved in the transactions.

Some Business Deals

Scores of business deals in which the former banker was involved came to light as the questioning continued. Some of his money went into mining and oil companies, but he insisted that these were not speculations; he was interested in a non-magnetic compass, which he said had been considered by the government; he was connected with eight or nine men in a company formed to harvest ice on the Housatonic river, but the venture did not pay; Gilpatric cash went into a theatre proposition in Willimantic. Some of the stock issues he could not explain, although the stock was made out in his name.

Discussing his transactions with John J. Burns in connection with the Trumbull market in this city, Gilpatric said "it would have been better for Burns, myself and everyone concerned if I had turned Burns down the first time he came to me for money." The Trumbull market he termed a "hungry market," stating that he had continued to put money into it with the hopes that the tide would turn and it would begin to show a profit.

Admits Wife's $20,000 Claim

Stating that claims amounting to $362,564 had been filed against the Gilpatric estate, Attorney Howard read the list from beginning to end, stopping after each item for comment by the witness. The claim of Gilpatric's own wife for $20,530.30 was included in the list. Gilpatric admitted this claim to be correct, stating it was for notes indorsed. The claim of Dr. Overlock of Putnam, amounting to $350, for medical services following Gilpatric's attempt at suicide, the witness thought reasonable; he did not know the basis of a claim by the Union Block company for $4,690. The claim of the Phoenix National bank of Hartford for $9,000, was for a note of John J. Burns, indorsed by Gilpatric, the witness said.

The Trumbull Transactions

Taking up the Trumbull market transaction again, Gilpatric said he expected the property would eventually bring $200,000, basing his opinion on the statements of real estate men. Gilpatric said he had no interest in the Trumbull market except as a creditor, stating that he loaned to Burns and the latter loaned to the market.

Gilpatric stated that the claims of the Gardner and Cutler estates were correct as well as he could remember. A note of $1,000 to Guy L. Baker, former assistant cashier of the Putnam bank, Gilpatric said, was a personal transaction; a note of $2,500 to Baker was from the bank.

Hazy About Stocks

When questioned about the many blocks of stocks purchased Gilpatric admitted that he was somewhat hazy regarding some of them declaring that for a time it was a case of "borrowing from Peter to pay Paul" and then again "borrowing from Paul to pay Peter." He said he had no account with a broker and that none of the stock was purchased on margin.

Gilpatric, who was brought here from Putnam last night and who passed the night at the Bond hotel, was taken into the court room a half hour before the session opened. He was introduced to many of the men interested in his case and conversed with them at length. He seemed to enjoy this and had a long conversation with Clarence Heath, an old friend, who went to the court room to see the former Putnam banker.

Receiver George M. Coffin, of the Putnam bank, the largest creditor of the Gilpatric estate, was represented at the hearing by Attorney Eucine F. Robinson. Attorney Howard represented the estate of Annie G. Cutler. Clinton H. Scovill, accountant engaged by the state of Connecticut to check up the accounts of Gilpatric in the Putnam bank and in the state treasury also were present.

FRENCH SENATE DEALING WITH FINANCIAL PROBLEM

PARIS, Feb. 16—(AP)—The senate has become for the time being the battleground for the bitter struggle over the financial difficulties of the country, which has been waged for weeks in the chamber of deputies. That body early today adopted the "first train," as Premier Briand called the series of financial measures which proved acceptable to the majority, and sent it to the finance committee of the upper house.

The committee started to work at once with the intention of getting its report ready for presentation to the senate on Thursday. The upper chamber, however, has a full calendar for that day, so discussion of the financial program may be delayed until Friday.

The bills as passed by the deputies leave a deficit of approximately two and a half billion francs facing the treasury. It is the premier's intention to ask the senate to incorporate in its projects articles of the government's plan which the deputies, fearing the wrath of their constituents if they approved any new taxation, rejected, and thus make up the deficit.

If the senators agree he will return to the chamber within ten days or two weeks and demand that the lower house give way.

The chamber, before adjourning at 6 o'clock this morning until Friday, adopted the principle of a sinking fund commission, but neglected to provide any funds to enable it to operate. New schemes to furnish the financial resources for retiring the domestic and foreign will load the premier's "second train," which M. Briands intends to set in motion immediately after the budget is safely balanced.

RETURN OF GRAVE ROBBER AND EMBEZZLER

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Feb. 16—(AP)—Fred G. Beale alleged grave robber and embezzler, returned to this home city today in the custody of three state police who had arrested him at Miami, Fla. He was committed to Binghampton jail. Later he will be taken to the Delaware county jail at Delhi, to await trial on the charge of robbing a grave in the town of Hancock.

According to Captain Fox of the troopers, Beale admitted the violation of the grave at Hancock and the attempted burning of the body of John H. Davis which he had removed from its coffin, in an effort to create the belief that Beale had been burned in the wreckage of his own automobile after it had plunged over a high cliff. The discovery that the partly burned body in the fire-charred automobile was not Beale's was made only after Beale's friends had gone to his home believing they were to attend his funeral services.

Beale also told the officer, according to the latter's statement, that he had appropriated only $1,200 of funds belonging to the Mobinco company, with which he was connected. Of this amount, he says, $600 was given to an attorney at Boston.

Beale told the officers that he had no assistance in the grave robbery.

Beale said that he made a profit of $4,000 during his first 30 days at Miami. If he had not been apprehended so soon, he said, he thinks he would have cleared at least $15,000.

Bergdoll Remains in Jail

MOSBACH, Baden, Germany, Feb. 16—(AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, American war-time draft evader, remains in the Mosbach jail with the prospects of his formal trial on charges of immorality becoming stronger. The Baden attorney-general in charge of investigating the accusations against the former Philadelphian today characterized these as "extremely serious," but said that since they come from a source hostile to Bergdoll they will be investigated with the utmost care.

CHARGES DISMISSED IN CHELSEA LIQUOR CASES

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Nine men, five of them Chelsea police officers who have been on trial in federal court on charge of conspiring with Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley and 17 others to violate the national prohibition law, were adjudged not guilty today. Judge Elisha H. Brewster concurred with a recommendation, from United States Attorney Harold P. Williams and directed the verdict which was brought without the jurymen stirring from their seats.

The United States attorney declared that there was insufficient evidence against the men to warrant holding them further.

With the conclusion of the testimony of Jacob "Jack" London, self-confessed former bootlegger in Chelsea, the government closed its case.

The defendants who were acquitted by direction of the court today were Lieut. John M. Bartley, Robert McCarthy, David Hickey and Joseph Flynn, Police Officers George Flinn, a special officer, Edward A. Forshner, William Lawlow, Walter Doyle and James Sullivon.

Of the 33 defendants who originally went to trial, six have entered pleas of guilty. Their cases have been continued for sentence.

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION OF IMPLICATION IN MURDER

MUNCIE, Ind., Feb. 16—(AP)—Harry Knapp, 23, a laborer was arrested here tonight on suspicion of having been implicated in the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hance near here last August.

George (Dutch) Anderson, internationally known crook pal of Gerald Chapman, and Charles (One Arm) Wolfe, of this city, were accused of the crime by Hance in a dying declaration. Wolfe is serving a life sentence for murder. Anderson was shot to death a short time ago in Muskegon, Mich.,

Knapp's arrest followed a statement made by Eddie Duffey, of Muncie, now an inmate of the Indiana state prison. Duffey swore that Knapp had admitted to him that he had fired the shot that killed Mrs. Hance. Duffey made the statement just before undergoing an operation at the prison.

Although Lieutenant Wade's resignation has been expected in air service circles, war department officials have not yet received it. No official statement was available tonight as to the motives prompting Lieutenants Ogden and Wade to terminate their army careers, but it was understood both had private employment in prospect.

General Patrick has made no recommendation as to action ot be taken in the case of Lieutenant Ogden and Secretary Dwight Davis has as yet given no consideration to the questions involved.

LIEUTENANT WADE TO LEAD A POLAR FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—(AP)—Lieut. Leigh Wade, army round-the-world flier, announced tonight that he will resign from the air service within the next two weeks, and that he will lead a polar flying expedition this summer. He said that Lieut. H. H. Ogden, another of the round-the-world fliers, who resigned from the army in Washington tonight, will act as Lieut. Wade's assistant on the polar flight.

In personnel, equipment and financing, the expedition will be All-American. It is backed by prominent alumni of Harvard, Yale, Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania and will be known as the American Universities Alumni expedition.

Robert Anderson Pope, a New York engineer and Harvard graduate, who has spent five years in the arctic, conceived the expedition. He interested several prominent alumni of other universities, who, with him, have undertaken to finance the outfit.

Although the personnel has been almost completed, the names of two of the pilots and a navigator cannot be announced until they resign from United States service. Other pilots, however, will be Noel Wein, a commercial aviator who has flown 20,000 miles in Alaska without a mishap, and Norman H. Read, a Yale man, who joined the Royal Air Forces at the beginning of the war and has a record of almost 6,000 hours scout and reconnaisance flying during the war in the United States air service.

Other members of the party will be Lowell Thomas, writer and photographer; Harry Ehlebm, mining engineer and L. L. Jackson, radio expert, formerly of the navy, and a geologist and meteorologist on the staff of the American Museum of Natural History. An ornithologist botanist is yet to be selected.

The expedition is negotiating for a steamer to transport its equipment to Point Barrow, Alaska, which is to be the base also of the Wilkins expedition organized for the same purpose. It is that there will be intense sporting rivalry between the two expeditions. Lieut. Wade said he hoped the steamer would be ready to leave Seattle on June 8, and that the expedition would be prepared to make the first reconnaisance flight early in June.

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO HARTFORD FIREMAN

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 16—(AP)—Captain Joseph X. O'Connor, of Squad A, of the Hartford fire department, stricken by a heart attack while directing operations at a comparatively small blaze in a building at 68 Market street at 3 o'clock this afternoon, died while being taken to the St. Francis hospital.

It was at first thought Captain O'Connor had been overcome by smoke, but other members of the fire fighting force who were present say that there was very little smoke. It is thought, however, that what little smoke there was, accompanied by the excitement of combatting the blaze was probably a contributory cause in bringing on the heart attack.

He has been a member of the fire department for fourteen years.

He said she had called him on the telephone and requested him to meet her. He had been talking to her only a few moments when she raised a bottle to her lips and drank of the poison.

Finds the So-Called Gift Tax is Illegal

Decision by Judge Hand in New York—Many Millions of Dollars of Such Taxes Have Been Paid.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—(AP)—Federal Judge Hand in an opinion handed down today held that the so-called gift tax, under which many millions of dollars have been paid into the treasury, is unconstitutional so far as it affects gifts not made in contemplation of death.

The ruling was in a suit brought by the Farmers Loan and Trust company as trustee for the wife and two children of George McNeir, New York capitalist, to recover $47,284 paid under protest as tax on a trust fund established by McNeir for his wife and sons.

The attorney general's office in Washington was specially represented at the trial of the case. The government contended that the sum paid was an excise tax, or a tax on privileges, and one for the collection of which congress had a right to provide. During the argument it was shown that Mr. McNeir was in good health and not "in expectation of death."

DECISION CAUSED NO SURPRISE IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—(AP)—Federal Judge Hand's decision holding a gift [illegible] federal law invalid caused no surprise at the treasury where it was said tonight that doubt long had been entertained as to the constitutionality of the provisions attacked.

While Secretary Mellon has reached no decision whether an appeal shall be taken from Judge Hand's decision, it was generally believed that the case would be carried to higher courts so that a final construction of the law may be had from the supreme court.

The treasury. It was estimated, stands to lose approximately $7,000,000 if the decision is upheld, through repayment of taxes coming within its meaning. Some disagreement among treasury tax lawyers concerning the probable decision of the higher courts if Judge Hand's ruling is appealed, however, caused officials to observe caution in calculating the full effect of a final ruling.

Several decisions by the supreme court in the opinion of some of the tax lawyers, have established the principle upset by Judge Hand. Others, however, took a doubtful or opposite view of this situation.

INCREASED EMPLOYMENT IN TEXTILE INDUSTRIES

BOSTON, Feb. 16—(AP)—Increased employment in the textile and textile machinery industries of Massachusetts during the past month was noted in the monthly report of the New England district, U. S. employment service, made public today. While part time operations were recorded in various industries in Maine and New Hampshire, the situation in New England as a whole was said to be satisfactory. Especial activity was noted in the rubber and metal trades. The report for Connecticut follows:

Industries in general throughout the state are operating on a firm basis and on the whole there is little unemployment. In the majority of cities where part time schedules are in effect the released workers are quickly absorbed in other lines. Overtime obtains in many of the metal working plants, tube mills, clock factories and hat factories. A shortage of skilled men for work in the metal trades was reported from some parts of the state. A sensonable decline in building activities was noted in some cities, while reports from other sections indicated full time employment for all available building craftsmen. Farm labor throughout the entire state is more than adequate for the present demand.

FAMILIES OF S-51 VICTIMS ASK DAMAGES OF $1,800,000

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—(AP)—Damages of $1,800,000 are asked by the families of the officers and men of the submarine S-51 which was sunk off Block island last summer by the steamship City of Rome.

In each of the claims filed the Ocean Steamship company, owner of the steamship, is named as a defendant and is accused of being responsible for the collision and the resultant loss of life.

The United States is holding in abeyance a suit for $2,000,000 against the steamship company for the loss of the submarine until the admiralty court had decided upon the extent of the company's liability.

Special Commissioner William C. Parkin, who was appointed by United States District Judge Thacher, to receive the relatives' claims, said today the time for filing them has been extended to February 24, by which time it is expected that they will total nearly $2,000,000.

MINING OF ANTHRACITE COAL IS TO BE RESUMED THURSDAY MORNING

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 16—(AP)—Anthracite mining after an idleness of five months and seventeen days will be resumed Thursday morning.

The striking mine workers in convention today discussed the new wage agreement arranged for in Philadelphia for four hours and then ratified it by a standing vote.

No voice was raised in opposition to the new contract which sends back to the mines 158,000 men and boys and which the mine workers herald as a new era in the strike torn anthracite industry.

When the noes were called for in ratifying the agreement two men stood up at the side of the hall, but some of the miners said they were not delegates.

The end of the industrial struggle, one of the greatest and the costliest in the history of organized labor, came to an end without any thrilling dramatics. The miners, eager to vote and go home, called for the previous question. President C. J. Golden, of district 7, put the motion and there was a great shout of "ayes."

Then the delegates, who occupied all of the main floor of the town hall, where the specially called convention was held, were asked to rise and they did so en masse, even the galleries joining. There was a cheer and the convention proceeded with the adoption of routing resolutions.

A verbal motion was adopted cancelling the suspension at midnight tomorrow, and with a rising vote of thanks to the miners' scale committee, the convention adjourned sine die. Thus passed into history the great strike of the winter of 1925-26.

TAX BILL CONFEREES MAY BREAK DEADLOCK TODAY

Many of the Minor Controversies Have Been Adjusted—House Members Are Holding Out Against Elimination of the Inheritance Tax—Administrative Spokesmen Are Demanding That the Senate Give in Somewhat on Its "Generous Tax Reduction Policy."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—(AP)—House conferees on the revenue bill assured fellow members on the floor today that they would not yield to the senate in its demand for repeal of the inheritance tax.

Today's efforts of the senate and house conferees failed to bring any agreement on the section inserted in the bill by the senate which added $125,000,000 to the total of tax reduction voted by the house, although many of the less controversial differences between the two chambers affecting the administrative provisions were adjusted in the five hours of deliberation.

Representative Green, republican, Iowa, who heads the house conferees, told the house today that, while he would favor an inheritance tax for the District of Columbia if the federal levy should be repealed, he thought the latter action a "remote possibility."

Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, another of the conferees, asserted that the "house has expressed itself on the inheritance, and, in my judgment, the conferees will never yield."

In addition to voting for repeal of the inheritance tax, the senate also eliminated from the bill the taxes on automobiles, admissions and dues, which the house had proposed merely to reduce. These are main points at issue in the joint conference, and both sides today refused to yield.

With only these disputed rate schedules left to be acted upon, the conferees will seek tomorow to break the deadlock. Administrative spokesmen, meanwhile, are demanding not only that the senate give in somewhat on its "generous tax reduction policy; but that the conferees reach an early agreement so that tax reduction will be assured by March 15 when first returns are filed.

PREPARING TO MAIL INCOME TAX BLANKS

HARTFORD, Feb. 16—(AP)—While every available employe at the local office of the internal revenue department was engaged in getting ready for mailing the income tax blanks form 1040-A, for all incomes of less than $5,000, another order arrived from Washington regarding form 1040. This blank is sent to employers to fill in the income of their employes. Today's order changed the amount taxable on these blanks to concur with the reductions implied in form 1040-A, which means that the employers will now file these slips at Washington for single employes who derive more than $1,500 a year, and for married employes who derive more than $3,500.

Officials of the internal revenue department were busy advising large concerns today of the change. They have urged that employers in making out these blanks, pay particular attention to making statement of whether the employe is single or married, as neglect to do this has caused considerable trouble in the past.

CONSIDERS INTOLERABLE A "KISSLESS MARRIAGE"

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 16—(AP)—A "kissless" marriage has no place in the modern scheme of things, Vice Chancellor Leaming ruled today in granting a divorce to Mrs. Mary Becker, 35, Audubon, N. J. Mrs. Becker testified that her husband, Frank, had not kissed her since June, 1923, and that she could not live without some show of affection.

"Such a condition," the vice chancellor declared, "is contrary to the institutions of this country and to the tenets of the Bible."

Mrs. Becker testified that her husband had joined a religious cult known as "The Truth" and had induced her to become a member. One of the tenets of this cult, she said, was that all display of human affection was forbidden.

"He took up with the new cult shortly after we were married in October, 1923," said Mrs. Becker. "He told me that those who 'hid the truth' should not kiss. For ten months after we were married he never kissed me once. After that he kissed me infrequently and always under protest. Since June 1923, he wouldn't kiss me at all, and in June 1925, we parted."

In granting the divorce Vice Chancellor Leaming said he had read the literature of "The Truth" and had found its teachings "incompatible" with the marriage state. "This peculiar doctrine," he added, "does not relieve the husband of his responsibilities toward his wife."

ACTRESS LEAPED FROM 14TH STORY WINDOW

As the maid lifted the receiver Miss Armitage got up, closed and locked the bedroom door and then leaped from a window. Her body fell on the sidewalk in front of the servants' entrance to the hotel.

Miss Armitage, born in Nashville, Tenn., made her Broadway debut eight years ago with Leo Ditrichstein in "The King."

Last season Miss Armitage played a major part in "Badges" and this season she opened with "Naughty Cinderella," but she left this show after 12 weeks and had not appeared since.

No reason for the act, except her nervous condition could be learned by investigators.

OVATIONS FOR HEROES OF STEAMSHIP ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Captain George Fried and the men he commanded on the steamship President Roosevelt tonight were finding the strain of acknowledging the plaudits of hero-worshiping thousands quite as great as fighting the gales of the sea. The men who for three days and nights fearlessly battled a hurricane in mid-ocean to rescue 25 British seamen from the sinking freighter Antinoe, today winced before the prospect of marching up Broadway packed with hundreds of thousands of persons who were anxious to do homage to the heroes.

The second day of festivities, which began yesterday almost as soon as the President Roosevelt had dropped anchor at Quarantine, got under way shortly before noon when the municipal tug Mavoin brought Captain Fried and his crew from their ship at Hoboken, N. J. to the Battery. It was New York city's day, and the schedule was full.

Accompanied by detachments of sailors, soldiers, marines, coast guardsmen, and bodies comprising members of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Neptune association, the heroes paraded from the Battery to city hall, where they were officially received by Mayor Walker on behalf of the city. The line of march was along a lane of waving, cheering humanity. Confetti and long strips of ticker tape rained down like snow upon marchers and watchers alike.

Mayor Walker and other city officials received the Roosevelt's crew in the aldermanic chamber of city hall. Mrs. Fried and Mrs. Miller, wife of Captain Fried's first officer, and relatives of other members of the crew, occupied places of honor in the chamber.

Prosper Vegiard, proprietor of the Vegiard pharmacy, 23 Union street, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Tuesday with Charles E. Pickett, clerk of the United States district court at New Haven. Vegiard has liabilities of $14,401 and assets of $1,775 of which $19,750 are listed as insurance policies. According to the information the bulk of the creditors are secured on conditional bills of sale for fixtures and stock. It could not be determined what the total assets are to meet unsecured claims until the creditors are heard by Referee in Bankruptcy Attorney Woisard and an inventory is taken by appraisers. Mr. Vegiard has been in business for a few years, purchasing the drug store of Joseph W. Lavalle at 700 Main street, formerly conducted by the late Dr. Fred Rogers. He later removed his business to the present location on Union street.

Deputy Game Warden R. E. Clarke of Columbia stated Tuesday that the appeal for food for the starving game birds could not be stressed too strenuously. The report that he had already received grain from sportsmen he said, was wrong, for the grain that he and his assistants have been distributing was purchased by the state. The state appropriation for this work is limited and with the same condition existing throughout the state the wardens have but little money to expend. So far no sportsman, if such be the proper name, has offered to cooperate with Deputy Clarke to feed the birds that he will seek to hunt next season. Members of the feathered families are desperate for food at this time, and they are an easy prey to foxes which are real plentiful hereabouts. The fact that so many hunters without the genuine sporting spirit have resorted to traps and snares has kept fox hunters from taking up the trail for fear their dogs would meet with disaster and the foxes are increasing while the birds are accordingly decreasing. Deputy Game Warden Clarke said that anyone wishing to make a donation of grain need only notify him or the merchant from whom the grain is purchased and that he would call for it, and tend to its proper disposal.

The employes of the Holland Silk Manufacturing company repeated their delightful minstrel treat in a showing at the Windham Center school auditorium Monday night under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association of Windham. ELI ANTHONY SELLS DR. SOULE PROPERTY

JEWETT CITY, Feb. 16—Eli Anthony has sold his valuable property at the foot of Soule street, to Bronislaw Kaike. This corner, for more than two generations, has been known as the Dr. William Soule property, whereupon 70 years ago, he and his wife with their combined savings built the residence which today is occupied by Mr. Anthony.

Even as the house was completed, and ready for occupancy, Mrs. Soule was stricken with a dreaded malady and was never privileged to live in their new home, which had become as she watched its construction from day to day, the very apple of her eye. Mr. Anthony's possession was soon marked with extensive building and improvements.

Another house and garage were built and a new wall for the street line. Then on the corner where a great oak tree stood, the largest and oldest in Griswold, Mr. Anthony erected a commodious brick business block, wherein he now conducts his dry goods business.

Mr. Anthony since owning the property, has passed through a year and a half of serious sickness, during which time two major operations were necessary. Mr. Anthony has no definate future plans, expecting to occupy his store for some time, possibly remaining in Jewett City. Such citizens and fair-dealing business men can ill be spared from the borough's population.

Intoxicated Flowers

Alcohol has much the same effect on flowers that it has on human beings, members of the botany faculty at the University of California have learned. Six California poppy buds were used in an experiment. They were placed in jars containing liquids varying from straight water to whiskey. The only flower to bloom was the one in the water. The others became tipsy and leaned over the edges of their glasses—not wilted but lost in a stupor, varying in the degree of unconsciousness with the amount of liquor.

FIRE PUMPER LOST WHEEL RETURNING FROM FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Feb. 16—A front wheel on the Captain Put motor pumper of the fire department crumpled and collapsed in the rough going on Maple street, near the Perkins homestead, Tuesday afternoon when the big machine was returning from attendance at a chimney fire in a house owned on Prospect street by Arthur G. Bill and occupied by A. P. Burns. The fire, for which a call was sent in from Box 18, caused no damage.

Chief A. P. Woodward was riding on the jumper on the way back from the fire when he saw a piece of wood thrown into the air from the ground. He thought at first that the truck had run over a stick in the street, but almost immediately noted the truck setting forward as the wheel collapsed and decided that what he saw shooting skyward was a spoke, and this proved to be the case. A wrecker was called and a skid put under the broken end wheel, allowing the machine to be returned to the central fire station.

Chief Woodward was immediately in touch by telephone with the Boston agency of the truck manufacturers and arranged for the shipment of a new wheel to arrive here Tuesday evening on the boat train. Meanwhile several hundred feet of hose were loaded aboard the hook and ladder truck and arrangements made for the use of another truck to carry additional hose in case of fire.

No damage was sustained by the truck through the breaking of the wheel other than the loss of the wheel itself.

The fire was the first that the department has been called upon to attend since prior to the first big snow storm that came two weeks ago tomorrow.

While the pumper was out of service Thursday any fire that did not require the use of forced pressure could be adequately handled, and in case additional pressure were needed the General Putnam steamer could have been pressed into service. It is kept in condition at the central fire station for use at any time, but there has been no call for it for a number of years.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

WALKERS ACTION STILL MYSTERY TO MANY FRIENDS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Feb. 15—The sensational tragedy in which Albertus J. Walker attempted to cut the throat of his step-daughter, Estelle Squires, and then hanged himself in his barn at Staffordville Sunday afternoon has caused quite a stir in the village where Walker has been a resident for many years. The Squires girl who has a bad gash in her throat was taken by a passing autoist to the Johnson Memorial hospital where it is said that she will probably recover. Nobody has yet been able to give a reason for Walker's rash actions unless it was despondency. Less than a year ago his wife and child died and short time before that his father died. He has since lived with his mother and step children on the farm in Staffordville. He was apparently very fond of the children and so far as known there had been no trouble. Walker and the children getting along very nicely together. It is thought however that Walker had been contemplating the deed as he had the razor in his pocket instead of in its accustomed place in the house. Vera Squires the eight year old sister of Estelle is the one who gave the alarm. When the step father attacked Estelle, Vera ran to the road and fortunately an autoist was going by and he was called in. Edward De Wolff of Willington was the autoist who happened to be coming along at the time and it is thought that his appearance might have been responsible for saving the life of the two girls and possibly the mother. It was while De Wolff was on his way to the hospital with the older girl that Walker went to the barn, slashed his own throat and then to be sure that the job was complete hanged himself to a beam with an auto tow rope. State police from the local barracks hurried to the scene of the tragedy as soon as they heard of the attack on the girl and were amazed when they went into the barn and found Walker's lifeless body. Walker was well known at the Springs and was a son of Mrs. Kate Walker. Besides his mother he leaves a brother Robert W. Walker, formerly of Staffordsville, now of Rockville. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Flora Locke of Staffordville. The step daughters, Estelle Squires is a member of the freshman class at the Stafford high school.

Marshall Bolieau, 79, died of chronic myocarditis at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Frasier on Westford avenue; with whom he has made his home for the past few years. Besides his daughter Mrs. George Frasier, he leaves a sister, Mrs. Amelia Larribe of Salem, Mass., and five brothers John T. Henry, George Napoleon and John B. Bolieau, all of Stafford Springs. He was a 32nd degree Mason being a member of Ionic lodge and the Knights Templar. For several years Mr. Bolieau was engaged in the express and trucking business and for about 20 years did about all the trucking in the borough as well as the repair work on the borough streets. Vera He sold out his business and retired from active labor about 10 years ag

A chimney fire at the home of Loudelbourne on Westford avenue abo noon Monday was responsible for th fire alarm which called out the hos company. The fire had broken throu the chimney and burned a portion o a nearby wall before it was put out. The fire engine had considerable diffi culty in making the hill at the corne of Westford and Willington avenue and this caused quite a delay. It took the firemen but a short time however to head off the blaze after they go into action.

The body of Gertrude Belle Sands 48, who died of pneumonia at her home on Willington Hill last Friday was brought to Stafford Springs Monday to be placed in the vault in the Springs cemetery. Vast Expansion and Advanced Equipment make New Prices Possible

The history of Dodge Brothers drastic price reductions is simple and brief.

A better and better product followed by greater and greater demand.

To meet that demand, an expansion of buildings and equipment involving an expenditure of more than $10,000,000.

Output vastly increased, with consequent reduction in the cost of materials and production.

Installation of advanced labor-saving and quality-increasing equipment. For instance, one giant steel-body press costing $10,000 replaces ten former presses costing $7,500 each, and does the work more efficiently.

Result: The finest line of vehicles in Dodge Brothers history at prices that seem incredible in view of Dodge Brothers traditional quality—

That seem more incredible still when considered in connection with improvements that include—

Rich and attractive new colors.
Smart and stylish new body lines.
Four dependable cylinders.
Absolute smoothness of engine operation.
Greater power, snap and elasticity.

And advanced steel body and windshield construction that afford exceptional driving vision at a time when clear vision and safety are paramount in the mind of every motorist.

SLASHING THE TAXES

In the deliberations of the conference committee which now has the tax reduction bill before it consideration will doubtless be given to the statement which has been made by Chairman Green of the house ways and means committee concerning the changes that were made in the measure by the senate.

He isn't favorable to the wiping out of the inheritance tax. On that subject he has long since set forth that such a tax should not be eliminated. While he was insistent at first that it should not be disturbed he did consent to the modification that was made in the house. But he is not a believer in its abolition. Not all will agree with him on that point but when he points to the fact that due consideration has not been given by the senate to the effects of its action concerning the tax reduction he probably isn't far wrong.

When he declares that the revenue cut under the senate bill will total over $456,000,000 and that this does not take into account the repeal of the inheritance tax and greater decrease in following years from the capital stock tax change he is asking for action in keeping with the facts and not guesswork. He figures that the eventual effect of the senate action on inheritance and capital stock taxes will bring the entire tax cut to nearly $600,000,000 and concludes, "This is not a matter of discussion or argument, but merely of addition and subtraction. It will be the duty of the conferees to bring this amount within the limits of our national revenues."

Tax reduction is greatly desired, but none can be so rash as to not want it to be kept within bounds. The folly of cutting far more than conditions warrant can be appreciated. No one wants tax reduction this year that will be so severe that it will create a deficit and require an increase in federal taxes next year. A sound curtailment which will leave the finances of the country in good condition and even prepare it for a further tax reduction is what good business dictates. Slashing taxes for political effect is not wise.

THE ROOSEVELT'S RECEPTION

In England as well as New York there was a fitting welcome to Captain Fried and his crew of the steamship President Roosevelt in recognition of the services rendered in rescuing the officers and crew of the British steamship in midocean during a severe storm.

What Captain Fried and his crew did may have been no more than others have done or others would do under similar circumstances, but that doesn't detract in the least from the heroic service rendered in saving the lives of those helpless on a sinking ship. The loss of two members of the rescuing crew indicates the chances that were taken and the bravery displayed. It was no ordinary transfer of passengers from one ship to another on the broad Atlantic under favorable conditions. The situation was most unusual, the storm was terrific and the fury of the ocean and the wind made it necessary to delay the rescue for many hours.

The Antinoe was not the only ship that was wrecked and its crew was not the only one that was taken off, but the manner in which Captain Fried and his crew stuck to their difficult and dangerous task until it could be accomplished demonstrated a self sacrifice for those in distress that thrilled nations.

Such a noble and unselfish service for humanity cannot go unnoticed. Perhaps those who were directly concerned in the actual work of rescue may have felt it was no great thing but when they volunteered for it they knew it might mean death and that is just what it did mean for two of them.

There are times when it is reported that S O S signals have not been responded to, when steamship captains have refused to heed cries of distress from those helpless in smaller boats and when the master of ships have felt greater concern for reaching port on time than for saving human life. None can ever put Captain Fried and his crew in any such class. They have won great honor for themselves and they have upheld the highest traditions of the sea. Whatever is done in their behalf is thoroughly deserved.

PINCHOT'S GOAL EFFORTS

From all that has transpired there doesn't seem to be the least ground for the view which some have taken that Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania was responsible for the settlement of the coal strike. Certainly his plan for settlement was not accepted. His action in calling a special session of the legislature of that state did not result in legislation that hastened the end of the strike or gave any relief for the future. His repeated efforts to bring his endeavors to bear were without the desired results and there has been no claim made that he was the one who urged Mr. Grant of Cleveland to offer his services.

Rather can it be urged that because of Governor Pinchot's effort the strike was prolonged, for certainly the strikers were placing greater dependence upon his influence and for a long time would give heed to nothing but the Pinchot plan.

That Governor Pinchot has been a friend of the strikers and has done his utmost in their behalf may not be reasonably questioned. It was his plan which was adopted in settlement of the previous strike, when the miners got an increase in wages and the public got an increase in prices, although he was confident that the latter would not follow. He proposed an equally favorable plan of settlement this time but it was as promptly turned down. Anything that bore the name of Pinchot was taboo to the operators or the consumers, and that is what makes it all the more ridiculous to think that any credit was due to him for adjusting the strike. His influence had just the opposite effect. He was particularly concerned at this time because of his political ambitions but they got no response from the legislators of his own state.

That the miners should want him at their meeting is readily understood. He has repeatedly shown himself as being interested in their behalf. He was in fact a worker for them, but they got nothing in the settlement and certainly it is amusing for them to make a great ado about what he did to settle the strike. His intentions were directed in a way to please them but they didn't succeed.

RECLAIMING RUBBER

When the commerce reports show that the rubber factories in this country used last year 140,000,000 pounds more of reclaimed rubber than they did in the previous year the answer of course lies in the fact that those old tires, tubes, shoes and rubber material which had formerly been thrown away in great quantities are no longer going to waste. There is a market for them and they are being reworked at a profit and turned back into the channels of trade.

It is no more than is being done with old newspapers, old rags, old bottles, old junk of all kinds and no more than the householder is doing when he sifts his ashes instead of throwing a large percentage of every ton of coal away partly burned and in some instances not burned at all.

Waste is being checked to the advantage of large numbers. Those who buy up such material, those who rework it and those who buy it as new product are all benefited. The situation in connection with rubber has been created by the restriction placed upon the raw material. When the time comes that new fields for rubber growing are producing it may not be economically wise to resort so extensively to the reclamation of old rubber, but it is not improbable through the expansion of the business, and the development of new ideas and processes that it may become a bigger and more permanent business than anticipated.

Certainly it is a most commendable method of helping to meet the present high price of rubber and the indication that as great an increase in the production of reclaimed rubber will be made this year as was made last is by no means surprising. It indicates the volume of waste that has been taking place in the past.

AMERICAN GOODS FIRST

In connection with our South American efforts for trade expansion we have encountered the claim that the people of that continent are happiest when they are provided with what they want and not with what others think they ought or would like them to have. This plainly indicates that they want what they want when they want it.

It is interesting to note, therefore that the All Russian Central Union of Consumers societies, the big purchasing agency in Russia, ranks the goods received from the United States as the best they get in quality. That is a good testimonial for American products and particularly so inasmuch as Russia might be expected to take sort of a peevish attitude since this government has declined to establish diplomatic relations with the soviet government.

Trade isn't dependent upon diplomatic relations as has long since been shown by the substantial volume of business that is being done with that country. Recognition would probably change the situation little, but it is impossible to overlook the fact that the highest quality of goods is going to Russia from a country whose government does not recognize the soviet government and those countries which have recognized and have trade agreements with it stand second, third or fourth in the quality of the goods provided.

It seems to be the case that the farther away from home Russia buys its goods the better the goods it gets. English goods are rated second to ours, the French third and the German, Austrian and Czechoslovakian the poorest.

EDITORIAL NOTES

From the way it starts there's nothing about the second half of February that augurs anything very terrible.

Some people give the impression that kicking at a dance and dancing it isn't so very different.

The man on the corner says: Most of the time the ultimate consumer is loved no more than the fat man.

Just because Fonzi has encountered trouble in two states doesn't mean that he will not be able to find plenty of suckers in the rest of them.

Apparently Senator Couzens rates those who think differently than he does as ignorant. That trouble isn't of course confined to the senate.

Three Boston patrolmen who held up a man and robbed him of $45 only to get seven to nine years in prison received more and something different than they expected.

Of course if you dip into funds belonging to the bank you work for you can always get a lot of sympathy from the claim that your wages wouldn't permit you to live as you wanted to.

AT THE CLUB

"After all, there are no friends like the old friends," remarked the large and amiable member with sentimental gusto.

"After all what?" inquired the sandy-haired person tartly. "After all the loans they pry out of you and then go into bankruptcy and never pay?"

"Tut, tut," said the large and amiable member.

"Tut, tut, yourself!" retorted the sandy-haired person, nodding to a passing acquaintance on the boulevard outside. "I'm no mummy, nor ever intend to be. But I'll bet the old boy had a host of childhood friends who never lost a chance to touch him for a string of beads or a jar of myrrh or something. If I had all the money I've loaned to my old friends and which I never expect to see again I'd finance a syndicate to standardize the personal accommodation appeal into a regular industry.

"It's such corking good business, you know," he continued. "For instance, a fellow comes up from your home town and breezes into your office with an expansive (and expensive) smile and a well-well-old-top-this-is-good-for-sore-eyes handshake, and although you know darn well what is going to happen, you find yourself inviting him out to lunch and asking him if Ed Smith is still running the soda fountain back home in the White Front Drugs, and if Amy Ames ever did marry him after all, as you are so fond of remarking."

"I wasn't referring to the exigencies of courtship," interrupted the large and amiable member, with dignity. "I merely said that when all is said and done one's old friends remain—"

"You bet they remain," agreed the sandy-haired person. "This particular one I have in mind remained until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and before he left he had unloaded a story of hard luck that would turn your hair white if you didn't use hair dye."

The amiable member ran one astonished hand over his well-barbered black head and opened his mouth to protest indignantly, but the sandy-haired person parried his comeback.

"It seems," he related, "that this friend from my home town had had one heck of a hard time in his business enterprise. Bad luck was what he called it. The partner he'd taken into business without knowing anything about him except that he had $2,000 cash had laid down on him, as he expressed it, though I suspect that more literally speaking, he lit out on him would be correct, and the $2,000 was eventually traced to the lawful course from which it had been transported.

"Then a little loan which my friend had got from the home town bank right round the corner from him—neighbors, you might say—had been called. Actually, he hadn't realized it was due, he said. The days flew by so fast he couldn't see anything but the flick of their tails, as the saying is. And his wife lost the job she had taken in the Emporium dry goods store * * * * she was tired sitting around the house and thought she might as well do something, and her mother could take care of the children just as well as not."

"Oh, shut up," said the large and amiable member, irritably. "Your friend lacks imagination. Nothing original about him, and I love originality in a touch. All the same, I'll wager you loaned him five hundred on his personal note."

"I did not," stated the sandy-haired person, "nor ever again, believe me. I've served my time at that game, and hereafter the man doesn't live who can—"

"At the same time," interrupted the amiable member, stroking his chin thoughtfully, "a person does run up against it sometimes. I have an obligation to meet myself tomorrow and it isn't improving my sleep any. If I had another week on it. Oh, well, never mind that now. Shall we go—"

"I say, old man," protested the sandy-haired person, "you don't by any chance mean that you're short? Because the bank isn't closed yet, you know, and I'd be only too glad —"

The large and amiable member produced a grin on his own account which swelled to a roar as he watched the sheepish look grow on his friend's face.

"You're a sham and a fraud, that's what you are!" proclaimed the large member, joyfully. "And such an easy mark that I don't wonder your friends are tempted beyond their strength. Put up your check book, you blessed old liar, and c'mon to lunch. The lunch is on you."—Exchange.

CHILD TRAINING

PAYING CHILDREN FOR SMALL SERVICES

Ross Scelye-Miller

"I have to pay the children to empty the ashes, now," a neighbor recently said and seemed to think it rather smart of the children to demand pay.

"Do you charge them for their dinners?" came the quick response from one much older.

"Of course not!" was the laughing answer, but afterwards she looked thoughtful.

Should the children help in the ordinary home where the mother does the housework, laundry, cooking, sewing, and all there is to do? Should they be paid for small services?

After many years' experience we think that practically all children, when little, want to do the things they see their elders doing, but if they are put off and not allowed to "help," as they get older they become so used to having everything done for them that they no longer desire to be useful.

In a home recently visited, a little girl of two is very active. She runs to get the dust-pan, the broom, the baby's bib and to put the baby's bottle away. She wants to help; she finds her joy in doing things she thinks will help. It is true that many of the things she does hinder more than they help, but she is cultivating the spirit of helpfulness, just through the joy of doing things, and when she is old enough to be really helpful there is little danger that she will demand pay for every small service. And, moreover, we believe that she will remain so close in companionship to her mother that she will never need "winning back." Most of the mothers who are crying, "How shall I gain the confidence of my daughter?" put that confidence aside years ago, so effectually that it will be difficult indeed to regain. If parents and children begin right, work together, play together, read together and share things, there will be very little question of being paid for service.

A mother of three, one a girl of sixteen, the others younger, says, "No, my children don't help; they could but they don't, and I haven't the heart to make them!" The fault is in their bringing up and they have been defrauded of one of the greatest joys of childhood, the joy of serving in the small ways in which they could serve.

There is no joy in play or study that brings the satisfaction that the knowledge of having done something for mother gives. Let the children help, do not deprive them of the privilege of service. To do the little, helpful things about the home is as pleasant as play and very good exercise. The desire for activity is inherent in every healthy child, and the inclination to do the things others do is likewise a common gift. Why quell it, why not take advantage of it?

The Kansas City Star published a special despatch from Wichita, Ka., stating that a deal, whereby 125 grain elevators and milling concerns in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota was consummated there yesterday.

From Small Beginnings

Heinrich Schliemann

Many people have dug for buried treasure, and most of them have had only their labor for their reward. Yet Heinrich Schliemann, who was born a poor boy and who worked in many humble capacities, came the good fortune to dig up from its hiding place in the earth the greatest amount of objects of gold that anyone has yet found. Unlike most treasureseekers, Heinrich Schliemann did not dig in order to gain treasure for himself but in order to give it to the world. The beautiful objects of gold that he dug up from Mycenae in Greece are now to be seen in the museum in Athens. They are relics of the Homeric Age of ancient Greece and are of untold value, not alone because they are of solid gold but also because they tell the world so much about the dim past of our civilization.

Heinrich Schliemann's father was a poorly paid village preacher in a German town. The family had all it could do to obtain food and clothing and so there was little opportunity for the boy to gain an education. He read and studied just enough to become fascinated by the stories told by the great Greek writer Homer, in the Odyssey and the Iliad. He had to leave his books and go to work in a grocery. Then, with the love of adventure and travel stirring him as it had stirred Odysseus in Homer's story he went to sea as a cabin boy and went through the experience of shipwreck. He went to Holland and there worked in humble positions, meanwhile using every chance that he could find for study. By means of application he became, although only a bookkeeper, a very learned man. He mastered business, set up for himself, and ultimately became a very rich man. He gratified his love for travel by visiting most of the important lands in the world. Meanwhile he kept up his studies.

Deeply interested in the story of the ancient Greeks and the Trojan war, he went to ancient Troy and actually dug up an old city with vast treasures. Then he went to Greece and made wonderful discoveries at Mycenae. He made excavations in many places and uncovered so much of the past that he revealed ancient times more clearly than they had ever been revealed before. He died at 68, a most highly honored man of learning. It is pleasant to know that when he was 48 years old he became a citizen of the United States.

BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE

All the world's "blind spots" are not within the Polar Regions. A South African Government expedition, lately returned from the Kalahari Desert in Bechuanaland Protectorate, reports the discovery of several large towns, stretches of fertile land, and thriving nations which hitherto have been unknown.

"Bechuanaland Protectorate sprawls over a great portion of central South Africa, a tableland of geographic extremes ranging from vast deserts to almost impenetrable swamps," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "With an area greater than that of the state of Texas it has fewer than 2,000 European inhabitants. In light of recent discoveries, however, the native population must exceed 300,000.

"The march of the white man's civilization in South Africa has seldom touched or affected this great region. To the east is prosperous and populous Transvaal, and southern Rhodesia; on the north are the rich forests of Northern Rhodesia and of the Portuguese colony of Angola; to the west is the former German province of Southwest Africa, now under a union of South Africa Mandate; and to the south are the Cape provinces, richest and most developed of all.

"With railroads, cities and other landmarks of civilization on every side Bechuanaland Protectorate has apparently spelled 'detour' to adventurer and homesteader alike. The latest maps do not list a permanent settlement in its great, largely unexplored, interior. Tribes are known to inhabit this region that are extremely primitive. Many of them are believed not to be of African origin. The Protectorate is, therefore, a sort of geographic and ethnological 'safety zone' where the native blacks can watch the rush and whirl of progress on every hand, but can safely remain in blissful ignorance and leisure within.

"In climate, as usually is the case, rests the explanation for this seeming oversight on the part of European entrepreneurs. Bechuanaland Protectorate, which should not be confused with Bechuanaland, a part of the province of the Cape of Good Hope to the south, is divided into two zones. These can be roughly classified as the wet and dry. The wet, called Ngamaland, is a region of sluggish rivers and swamps, in which tropical vegetation grows in profusion. It covers the entire northern part of the Protectorate. The central and southern sections comprise a great sand belt, largely a desert, for the mountains of the surrounding provinces cut off the rain.

"In some respects, however, it is a mistake to call this dry section a desert, for it has little in common with such regions as the Libyan, or the Mohave, or the Arabian deserts. Although the scant rainfall is usually absorbed by the sand, or quickly evaporated, where it collects in pools or watercourses, there is a general underground flow, not far below the surface, throughout the district.

"The long dunes are covered with thick grass and ... The soil is not rich enough to ... any considerable amount of agriculture, but cattle raising is carried on to a limited extent.

"For administrative purposes Bechuanaland Protectorate is divided into eleven districts, each under a resident magistrate. A resident commissioner, or overlord, for the Protectorate resides at Mafeking, in the territory of Bechuanaland, south of the Protectorate, and his assistant is stationed at Francistown, in the northeastern part of the Protectorate. Each native chief, however, rules his own people. The Protectorate is governed as a whole on the lines of a British crown colony.

"Chief of the native towns is Serowe, with more than 20,000 inhabitants, the capital of the Bamangwato district. Just north of it is the Great Salt Lake of the region, Lake Makalakari. Here in vast wastes of salt marshes and sand live a people who have been called the most backward in Africa. The desert and marshes have been their protection from the white and other negro tribes, fortresses 'whose walls are the want of fresh water.'

"The Protectorate has at least one claim to world consideration, however, for just within its eastern boundary runs a section of the Cape-to-Cairo main line, or at least what will be the Cape-to-Cairo main line when Cecil Rhodes' dream finally materializes. Parallel with it also are the trunk telegraph lines to the north. Within 200 miles of the eastern border is Pretoria, the new capital of the Union, and Johannesburg, the metropolis of the southern part of the continent. Near the northeast corner is Victoria Falls. Extensive deposits of minerals have been found in the Protectorate, including gold, silver and coal. They have not been developed due to the inhospitable living conditions and the lack of roads and railways."

URGES NEW ENGLANDERS TO USE PIONEER SPIRIT OF FOREFATHERS

New England is not slipping, declared William J. Fortune, assistant vice president of the Shawmut National bank, of Boston, speaking Tuesday evening at the February membership meeting and supper of the Chamber of Commerce, at the Wauregan hotel. The six New England states, he continued in the course of his stirring address upon "Selling New England," the home of his lady friend, and with an eye to the future. It is time now for the people of this section to use for development at home that same pioneer spirit which in the past has found expression by New England people in every state in the Union.

Mr. Fortune's optimistic address stirred his audience of 100 to enthusiastic applause at several points, and President James L. Case expressed to the speaker, the appreciation of the Norwich audience for his fine address.

Supper was served at 6:15, during which Swahn's orchestra rendered selections and Edward E. Harris was song leader. Before the menu was served, the gathering sang a verse of America and the divine blessing was asked by Rev. S. A. Ickes, of St. Joseph's church, who was a guest.

WILLIAM J. FORTUNE

Before introducing the speaker, President Case expressed thanks to the Norwich Lions for the decorations in the banquet room which had been provided for the Lions' entertainment later in the evening. Mr. Case spoke also of membership gains made in the past month and told the members that the question of the community chest was to be discussed at a meeting by the special committee of the chamber and they hoped to have a man from New London as the speaker at the March meeting upon the subject of the community chest.

At the suggestion of Mr. Case, the meeting voted to send a message of congratulations and good will to George B. Chandler, secretary of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, who has just accepted an invitation to an important position in Ohio, in a similar line of work.

Three bass solos were rendered, in fine voice, by Frank Steinke, with Gred C. Geer as accompanist. His numbers were Gypsy Love Song (Herbert), Smilin' Through (Penn) and Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes.

Introduced Boston Speaker

In introducing Mr. Fortune, President Case said that his address would be in line with the recent suggestions of the Chamber of Commerce towards the development of civic pride and community spirit The people of New England, he said, had a heritage to be proud of and he felt that after hearing Mr. Fortune's address, we would all be sellers of New England and of Norwich, The Rose o' New England.

Mr. Fortune spoke in part as follows:

This is a day of graphic charts, of cycles, of business barometers, (and incidentally of the Charleston), all of which have their rightful place in the schemes of things. Now, I suppose I cause I happen to be connected with one of New England's biggest banking institutions that most of you expect me to present my subject tonight through the medium of a pretentious exhibit of graphic charts and bewildering statistics. I hope you won't be disappointed when I assure you that such is not my intention. Perhaps you'll feel as did an audience which greeted an associate of mine in the bank on a recent occasion such as this. He said, "No, ladies and gentlemen, I am not going to talk banking." Before he could go any further the audience unmistakeably showed signs of relief and one honest fellow yelled out "Thank God!" So let us approach this subject of "Selling New England," from an angle suggested by the subject itself. In other words, apply to it the old-fashioned principles of New England common sense so typical of our forbears.

For some time past, and occasionally even in these days, we have heard a lot of talk about "New England's slipping." A Chamber of Commerce or Rotary or Kiwanis club needs only to let it be known that it has a speakerless luncheon or dinner date open when lo! some prophet with loud voice and heavy gestures would appear. His favorite topic—"New England is slipping." All the so-called statistics of all these hundreds of 'wet blankets' if gathered together, would cause but little apprehension after intelligent analysis.

New England Textiles

"Of course, it is impossible to go far into a refutation of the stock arguments used by these gentlemen. One of the stock scares always used by them was the threatened wiping out of our New England textile industry and the encroachment of the South. Well, the textile industry of New England has a capital investment of over six hundred million dollars. Somehow, it's hard to conceive a New Englander's giving up that much money or even a portion of it. That's something that isn't in the real New England make-up.

Now, we know the southern mills are there. We know they have had a rapid growth. We know the New England textile manufacturer has been at times somewhat apprehensive. Now, right there is a really important point. When you get a New England manufacturer in a fight he is a really resourceful chap. He's ingenious, too. He's experienced. He's proven his versatility and he has a knowledge of his game that is scientific. He doesn't usually call upon these attributes until he's compelled to find a way out.

The textile industry of New England is going to carry on, probably without great expansion, but it is going to carry on. Your generation and mine will not witness its death.

The crepe hanger will also tell you about our boot and shoe industry—its decadence. He will tell you that we can't keep up with the western manufacturer. We rejoice in their prosperity. But let us not forget that generations of experience on the part of both management and labor have given those whose fortunes large and small are devoted to this industry an unchallenged skill in manufacturing. We may be certain of their ability to adroitly capitalize all their advantages, to modify their methods and, with the same intelligent foresight that gave them a preeminent position in this industry, retain with reason their place as powerful factors in an industry peculiarly New England's, and taught by her to the new factors, her former pupils.

It is well when reviewing the economic changes and trends which must constantly occur in industrial New England as everywhere else, to remember the tremendous growth of population in this country, and the resultant demands upon the production of each industrial unit. Perhaps this simple story will quicken the conception of the point in question.

In a city near Boston, a groceryman settled in a small community. For a few years he practically monopolized the grocery business in the section, since his was the only store. Then appeared several stores close to him, representing units of three great chain store systems. All of them, including Jones, the original groceryman, seemed to prosper. My curiosity finally got the better of me and I asked him: "Jones, how is it that you seem to do so well when all the chain store competition has encroached upon you?" Jones only laughed and said, "Well, twelve years ago I was the only groceryman here and I probably did about eighty per cent. of the business. Then came the other stores. Now I'm probably doing about twenty per cent. of all the business but I'm selling about forty per cent. more goods and making more money." I asked him how he accounted for it. He said, "There are several reasons but the principal one is simple. There are more people; the population is increasing faster than my competition, and people seem to buy more."

Competition In Industry

Now I wonder if we can't apply this simple reasoning in a degree to the competition in New England industries? Within our generation the reaction on agriculture in New England has not been enthusiastic. Some would say that our farming is a lost art. Let's not be too sure of this. Several new elements have worked themselves gradually into this situation. Such transportation facilities as bus lines bring the farmer closer to us. Automobiles make it possible for us to pass his door. Indeed we stop to buy. Science contributes an analysis of his soil, teaches him what to avoid. Radio puts him in close touch with the markets; movies keep him in touch with the world, while his Ford keeps him in touch with the movies.

Development of New England water power, already in progress, provides him with electric power and light and enables him to live on a standard even superior to his city brothers. The growth of the finer, more exacting type of industry provides a better pay outlet for his products, delivered faster and cheaper by present automobile than by former horse.

Add to this the potential market coming through the development of a growing tourist movement and a payroll in New England industry of eleven hundred million in wages, and one million workers who must eat, as well as the other millions of population in New England, and the future agriculturist who farms with the same intelligence and zeal one would apply to any business to be successful, and a picture is presented that one may look at with try eyes and not a little envy.

Scenic Beauty An Asset.

The scenic beauty of our section is a natural asset. Its potentialities have not even been visioned by our people. The surface of accomplishment toward making New England the playground of America has not even been scratched. Where can you equal the diversity of natural attraction placed here by a kind Providence? The rock-bound coasts, the smooth, sandy beaches, the cool Atlantic breezes, the rugged mountains and wooded, rolling hills, the unmatched lakes, the low, green valleys, the cultural appeal, the historic settings and rich traditions, all cry to us for development. Up to recently we turned a deaf ear to their appeal, but keenly acute to the widely advertised and clever exploitation of other sections with far less to offer than our own.

Summer Playground.

Please remember this important point: Our New England is a summer playground particularly, while those who would deflect attention from us must rely upon their attraction as a winter resort. But summer is the logical vacation period. Let us give more thought to the greater, if not intensive development of this God-given natural asset, and make New England the mecca of visitors, the summer residence of the nation. Millions in money will be dropped into the lap of this mother section, and millions of people from all corners of our country will see, and hear, and talk about New England, beauty, its industry, its culture, its educational facilities, all of which contribute to a well rounded balanced, stable, prosperous community, built on a solid basis.

Believe in New England.

One of the first principles in selling is to be thoroughly sold on your own product. You can't sell with success and conviction to others unless you believe absolutely in the thing you are selling.

Our important job is to sell New England. Let us start by selling it to ourselves and to all of our people. We must believe in it and that we may well do. Let us look at its future in a typical New England way. Let us array all of the facts before us affecting our conviction about the future of this section and the inevitable conclusion must be "New England is not slipping." If there is anything wrong with it (and I don't think there is anything out of the ordinary) it is with our "state of mind."

We are accustomed to leadership. We have accepted industrial leadership for generations. For four or five generations our children have been taught to accept it as a heritage. We sometimes forget that there is a responsibility involved by that inheritance. We forget that the leadership was created by our forefathers. Our responsibility, indeed our obligation then, is not only to safeguard what we have, but to maintain our inherited leadership. The spirit which created it gave proof by success, of its fitness. That same spirit is essential to its maintenance.

From early days New Englanders were salesmen. No part was too distant, no difficulties of distribution too hazardous to resist the intensive, pushing, constant, convincing selling of New Englanders selling New England goods. They were sold themselves on their own goods and on the future of New England and they therefore sold their world.

Revive the Old Spirit.

That there is a recognition of the need of a revival of the old spirit, there can be no doubt. Witness as proof the recent gathering at Worcester of some of our best minds and busiest men to assist in that revival. Men like Insull, Liggett, Lawrence, and many more men of leadership gave proof of their interest and willingness to help. It is safe to say that New England has awakened to her opportunities and at no time in her history have so many leaders in all walks of life placed themselves so unreservedly in the front line trenches, prepared to carry on and on.

For generations we have been pioneers. We have sent our best to establish new frontiers west, south, and more recently north. We have been explorers, founders, and creators of all other sections of this country. In fact, it has been said that New England has always been willing to sacrifice generously her best blood for transfusion to weaker, sister states and the inevitable result has been to drain her own constitution of a substantial amount of virility and those other elements that spell progress.

Pioneer At Home.

Today there is by comparison a lessened outlet for the roving, pioneer spirit. So then our job is to interest New England men in New England affairs. Show them the opportunities to exercise their instincts to pioneer right here at home. There is room in New England for all their founding, creative, and development powers. Let us stop the practice in schools of intriguing our children with the wonder and greatness of things outside. Rather teach them more thoroughly the reality and truth of the wonder and the present and future greatness of their own New England. There is room and opportunity for all of them near their native fireside. Industry, art, and all the vocations welcome them to a life of usefulness.

It is said by an eminent authority on monkeys, that they will sit in the jungle in full and complete enjoyment around a blazing fire but not one of them will be moved to add a stick to the flames to prolong their enjoyment.

Chambers of Commerce like yours, and all such bodies, are doing a great and important work. In disseminating facts and information, in spreading truth and good feeling, you are adding sticks to the fire, keeping alive the spirits of your fathers. You are proving that New England is not slipping. On the contrary, she stands erect and proud with both feet squarely on the ground. She looks with reverence on the traditions and accomplishments of her past. But her eyes look into the future. She sees the coming generation of her stalwart sons and recognizes her responsibility to them. She's conscious of her obligation to maintain for posterity that precious heritage of teacher, of leader. She's going to meet that obligation.

New England is not slipping!

FAVOR PLACING BEARS IN GAME SANCTUARIES

Five Norwich sportsmen were among the 150 persons from various parts of the state interested in fishing and hunting who met Tuesday in the senate chamber to consider matters relative to the protection of game and fish in Connecticut. The Norwich men present were Roy Fillmore, Louis J. Ortmann, George Dolbeare, Bermon J. Gibbs and William LaRochelle, all members of the Norwich Fish and Game association.

The meeting gave unanimous approval of a plan to distribute in the proposed state game sanctuaries a number of bears of the small, black, harmless type, but there was a division of sentiment on a plan to reintroduce beaver along the state streams.

Eight formal resolutions concerning hunting and fishing, the sentiment of which will affect the board's administrative policies and may later be incorporated into legislation, were adopted. The substance of these resolutions is as follows: That there be a bounty on crows, gray foxes and bobcats, or lynx, the amounts to be determined by the board.

That the streams on which the state has acquired fishing rights be opened for fishing on April 15, fifteen days after the regular trout season begins, or earlier, subject to the discretion of the board.

That the regulations for white perch become the same as those for yellow perch or a seven inch legal limit and a limit of thirty perch to each person's catch in one day.

That the creel limit on pickerel and black bass be ten to each person a day. The limit for calico bass ten to a person a day. That the legal length for pickerel be increased from twelve to thirteen inches.

The meeting voted to express its condemnation of the Stansfield bill, now before congress, which would allow unlimited grazing in the national forests. Copies of this resolution will be sent to the Connecticut members of congress.

There was a division of sentiment on the proposed federal migratory bird act, which would provide that a federal license, costing $1, be necessary to hunt migratory wild birds, such as ducks, geese, rail birds and woodcock. The vote on an approving resolution showed about ten more in favor than against.

The Norwich delegation presented a petition with a half hundred signatures of members of the local fish and game association asking that the open season be lengthened from Sept. 7 to January 1st. The petition was taken under consideration.

EVENING OF MAGIC IN Y. M. C. A. COURSE

The Floyds, magicians of Boston, provided a very pleasing and mystifying programme of magic and mind reading Tuesday evening as the final number of the Norwich Y. M. C. A.'s annual course of entertainments. Their programme was varied and interesting, being given in three parts. The programme opened with a demonstration of magic, numerous mystifying sleight of hand numbers being given. The second part of the programme was a marvelous demonstration of mind reading. Floyd's young woman assistant, blinded and occupying a seat on the stage, described accurately a number of articles, badges, pins, money, rings, fountain pens, etc., which a number of those present handed to the magician as he passed about the audience.

The third part of the programme was featured by a startling act in which the magician, handcuffed, tied up in a bag, locked in a trunk, the trunk being bound and tied up with rope, changed places with his assistant in about four seconds time. Somehow or other he got out of the handcuffs, bag and trunk while his assistant was found handcuffed tied up in the bag and securely locked in the trunk. It was one of the finest magical exhibitions ever given in Norwich.

HELEN WILLS LOSES TO MLLE LENGLEN IN HARDEST BATTLE OF CHAMP'S LIFE

MISS WILLS

CANNES, France, Feb. 16—(AP)—Suzanne Lenglen remains undisputed tennis champion of the world by virtue of her victory today over Helen Wills, but for a few minutes it seemed as though her reign might end.

It was a wonderful match between the greatest women players of the old and the new world, the finals in the singles of the Carlton tournament, which packed the stands with enthusiastic supporters of the two contestants and brought together huge clamoring crowds outside the gates who were unable to get in.

The score was 6-3, 8-6 in favor of Mlle. Lenglen after one of the most dramatic matches in the history of tennis, ending with both near the verge of collapse.

The California girl took the lead in the first set, as had been hoped by her supporters, and the score stood 2-1 at the end of the third game. But the French champion, playing with old-time skill and finesse, evened matters in the fourth, and won also the fifth and sixth. Helen took the next game, but Suzanne finished the set with careful placements.

It was in the second set, however, that all the dramatic features in the contest were displayed. From start to finish it was give and take, each striving at the end for the extra point that would spell victory. Miss Wills performed far above her usual game, while Mlle. Lenglen at times trembling with emotion, stroked like one in pain.

From the point of view of tennis, the contest was not what had been expected. But, after all, the interest lay in the meeting of Suzanne and Helen, long deferred, and at one time thought never to come. For weeks little else had been talked of, and betting on the outcome, whether real or in fancy, had played a prominent part in accentuating world wide interest.

Both seemed conscious of the responsibility resting on them, and for once the emotions of the California girl were not entirely held in check. Care and caution dominated the play which during the greater part of the time was from the baseline. But as the fight became more bitter, extra driving power was put into the strokes. And when finally Mlle. Lenglen had achieved victory she threw her racquet in the air and leaped for very joy.

Surrounded with flowers and showered with congratulations from many of the great of the world, Suzanne was accorded an ovation such as perhaps before she has never received in her career. The reaction made the tears flow down her face as friends crowded about her, but the cheers of the multitude soon brought back the smile of the victor.

"I told you you would have to congratulate me," she said to one who had previously expressed some doubt as to her ability to win.

Helen Wills, with youth in her favor, took her defeat philosophically. "There will be other tennis matches; other years are coming," was all she would say.

The two champions entered the court together and were immediately surrounded by the ubiquitous cameramen. Suzanne was laughing, but with a somewhat strained, pinched look; Helen bore her usual impassive expression. The French girl was gorgeously adorned in pale rose silk and full length sleeve sweater and pale rose turban to match. Helen, wearing a plain white sailor blouse with flowing collar, looked like a simple schoolgirl accompanying an Indian queen.

Upon her arrival from Nice, Mlle. Lenglen was nearly mobbed by her admirers and had the greatest difficulty in making her way through the crowds which were larger outside the courts than in the stands. The roofs on neighboring houses were burdened so heavily with spectators that they might be expected to crash in at any moment. Periscopes were utilized by men standing outside the high fences to get a view of the play.

The match was contested under the most trying circumstances ever beheld in tennis. Fully 2,000 spectators from the most varied outside vantage points imaginable kept up running fire, cheering, talking and commenting to the intense annoyance of Suzanne, who spoke to the crowd after the manner of a queen addressing her subjects, ordering them to remain silent. When her orders were ignored, sehe pleaded "Please be quiet."

One section of the stand was occupied by members of various royal families, incuding former King Manuel, of Portugal, Grand Duke Michael, of Russia, Prince George, of Greece, the Rajah of Pudukota and others. The absence of the Duke of Connaught who had promised to be present, was interrupted as a sign of his poor health. The multi-colored dresses shining in the bright Riviera sunshine presented a kaleicoscopic picture in which red shades predominated. Pony parasols opened by pretty women to protect their complexions were soon brought down by the enraged cries of spectators standing behind, whose view was obscured.

Two hours after Suzanne and Helen met in the singles combat upon the courts they again faced one another, but this time attended by their respective partners, Didi Vlasto and Henriette Contostavos. Again Mlle. Lenglen was victorious, playing until her utter collapse. She with her partner won to the score of 6-4, 8-6.

The California girl, however, dominated the doubles courts and showed much better tennis than any of the others. She had her injured knee dressed in the interval and opened up a terrific attack always directed at Suzanne. The French champion and Mlle. Vlasto soon realized that Helen was out for blood, and gave their attention exclusively against Mlle. Contostavos, who frequently was forced to hit out or net, while Helen stood still.

This match was somewhat of an anti-climax, but the California girl, with nothing to lose, played in a savage manner, which, perhaps, had she adopted this plan in the singles, might have brought her even closer to the crown.

"I am playing in the singles in the Nice tournament next month," said Mlle. Lenglen after the doubles, "and I suppose I must meet Miss Wills again if she cares to enter."

Miss Wills remained in the seclusion of her rooms in the hotel, but sent word that she would carry out the schedule she had mapped out for herself when she came to the Riviera. This includes the singles at Nice.

AMERICAN TENNISDOM IS PLEASED OVER MISS WILLS' SPLENDID PLAYING

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Metropolitan cross section of American tennisdom took "our Helen's" defeat by Suzanne Lenglen somewhat to heart, even though it had been widely anticipated, but in the general tone of comment on the match there was a distinct note of enthusiasm for the unexpectedly close fight which Miss Wills gave her French rival.

The experts who generally predicted a one-sided Lenglen triumph now are convinced that, in light of her remarkable playing against heavy winds today, Miss Wills not only would make a better showing in another match but stands an even chance of victory.

At least two critics, Mrs. Molla Mallory and Vincent Richards, believe Helen would have done better today had she carried the battle in more aggressive fashion to Suzanne instead of softening up her game.

Their views, along with others from American and French tennis stars, prominent tennis officials and other critics, were expressed to the Associated Press as follows:

Molla E. Mallory, seven-times American champion and only player to beat Lenglen in last seven years—"you can never beat Suzanne by playing a soft game. We all told Helen before she left to carry the game to Lenglen and smash the ball all the time. That's the way I beat her in 1921 at Forest Hills and the only way anybody will ever beat her. It must have been a great match and I would liked to have seen it."

Jones W. Mersereau, president of United States Lawn Tennis Association—"Miss Wills must have played exceptional tennis under the conditions. It is a satisfaction to know she put up such a plucky fight against odds and I would look to see her do even better the next time they meet."

Julian S. Myrick, chairman Davis cup committee—"Helen made a remarkably good showing, considering all the circumstances, and proved she is not far from being Suzanne's equal. I am confident she would do better in another match and possibly defeat the French star."

William T. Tilden II, national champion—"I don't like to comment on a match I didn't see. However I'm glad they played and sorry Helen lost."

Vincent Richards, Olympic champion—"My money is on Helen if they ever meet again. She showed today that she has the courage and gameness to come close to taking a set from Lenglen and this exhibition convinces me that Helen will win if they ever take the courts again. But Helen made a grave mistake today. Instead of hitting out and taking the aggressive from Suzanne, she softened up her game in the curicialsports, according to cable dispatches. She won't make that mistake again. She'll hit it out, take the lead from the French woman and that'll make the difference between defeat and victory."

Jean Borotra, French Davic cup stars—"Marvelous perfectly marvelous. I had great admiration for Helen before the match but her showing today increases this immensely. I don't think Helen will beat Lenglen this year but after today, anything may happen. I think Helen's feat in coming so close to a set victory is astounding. My hat's off to the little queen of the American courts."

Rene Lacoste champion of France and Wimbledon—"I'm surprised. I predicted Suzanne would win with the loss of but few games. It was a great victory for Suzanne, nevertheless, but also a glorious defeat for Miss Wills."

Georges Carpentier, French boxer—"I expected it. I have known Suzanne since she was a 'foot high' and always have considered her the greatest woman tennis player in the world. But at the same time I hand it to Miss Wills for her game stand."

JEWETT CITY PROS TO PLAY SO. MANCHESTER TONIGHT

This (Wednesday) evening at Bijou hall, Jewett City, the Cheney Silk mill team of So. Manchester will endeavor to repeat their last victory over the rejuvenated Jewett City Pros. While the So. Manchester aggregation still continues to trim the best the state has to offer in basketball teams, records point to the fact that of late the Pros have been displaying a marvellous brand of chalked-court ability. This was clearly demonstrated in their last engagement, when they relieved Baltic of the well known bacon on the latters own surface, a feat in itself worthy of no small amount of praise for it takes a sweet collection of performers to defeat the clan of old Baltic at Baltic.

As great as the silk towners are, Baltic, whom the Pros disposed of very easily, holds a victory over them and if past performances are any basis for comparison the locals should annex another win to their ever increasing string of pleasing victories. In Pentland, So. Manchester will bring what is perhaps the greatest individual performer to ever grace the boards at the local emporium but the fact remains that team work is far more essential and more beneficial than the greatest of solo efforts. As Napoleon met his Waterloo, it is hoped by the loyal Jewett City fan, that, so shall So. Manchester meet a tartar in the personage of the Jewett City Pros. Jewett City will use Benjamin and Normandin at forwards, Mills at center Blake and Barry guards, C. Benjamin and Faber will also be available. The line-up for So. Manchester has been misplayed but they will use exactly the same team that was used here in their previous fruitful raid on the pork supply of the Pros. There will be a fast preliminary as has been the custom in the past.

OSBORN AND HOFF AGREE SEVEN EVENTS

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A program of seven events has been agreed upon by Harold Osborn of the Illinois A. C. and Charley Hoff of Norway for their test of all-round athletic ability in connection with the Knights of Columbus track meet at Madison Square Garden, March 16.

This was announced today after the amateur athletic union received formal acceptance from Osborn of Hoff's challenge. Osborn wired from Lakeworth, Fla., where he is teaching, that he had obtained a leave of absence to cover the date of his duel with Hoff.

The events and the order in which they will be run off are as follows: 60-yard dash, running high jump 16-pound shot put, running broad jump 60-yard high hurdles, pole vault and 440-yard run.

The olympic decathlon scoring method, providing a scale of points for performances in each event will govern the test. Osborn is the present Olympic champion, but has never encountered Hoff in competition as the Norwegian was kept out of the all-round test at Paris in 1924 because of an injury.

Hoff plans about two weeks of training to fit himself for the duel with Osborn. Except for his appearance in the national championships at Chicago March 5 and 6, he will cancel other competition in March prior to the K. of C. meet.

BOROTRA WINS AFTER HARD FIGHT WITH BOWMAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP) — Jean Borotra of France continued his quest for his second national indoor tennis championship today by defeating Herbert L. Bowman of New York in a thrilling three set duel 4-6, 6-2, 6-3 on the board courts of the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Bowman gave the French Davis cup star a hard battle, bowing only after Borotra had called upon every ounce of his amazing stamina and versatility to conquer the twisting shots of the metropolitan player.

Vincent Richards, of Yonkers, N. Y., Olympic champion, defeated J. G. Hall of New York, 6-4, 6-0, in a second round match while Maurice Ferrier, Swiss champion, eliminated E. Brandt of New York, 6-3, 8-6. Rene La Coste and Jacques Brugnon of France won their matches, each losing six games in the two sets to young New York opponents.

William T. Tilden, 2nd, of Philadelphia, national outdoor champion, came through to the quarter-finals, defeating Edward W. Jenkins, Jr., of New York, 6-0, 6-4. Tilden enters this bracket with a record of having lost but seven games in three matches.

HARRY HOOPER GIVEN RELEASE FROM WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Harry Hooper, one of the outstanding outfielders in the American League, tonight was given his unconditional release by the Chicago White Sox. Hooper, who broke into baseball in 1902 with St. Mary's college, played seventeen years in the American League, the last five as a member of the Chicago club. He joined Oakland in 1907. That same year he went to Sacramento and in 1909 he went to the Boston Red Sox where he was one of the stars with Duffy Lewis and Tris Speaker, when that club was a pennant winner, participating in the baseball classic in 1912, 15, 16 and 18. He came to the White Sox in 1921, in the trade for John Collins and, Nemo Leibold.

OSBORN AND RITOLA OUTSTANDING STARS ON MYTHICAL TRACK TEAM

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—(AP)—Major honors go to Harold Osborn, all-around ace of the Illinois Athletic club, and Willie Ritola, crack Finnish-American distance runner, in the selection of the All-American track and field team, based on the past year's performances.

Four places go to Osborn and three to Ritola in the 1926 all-star array, an annual list compiled by Frederick W. Rubien, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union for Spalding's athletic almanac and made public tonight. Osborn is rated the best performer in four of his specialties, the standing high and broad jumps, running high jump and decathlon. Ritola's pre-eminence among American runners is recognized at two miles, ten miles and in cross-country running.

National champions are recognized with a few exceptions, the most notable being the placing of Joie Ray as all-American miler on the strength of his consistently good performances indoors and out, although Ray Buker won the A. A. U. title. George Marsters of the New York A. C. gets the half-mile post despite the fact that Alan Helffrich, a club-mate, is national champion but Helffrich is rewarded by selection as the best 600-yard man.

Glenn Hartranft's displacement of Bud Houser in the discus throw and Ritola's substitution for Fred Wachsmuth in the cross-country run are the only other instances of national title-holders being dislodged.

The all-American line-up follows: 60 yards—Loren Murchison, Illinois A. C., 100 yards, Frank Hussey, Boston college; 220 yards, Jackson Scholz, New York A. C., 300 yards, Vincent Lally, St. Anselm's A. C., New York; 440 yards, Cecil Cooke, Syracuse university, 600 yards, A. B. Helffrich, New York A. C.; 880 yards, G. M. Marsters, New York A. C.; 1,000 yards Lloyd Hahn, Boston A. A.; one mile, Joie Ray, Illinois A. C.; two mile run, 10-mile run and cross-country, Willie Ritola; six-mile run, George Lermond, Boston A. TWO COLLEGE TANK RECORDS ARE SMASHED

MIDDLETOWN, Feb. 16—(AP)—Two intercollegiate swimming records were broken here tonight by Yale swimmers who, continuing their victories, defeated Wesleylan university's team 49 to 13.

House, in the 150-yard back stroke swim bettered the national intercollegiate record by nearly three seconds. He made the distance in 1 minute 46 1-2 seconds. Ruel, of the Navy held the record at 1:49 2-5.

After a Yale relay team composed of Bronson, Meany, Stage and Peterson had won the 160-yard relay in 1 minute and 17 seconds, the team was rearranged with House swimming for Meany. This combination beat a Wesleyan team in the record time of 1 minute and fifteen and 4-5 seconds. Northwestern held the national intercollegiate record at 1:16.

YOUNG COULON SIGNS YEAR'S CONTRACT WITH U. S. ARMY

Young Coulon of Taftville is now under the management of the U. S. Army. The local boxer signed for a year's hitch in the outfit and from now on expects to get plenty of action in the ring. A letter received by Coulon's brothers stated that he was in for a year and that he had been sent to Fort Banks in Boston for the time being.

If Coulon remains long in Fort Banks he will get plenty of ring work as there is a boxing exhibition practically every week at the army post and some of the best of the service fighters appear in this ring. Coulon's decision to join the army was made after his bout with Dark Cloud Bradley fell through and he was afraid of going stale through inaction. Local followers of Coulon are of the opinion that his trick in the army will do him good and that in a year's time he will be in a position to step out after the leading flyweights of the country.

THUNBERG AND JEWTRAW COMPLETE THEIR MATCH RACES

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 16—(AP)—In swirling snow driven by a bitter west wind, Clas Thunberg, fleet skater of Finland, and Charles Jewtraw, of Lake Placid, former international champion, completed their four day series of match races on Pontiac rink today.

Thunberg skated to victory in the one-third mile event after Jewtraw fell just before he reached the tape. The American led until he was within fifty yards of the finish. The time was 52 4-5 seconds.

After his fall in the shorter race, Jewtraw withdrew from the three mile event, Thunberg skating an exhibition raced by Eddie Murphy of Chicago and O'Neill Farrell of Chicago, national champion.

In the seven races at Lake Placid and here, Thunberg won six events, establishing new world's records in four of them, and lost one race, the 220-yard dash on the opening day. He amazed Adirondack skating followers with his speed and endurance, reaching his true form for the first time since his American invasion began several months ago.

SHEIK LEONARD TO MAKE HIS HOME IN NORWICH IN THE FUTURE

Johnny "Sheik" Leonard, of Wallingford, a contender for the New England welterweight title, has shaken the dust of that little place from his ring shoes and now claims Norwich as his home. Along with the dust of Wallingford the Sheik has shaken Andy Parker as his manager and also Milan O. Welch as his publicity agent. Hereafter the Sheik will do his own business managing and will also handle his own publicity stuff.

Since his battle last week with Jack Oakes, the colored welterweight of Buffalo, Leonard has not been satisfied with the way his affairs have been conducted and has broken loose from the combination of Parker and Welch. The Buffalo boy gave the Sheik quite a plastering and was not really in the class with the local boy. It was a case of either ignorance of Oakes ability or just ordinary poor judgment that the management showed in matching Leonard with the colored boy.

The Sheik will enter the employ of Contractor P. F. Sweeney and will do his training at the Army and Navy club in Taftville with Frankie Busch, Kid Wagner and others of the local pugilistic fraternity. Leonard has always been popular with local fans and a good part of his time, when not in training, has been spent in Norwich.

The Sheik will issue a challenge to the winner of the Al Mello and Meyer Cohen bout at Holyoke next week. Al Mello is the present holder of the New England welterweight title which he at stake in the bout next Monday night. Leonard hold a decisive victory over Cohen and should Cohen win the title he feels confident that he can take it away from the Holyoke boy. Cohen recently beat Tracy Ferguson and everyone knows how the Sheik stands with Tracy. Local boxing fans are awaiting the outcome of the Cohen-Mello bout with interest.

Mocker's Little Joke

A pleasant joke is rather nice;
It gives to life a little spice.
—Peter Rabbit.

"It is a queer thing," says Peter Rabbit, "how people love to play jokes on other people, but hate to have jokes played on themselves. Why people should enjoy laughing at others and grow angry when they are laughed at themselves is more than I can understand. A joke is a joke, and so long as it is not an unpleasant joke, I don't see what difference it makes who the joke is on. Now, I don't mind having a joke played on me."

"Is that so?" exclaimed Mocker the Mocking Bird. "Then you are very different from most folks, Peter Rabbit. Personally, I don't believe that is quite true. I have an idea that you are just like everybody else. Somehow the one the joke is on never can see the joke."

"Pooh!" exclaimed Peter, "I can always see a joke, even if it is on me."

Mocker said nothing, but there was a twinkle in his eyes. It was a twinkle of mischief. No one saw it, but it was there just the same. Presently Mocker went over to Farmer Brown's house to get some raisins and currants, for that is what he was living on chiefly through the winter. Peter Rabbit scampered along, lippety-lippety-lip, back of the stone wall, and so reached the edge of the Green Forest. There he sat down in a bramble tangle to try to make up his mind what to do or where to go. It was broad daylight and here he was up in the edge of the Green Forest, instead of up in the dear Old Briar-patch, where he belonged.

Jolly round, bright Mr. Sun was smiling down from the blue, blue sky and there was beginning to be warmth in his smile, although the Green Forest and the Green Meadows were still white with snow. Peter felt that warmth and it set him to thinking of spring. Sweet Mistress Spring! He knew she must have started from the Sunny South. How glad he would be when she arrived. Thinking of her reminded Peter of her heralds, who always go before her—Winsome Bluebird and Welcome Robin.

"It won't be long now," said Peter, talking to himself, "before Winsome Bluebird and Welcome Robin will arrive. It certainly will be good to hear them. I don't know of any sound more joyous than the voice of Welcome

"Welcome Robin!" exclaimed Peter "As sure as I have a cotton tail it is Welcome Robin!"

Robin when he first arrives. I—What's that?" Peter sat up so suddenly that he scratched his nose with a bramble.

From back in the Old Orchard there came a voice. "Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!" cried the voice, and Peter felt a thrill go all over him. There was no mistaking that voice. "Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!" came again.

"Welcome Robin!" exclaimed Peter. "As sure as I have a cotton tail it is Welcome Robin. I've known him to come as early as this, but I wasn't expecting him so early this year. My, my, my, isn't it great! I must go right over and welcome him."

Over in an apple tree on the edge of the Old Orchard nearest Farmer Brown's house sat Mocker the Mocking Bird. His bright eyes were twinkling as he watched for a hurrying little brown form to come up from the Green Forest. Now and then he would put his head back, open his mouth, and from it would come the cheeriest of sounds. "Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!" he would say and then repeat it again. It was the message of Welcome Robin and it was given in the voice of Welcome Robin, but there was no one there but Mocker the Mocking Bird. Mocker was playing a little joke.

BALTIC

The regular meeting of the Rev. J. W. Hoey assembly, Catholic ladies of Columbus, was held in club hall last Tuesday evening. After the regular business was transacted, the presiding officer, Mrs. J. Woods, thanked all the officers and sister members who had worked faithfully and untiringly in making her three years as president successful.

State President Mrs. Margaret Dutton of Norwich being present to install the officers of the assembly for the coming year, Mrs. Woods turned the meeting over to the state president and her aides, Miss Maud Delaney and Mrs. Julia Slater who carried out the work of installing. The following officers were installed: President, Mrs. Madyln Drescher; vice president, Miss Louise Sweetland; honorary president, Mrs. J. Woods; recording secretary, Mrs. Margaret Delaney; financial secretary, Mrs. Annie Lemoine; treasurer, Miss Mayme Pappineau, sentinel, Miss Theresa Sullivan; mistress at arms and assistant, Mrs. Charles Charon and Mrs. Peter Kelly; auditors, Adele Bourue, Mrs. Leiss, Rose Pappineau; trustees, Mrs. E. E. Cote, Myrtle Buteau, Mrs. Fred Gauthier.

The installation being over the new president, Mrs. Drescher, closed the meeting to an entertainment consisting of a vocal selection, Who Is Sylvia, by Mrs. Josephine Stewart; a duet, Hungarian Rhapsody, by the Misses Louise Case and Rhea Depatz. Laughing Song, by Mrs. Alice Charon; a recitation, St. Peter at the Gate, by Miss Louise Sweetland. A vocal solo, Last Night, by Mrs. Josephine Stewart closed the entertainment for the evening. The pianists were Mrs. Blanche Case and Miss Biblanna Gaucher.

While luncheon was being prepared little Miss Dorothy Charon dressed in yellow and white, presented the retiring president, Mrs. John Woods, a beautiful basket of flowers in behalf of the members of the assembly. Mrs. Woods thanked the members for their kind thought. President Mrs. Drescher was also presented a basket of flowers by little Miss Dorothy, in encouragement in the new duties she has assumed. Mrs. Drescher thanked the member sisters and predicted a banner year for Holy assembly.

Lunch being served Rev. Adelbert Jalbert was called on for a few remarks and he graciously responded. State President Mrs. Dutton was next called and she spoke very highly of the work that had been accomplished by Holy Assembly. She also said that she knew that the same spirit and good will would exist in the coming years as had been shown in the past and she hoped that the assembly would continue to grow.

Guests for the evening were Rev. Adelbert Jalbert, State President Mrs. Dutton, Miss Maud Delaney, organizer, Mrs. J. Slater of Providence and Mrs. Josephine Stewart of Sprague. The chairman of the refreshment committee, Mrs. Fred Gauthier and her able assistants, Mrs. Eva Pappineau and Mrs Annie Sullivan ably took care of their part of the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Silva Belisle of Main street celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary Saturday evening. Cecile Desjaslais represented Cupid and presented the couple a bouquet of flowers. The rooms and tables were prettily decorated in Valentine colors. Sixty plates were set and a delightful lunch was served. Games were enjoyed before and after lunch. Mr. and Mrs. Belisle were the recipients of many useful presents. Music for the occasion was furnished by Joseph Allard's orchestra. Guests were present from Norwich, Taftville, Wauregantic, North Grosvenordale and Providence.

A Diamond Finder

One Sunday Mrs. Ida Shepard, of Albion, Mich., went on an automobile ride with her daughter and in the course of the ride lost a diamond valued at $60 from a ring she was wearing. Diligent search was made before the stone was given up as lost. A week later the daughter, a school teacher, was at her room in Grandville correcting school papers. To ease her tired feet she removed her shoes. When one of them turned on its side she saw a sparkle. Picking up the shoe and examining the heel, she found that the missing diamond had become caught in one of the holes of the rubber heel.

News About Women In Europe

MOSCOW, Feb. 16 (AP) —Cerise-colored lips and artificially tanned complexions now are popular among fashionable Russian women.

They have become tired of the conventional red-rouged lips worn by American and French women and the bright raspberry hue is the result. The sunburned appearance is obtained through the use of brown pomades and powders.

This complexion however, has a drawback. It disappears overnight and the process has to be repeated each morning.

American tam o'shanters also are in vogue, having virtually displaced trimmed hats, turbans and toques. They are flashy in color, warm and cheap.

While Russian boots may be popular among women in Europe and America, they are not worn at all by the native women, who regard them as detracting from "feminity."

The Russian women, however, are not unappreciative of the American demand for boots. They are seeking the pointed-toe shoes of the American style. Thus far, the stores here have not been able to supply the demand for these shoes, despite the fact they cost twice as much as Russian-made footwear.

There is an acute scarcity of women in the new Turcoman Soviet Socialist republic. The men outnumber the women nearly two to one, and in consequence, the price of women and girls taken in marriage has increased from $300 to $1,000.

Where real currency is not available, the parents of a girl of marriage age accepts camels. Girls ranging from ten to sixteen years old cost from five to fifty camels, depending upon the means of the prospective bridegroom and his family.

In this primitive, backward country, camels form the principal medium of currency. A Turcoman with 1,000 camels is considered wealthy, while one with 5,000 is looked upon as a millionaire.

In a special session of Third District court on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Judge Oliver H. Williams, held his first trial of a case since his elevation to the bench, when he sentenced John Maloney, 46, of no permanent address to the Rhode Island State workhouse for six months on a vagrancy complaint. The defendant, a woolen spinner, unmarried, was arraigned by Deputy Chief of Police William L. Kay of Hopkinton, who brought him to Westerly on Monday night and lodged him in the Westerly lockup. The accused was charged while under the influence of liquor with asking Mrs. Grace L. Main, postmistress of Wyoming, for money to buy his supper.

Postmistress Main was the first witness and told the court that on Monday evening at 6:45 o'clock came to the post office and asked for money, and that she knew from his breath and actions that he had been drinking.

In his own defense Maloney said that he came to Norwich from Worcester, Mass., where he had gone in search of work about Christmas. Arriving in Norwich he had $7 or $8 and when he left there by auto for Westerly had only 30c. He said that he was able bodied and not afraid to work and had been under arrest three times before.

The bi-monthly session of the Westerly probate court was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Probate Judge Edward M. Burke on the bench.

LOOK for the silver lining in every P. A. smoke-cloud. Notice how the little old world takes on a rosier tint when you pick P. A. for a pal. For a fact, Men, Prince Albert holds options on jimmy-pipe joy in every land. It's got a half-nelson on pipe-pleasure, and no mistake.

There's no deep, dark secret about the why of all this . . . P. A. is great tobacco. Time-tested. Tongue-tested. Mild as a May morning, cool as a breeze off the water, P. A. can't tamper with your tongue or pester your palate. (The Prince Albert process cuts out bite and parch.)

When that cool, fragrant smoke percolates up the pipe-stem, troubles take to the tall timber. Pipe-peeves vanish in a P. A. smoke-screen. You're sitting on top of the world . . . and the view is simply grand. Just never was a tobacco like good old P. A.

Many a man who thought he never could smoke a pipe is now a loyal P. A. fan. You see, the tobacco makes all the difference in the world. Right now, head for the nearest shop where they hand out P. A. sunshine in tidy red tins. Get next to some really friendly tobacco.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

NEW LONDON HUSBAND BOUGHT RUM- NOW MUST REPORT TO CONSERVATOR

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 16—Rock Zekos, a freight handler, imbibed alcohol yesterday so that when he went to his home at the close of the day he was in bad humor. He didn't stay home, but spent the evening till 10:30, his wife said, continuing a spree. He quarrelled with his wife then and she told in the police court this morning that he struck her. Rock is the father of four children, a boy and three girls. Mrs. Zekos caused his arrest and told Judge Prince of her troubles this morning. Rock is a proper husband and father when he abstains from alcoholic beverages, but he started out yesterday, paying fifty cents a drink, he admitted. He said he felt a cold coming on and he resorted to the alcohol as a preventive. Rock cannot talk without grinning and he was natural while he related what happened yesterday, denying that he struck his wife. The court decided that if Rock's money went chiefly into his family a good deal of the trouble would be eliminated. So an arrangement by which that would be done was effected. Rock will report to the probation officer in the future and the latter will be a sort of conservator over him. The earnings of Zekos are more than $20 a week, or a thousand a year; so with the earnings of his wife, when she is employed at a hotel, the family should be able to get along pretty well.

HATLESS ALL WINTER, HAVE AVOIDED COLDS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 16—A few New London men have gone through the winter thus far without wearing hats. That would have been an act regarded as menacing to health a few years ago, but the few who adopted that custom declare that they have been without colds thus far and they say they anticipate being thus favored during the remainder of the winter. Whether the custom is advantageous for the hair is not actually known, but that result is anticipated.

FOUR METHODIST WORKERS WERE OVERCOME BY GAS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 16—Four women, members of the Methodist Episcopal church, corner of Huntington and Broad streets, suffered monoxide carbon poisoning last night, one of them seriously, when overcome in the kitchen of the church. The most seriously affected is Mrs. Charles M. Smalley, 174 Garfield avenue, but today she was reported as being out of danger.

The others are Mrs. Alfred Linkletter, 37 Georgiana street; Mrs. George H. Eastland, Norwood avenue, and Mrs. Alfred Huntley, of Norwood avenue.

The women, together with about a dozen others were at the church late yesterday afternoon preparing a supper to be served during the evening. Two large gas stoves in the kitchen were used, all the windows in the place were closed and in the course of the preparation of the food the four members were discovered to be swooning. Mrs. Smalley later became unconscious. A hurry call for physicians was sent out, but considerable difficulty was experienced in obtaining medical aid. Finally Dr. Ross Black was located and responded to the call. When the physician reached the church, all four women were unconscious, but those other than Mrs. Smalley were quickly revived and sent to their respective homes, where this afternoon it was stated that they were practically in normal health.

City Manager Holt is to make an investigation of the sewer needs of that section of the city about Connecticut college, but it is doubtful whether he will find any situation that will be new to him. The Perry Ice company expects to get another cutting of ice from the lake in Cohansie and will begin cutting tomorrow morning. The company has housed a big crop thus far this season, but proposes to put all the ice that can be obtained under cover, while the getting is good.

When the ice is off the highways in this city, a condition of the roads will be disclosed, in the opinion of those who use the highways, that will involve a great deal of labor to make the roads safe. This is especially true on the streets that are much traveled and where there is teaming and a great deal of automobile travel. Even the macadamized streets are badly worn; frost has got into the surfacing and broken it up. The sort of dressing known as "cold patch" which was placed over the macadam on lower Bank street at Truman street and along a portion of Town Hill has worn surprisingly well, but on Montauk avenue the roadway is in very bad shape. There are deep holes in it and the macadam has broken in spots so that the effect of the winter is visible more than it has been in many years. All the lateral streets are badly worn and washed and a considerable sum of money must be expended upon them to make them passably good.

He furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000 in Louis Eifenbein for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. Cadrello was arrested following the statements of two young girls, one married, who advanced the testimony that he had rented his car for the purposes of immorality. The married girl, is but 19 and her husband is stationed at the submarine base. A pilgrimage to the Broadway theater any afternoon or evening starting tomorrow will prove a lucrative investment from both an entertainment angle and an educational point. Because the management has secured, what this reviewer believes to be one of the most unusual films shown in this city in some time. Here we see again the two stars Clara Bow and Donald Keith, who caused The Plastic Age, recently shown in this city, to be the sensational hit that it was. Clara Bow, sensational star, whose rise to the dazzling heights of stardom during the past year, is the wonder of the motion picture industry plays the principal role—that of the girl. Supporting her is Donald Keith, whose portrayal of the minister, is one of the finest character interpretations seen this year. Others are Raymond McKee, as the hunchback Hallam Cooley as a villain, Winter Hall and Charles Mailes complete a fine cast.

A mid-winter joy-fest with Keith-Albee vaudeville will be the stage attraction. Altogether there are five acts each an entirely different and individual hit.

Breed Theater

Flappers who yearn for Paris, with its tinsel, gaiety and romance, and sigh for a glimpse of the Montmartre, a visit to its strange cafes and perhaps the sight of a real Apache or a real Apache dance—here's your chance. cafes and the Apaches will all lie before on a personally conducted tour of it all—and the tinsel, the glitter, the cafes and the Apaches will all lie before you. Also—she'll teach you a lesson—and convince you that under all the tinsel and all the glitter there is a something else in Paris;—a bitter tragedy, perhaps—but the same tragedy that lurks in all our cities from London or New York down to Paducah.

It's all to be found in the new Mae Murray picture, "The Masked Bride," now playing at the Breed theatre. It's a story of glitter and gaiety—of a Paris dancer in wonderful costumes and wonderful adventures—that narrow down into the real truth—that too often heartaches, danger and dread lie under the masks of artificial happiness.

The new picture, one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's big features of the year, shows Miss Murray as the dancer—in wonderful dances, gorgeous costumes, and dazzling settings;—in the famous Casa Diablo cafe of Paris, the strange "Coachmen's Inn," resorts of Apaches and underworld denizens—and other spots reproduced exactly as they exist.

How she emerges from the gay trappings to fight for the love of her husband forms a poignant drama that runs through the spectacular dances, revels and other adventures.

But Oh! The gowns! Latest advance modes from Paris—wonderful creations that take one's breath away and almost make one forget the drama they embellish.

Conn. College Concert

Jacques Thibaud, unquestionably France's greatest violinist and probably her greatest living musician, is announced to give a recital at Bulkeley auditorium in New London Tuesday night, Feb. 23, under the auspices of Connecticut college, a fact which will cause local music lovers to rejoice.

Thibaud was born in Bordeaux in 1889. He studied first under his father and then at the Paris conservatoire where, under Marsick, he gained a premier prix. To supplement his modest means, he played at the cafe Rouge where he was heard by Edouard Colonne. This famous conductor promptly offered the young violinist an orchestra position and soon there came an unexpected chance to appear as soloist. So popular did Thibaud become that he played no less than 54 times at the Colonne concerts in a single season.

His fame in Paris established, the violinist visited other continental cities and finally America, his first tour in 1903 winning him prompt recognition. Since then his standing throughout the music-loving world has been steadily enhanced and today he is accorded a place among the foremost of contemporaneous violinist. His second visit to this country was in 1913-1914 and his playing made a deeper impression than ever. A third tour booked the following season, in response to an overwhelming demand, was delayed by the outbreak of the war. His military duties were of a hazardous character and he acquitted himself with credit.

It is said that in India the widow burns herself for her husband. The American widow takes another and spoils him.

A GLIMPSE OF INTIMATE LIFE OF GOV. FERGUSON

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 1 (AP)—The homely cackle of the chickens yard or the quiet of a rose garden give Miriam A. Ferguson surcease from the turmoil which sometimes swirls about the governor's chair.

A glimpse of the intimate life of the woman governor was caught when, at the height of the politico-highway controversy, she slipped away to trim her rose bushes, buy clothes in Temple, her home town, and incidentally pay her poll tax.

Despite the fairy stories about Mrs. Ferguson, homely and beautiful, big and little, ignorant and intelligent, here are some actual facts about her:

She feeds her chicks.
Eats 'poor man's bread" and turnip greens.
Wears low-heeled shoes.
Drives her automobile.
Does not wear bobbed hair.
Spreads on a little rouge.
Does not care for society.
Does not smoke.

Occasionally tells Jim, her husband, where to head in.

Does not permit Jim to keep a sow in the mansion yard.

Mrs. Ferguson does not put on high-toned airs. She dresses neatly. Last summer she wore light organdie dresses of mild shades. This fall and winter her gowns run to dark colors, blue and black satin. She prefers black or tan shoes, according to the dress she is wearing.

The governor's hair is black streaked with gray, and is worn in a coil around her head.

Her usual office hours are from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. She and her husband frequently occupy opposite sides of a flat top desk, dividing the work between them. Sometimes Mr. Ferguson, the former governor, uses an ante room next to the executive office for consulting visitors, while his wife sits within the executive office proper interviewing callers.

Mrs. Ferguson has been known to thumb the flat top desk with her womanly fist and inform Jim just who is governor.

She takes time from work to chat with women secretaries in the office about everyday things women are interested in.

On the second floor of the capitol is a small room reached from the governor's office by a private iron stairway, where the governor may disappear for rest or study.

Mrs. Ferguson's chief interest is Jim Ferguson, and when she does her kitchen apron to "fix something special for Jim," it generally means one of those Texas dishes, not the least of which the poor man's corn bread made without milk or eggs.

She cares little for social life and most of her entertaining is done when "folks just drop in." The state pays her $4,000 a year salary, one of the smallest of governor's salaries in the Union, and allows her $1,000 a year expenses for the mansion, including maintenance of the grounds, ice, fuel and light.

MOVIES NOW MAKE OWN COB WEBS AND DRIPPING ICICLES

NEW YORK, Jan. 1 (AP)—Motion pictures, like necessity, have become the mothers of invention.

There was a time, and not so long ago, when if a picture called for cobwebs and icicles it was necessary to find a diligent spider and wait for freezing weather. But no more.

While Dancing Mothers was being filmed here, Clara Bow saw four men tapping pieces of wood together and passing them slowly past corners, beams and other protruding things of a set.

"What are you doing?" she asked.

"Draping cobwebs," came the reply, and thinking it all a joke she walked away.

But after two hours' work, cobwebs were draped profusely over the set. A mixture of glue, glycerine and powdered chalk between two boards provided the webs, as the boards were rubbed together and then separated suddenly.

Buckets of paraffin wax and heat will manufacture icicles and skating rinks. With a ladle, the "prop" men drip the melted paraffin about the sets and as it cools the icicles appear. A little whiting is added when the paraffin is poured on the floor to form skating rinks.

Much of the snow seen in movies is flaked wheat, which could be eaten if properly prepared.

Some men spend half their time in making promises and the other half in making excuses.

You Can Lose Several Pounds a Week!
Safely, Easily—with SAN-GRI-NA

"SAN-GRI-NA is one of the most wonderful discoveries ever made, because while it reduces you, at the same time it greatly improves your health and vitality". People who have taken SAN-GRI-NA and reduced state that most of their ills disappeared after they had followed the treatment only a few days.

SAN-GRI-NA is the latest way of reducing—the most sensible and the safest. You should not use remedies which have been on the market for years to take off your excess fat. Most of these remedies have never changed their formula and they do not contain the latest ingredients discovered by scientists to safely remove unhealthy, flabby FAT. SAN-GRI-NA is the most up-to-date formula science has to offer. It has been approved by physicians nurses, hundreds of grateful patients and it is advised and recommended by Dr. Rudolph, former health commissioner as positively effective and absolutely harmless.

Most cases of reducing vary from three to five pounds a week. There is nothing secret about SAN-GRI-NA—nothing magic—nothing done over night, but a steady loss of FAT and a steady gain in health. Ask some people you know who have reduced, what they took. The answer will invariably be SAN-GRI-NA!

Sold at all reliable drug stores or you can send direct to The Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C.

"I lost 56 pounds with SAN-GRI-NA," says Miss Unkrich of Philadelphia. "My own friends do not recognize me."

SAN-GRI-NA is guaranteed absolutely harmless, and positive to reduce you, or money refunded.

POETRY

Lent

For days that should teach us repent
God spares us again and again
Yet often unheeding, unearing,
His mercy is offered in vain.

For hesitant, faltering, unwilling,
Too often are we to confess;
Yet Christ has pledged all to absolve us
His mission from God is to bless.

And all who are suffering and sinning
His guiding arm still shall sustain,
Till purified through His forgiveness
He findeth His children again.

Think now of his loving acceptance
While following him through the fast,
And deeply repenting his anguish
Turn ye and receive him at last.
—Providence Journal.

A Contention in Rhyme

Alas, I think such criss-cross things,
So varied are my feelings,
My fancy has such roving wings
And harvests such revealings,
I'm half amused, and half in woe:—
Yet smile? There's cause for sorrow;
Ah lackaday, I never know
The man I'll be tomorrow.

I try to keep my vision wide,
Yet, when my brain is busy
I cannot see on every side—
The bigness makes me dizzy.
Could man but circle with his thought
Both small things and sublime!—
But though—how like a string 'tis wrought:
One package at a time.

Life, forsooth, I don't bewail,
Each day's with interest quite full;
No novelist could spin a tale
More charming, or delightful;
There is so much to love and sing
The world is filled with glee—
My conscience is the only thing
That interferes with me.

The object that I most desire
I've sought with mental dragnet
In vain. I wish I could acquire
Some sort of moral magnet
Always to point with wisdom's ray
The path I should pursue!
'Tis most embarrassing each day
To have some thing to rue.

And yet, sweet solace of I take—
The query's sinful, may be—
Did God expect of me to make
Perfection when a baby?
And when thought grows too sadly deep
My sorrow I discard;
The Shepherd knows the silly sheep,
And He'll not be too hard.

The motorist had been fined and his right to drive suspended for a year for reckless driving.

"On the ground that to sentence a man to become a pedestrian is cruel and unusual punishment," replied the lawyer.—Youth's Companion.

The Bible has been published in 23 dialects of English.

Sugar cane can now be harvested by a motorized machine that does the work of 100 men.

The legal length of a beard in India during the time of Mahomet was fixed at seven to eight inches.

A process for rolling metal foils so thin that they are transparent yet retain their elasticity has been invented by a German scientist.

With the new type of diving apparatus, weighing half a ton, a man can stay under water for four hours and reach the depth of 550 feet.

L. J. Cobus, of Milwaukee, Wis., is the inventor of a device to keep a motorist's hands warm in cold weather. The heater is in the steering post and wheel, and the warmth is radiated from the exhaust pipe.

At Yonkers, N. Y., Edward Samara was accused of trespassing on his neighbor's property by stringing a radio wire through the air above the complainant's house, although the wire did not in any way come in contact with the premises. The judge ruled that Samara must take down the wire unless the complainant agreed to permit him to keep it up.

Mrs. Burton E. Moore's automobile, having been crippled for several days, she left her machine at a Winsted (Conn.) garage with instructions to locate the cause of the trouble. The mechanic found the difficulty in the intake manifold, between the carburetor and the engine, where were the shells of a dozen acorns which squirrels had abandoned after eating the nuts.

A radio apparatus, transmitter and receiver, weighing 57 pounds, has been designed for airplanes. The wave range of the outfit is from 75 to 140 meters and its communication range approximately five miles, sufficient to enable all units of planes in formation and squadrons to keep in perfect liaison. A fixed aerial is fitted around the fuselage of the plane.

At Minden, Neb., Marie Jacobson was puzzled to find his pony eating grain when he went into the barn in the morning, knowing that no one had fed the animal. He watched one day and saw the pony reach across the partition between himself and the next horse and bite him. This caused the horse to snap at him and drop a mouthful of grain into the pony's box. The pony would then eat that grain and repeat the process.

The destruction of Yokohama by the 1923 earthquake drove many foreigners from that port. There were only a few hundred left after the catastrophe. The progress of construction work, however, caused many to return and at the end of October, 1925, it was estimated there were more than 3,500 foreigners living in Yokohama. This is less than one-half of the number who resided there at the time of the earthquake.

POULTRY
PAN-A-CE-A
Puts hens in laying trim

You can feed as you will, care for as you may, but until your flock is in trim to lay, eggs will be scarce.

Just add Poultry Pan-a-ce-a with every 50 pounds of mash or one tablespoonful to every 20 hens once a day.

Then watch the change come over your flock, see the combs and wattles begin to turn red. Listen to the song, scratch and cackle.

That's a sign of getting ready for business.

Remember, you buy Pan-a-ce-a like this: for 100 hens, the 12-pound package; 60 hens, the 5-pound package; 200 hens, the 25-pound pail; 500 hens, the 100-pound drum.

You feed that package, all of it, on the more-eggs-or-no-pay way.

For Lice—Use Dr. Hess Louse Killer.

For Roup—Use Dr. Hess Roup Tablets.

STOCK PRICES FLUCTUATED

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—(AP)—Stock prices made irregular recovery from recent weakness in today's market. The rally, which was most effective in high priced industrials, ran from one to six points in a long list of issues, but closing quotations also disclosed a number of net declines ranging from fractions to nearly 4 points. Trading turned dull on the rally, indicating that opposing speculative forces were inclined to give the market a breathing spell before resuming operations on a large scale.

While the drastic reaction on Saturday and Monday is believed to have materially improved the market's technical condition, several commission houses continued to recommend a waiting attitude on the part of their customers. Banks called about $15,000,000 in loans during the day, but it did not influence the call money rate, which held steady at 4 3-4 per cent., the renewal figure. Considerable interest was manifested in the award of the $7,500,000 New York City 4 1-4 per cent. bond and corporate stock issue to a syndicate headed by the National City company for 101.5089 or a premium of $794,175.

Unlike most of the recent 1925 earnings statements, the annual report of the Baldwin Locomotive company, showing less than $1.00 a share earned on the preferred stock, was a distinct disappointment. The stock broke 4 1-4 points to 111, and then rallied feebly. American Locomotive sagged a point to 107 1-2, but most of the other equipments did better. American Brake Shoe and Foundry moving up over 2 points to 173 1-4 and Pullman closing 1 1-2 points higher at 165. U. S. Steel common closed 1-4 lower at 128 3-4 after selling as high as 129 1-8.

Short covering accelerated the advance in some of the so-called "rich men's stocks." General Electric soared over 10 points to 378 7-8, but forfeited about half of the day's gain.

American Can, California Packing, National Dairy Products, South Porto Rican Sugar, Steward-Warner Speedometer and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe all showed net gains of 3 points or more.

Devoe and Reynolds, which was hammered down over 50 points in two days, scored an extreme gain of 6 3-4 points at 52 3-4, but later fell back to 49 1-8. Marine common and preferred continued their advance touching new peak prices at 12 and 46 3-8 respectively, and closing around the top.

Bear traders, who have been industrially searching out weak spots, launched a selling attack against the Remington Typewriter, which toppled to 105 and then rallied to 109 where it was off 4 3-4 on the day. Marked heaviness was also shown by Childs Company, General Gas and Electric, Ingersoll Rand, International Business Machine, International Match preferred, Liggett and Meyers B, McCrory B and F. G. Shattuck, all off 3 points or more.

Rails displayed a firmer undertone with buying orders distributed among both investment and speculative issues.

Commodity markets were irregular. The renewal of selling pressure against wheat futures, which fell off 1 1-4 to 3 cents a bushel, followed a decline in the market at Liverpool, where it was reported that flour mills were shutting down. Cotton declined 6 to 9 points in quiet trading. Raw sugar dropped 1-32 of a cent a pound and coffee prices fluctuated with narrow and irregular limits.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Speculative interest in the irregular foreign exchange market was divided between the further rally in Japanese yen which touched 45 3-4 cents, the highest price in years, and the further weakness in French francs which suggest 4 points to 3.63 cents, a new low level for the year. Demand sterling held steady just under $4.86. The Scandinavian exchanges encountered heavy profit taking. Norwegian krone dipping 21 points to 20.82 cents and Danish krone 18 points to 27.82 cents.

A group of local men interested in hunting, trapping and in wild life in general were recently discussing the fur bearing animals of this section of New England and remarking how plentiful muskrat and mink appeared to be this year. But for some time no one has seen an otter in the streams about this village. Several years ago, one extra large animal of this species made its home on the eastern bank of Lisbon pond. It was often seen from the opposite side of the pond, but no one could get within gunshot of it, nor lure it into a trap. Another otter was seen by a party of duckhunters on one of their excursions up the Quinebaug near Reed's Point, a few years ago. The animal was on a large rock in the stream and at the approach of the hunters, slid into the water and was seen no more.

The otter is a slender, dusky brown animal from 4 to 5 feet in length, frequenting streams and lakes which contain a good supply of fish. Otters are too short legged to move easily on land, but are remarkable for the admirable grace, agility and swiftness in the water. Although so poorly adapted to land travel, they are restless animals, constantly moving up and down the stream in which they live and often crossing from one stream to another. It is said that in Northern New England they travel surprising distances across snow-clad country, following the banks of streams or passing between them, searching for an entrance to water, whether through ice or open rapids.

Although never very abundant, otters are so shy and solitary in their habits that they have managed to retain almost all their original range. A sight of the animals themselves is rare. Their dens are usually in the banks of streams or lakes above or below the surface of the water, under the roots of large trees, or below rocky ledges. They usually have two to five young, which remain with the mother until nearly full grown.

While close relatives of the weasel, they are much more intelligent, have a gentler disposition and are said to make playful and interesting pets. Their fur is highly prized and always brings a good price in the market. As a result they have been persistently hunted and trapped since our pioneer days. That the species should continue to exist, though in much diminished numbers throughout its original range, is a striking evidence of its retiring habits and mental acuteness.

The lenten regulations as outlined by Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, were read Sunday, at the masses at the Sacred Heart church.

The Sacred Heart Dramatic club have begun work on their annual play. The play selected this year is a three act comedy, entitled "Light-house Nan."

The Taftville fire department used 70 gallons of chemical to extinguish the blaze.

Potch of Franklin, N. H. It is claimed that the lessors have not paid the rent for six months up to Feb. 28, 1926, that they removed from the store the fixtures which they contained for the clothing business, that they installed the fixtures for a candy store and restaurant and have since removed these, so that they have depreciated the value of the property over $5,000.

Archbishop Cieplak has spent several weeks recently visiting Polish parishes throughout the eastern part of the United States. On Friday he was stricken ill.

He was one of fifteen Catholic clergymen condemned to death by a Bolshevist court, only one of whom was executed, Mgr. Budkiewcz. Later he was exiled from Russia by the Bolshevists. Before coming to this country he was the personal guest of Pope Pius.

The Archbishop was expected to address Norwich Poles, coming as the guest of Rev. S. A. Ickek, but his engagements crowded at the last so that he could not spare the time for a visit to Eastern Connecticut.

APPEALS FINE FOR NOT KEEPING THEATRE WARM

Found guilty of not providing adequate heat for the Strand Theatre building, Dr. N. B. Lewis of this city was fined $25 and costs by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Tuesday morning. Dr. Lewis appealed and furnished a bond of $200. The case is the first of its kind to be tried in this locality and is the result of a complaint made by Abraham Davidson, who leased the strand theatre building from Dr. Lewis.

The charge against Dr. Lewis is failure to provide adequate heat for the Strand theatre on Sunday, Feb. 7th. The statute on which the action is brought requires the heat shall be furnished to at least 68 degrees. There was a large attendance at the hearing.

It was testified by James P. Sheridan that he was at the Strand theatre Sunday, Feb. 7th and sat through the show with his overcoat on. There were about 400 people in the theatre. He did not notice whether others wore overcoats or not during the show. Witness said the temperature was not 68 degrees. He could not tell how low it was.

Another witness, Charles D. Grove said that on Sunday, Feb. 7th, he sat through the show with his hat and coat on. He said the temperature was not 60 degrees. City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins asked the witness if it was cold on other nights. Objection was raised by counsel for the accused, Edmund W. Perkins and Edward G. McKay, but the question was allowed by Judge Libby. Witness stated that on the Sunday previous the temperature was about 40 and that there was no steam in the pipes.

Cornelius King testified that on Sunday, Feb. 7th, the temperature was less than 68 degrees and that he sat there with his hat and coat on. He saw others with hats and coats.

The complainant, Mr. Davidson, lessee of the theatre testified to operating the theatre for six years. He has a ten year lease. He runs the theatre only on Sunday evenings. Mr. Davidson stated that on Feb. 7th he was in the theatre at 3.15 o'clock and that the temperature was only 58 degrees. He testified that he had often written and asked Dr. Lewis for heat and that on the night of Feb. 7 the witness complained to the prosecutor and to Dr. Lewis. On cross examination the witness stated that the thermometer is located from the entrance to the theatre about four or five feet. At 8.15 when the witness arrived he told the manager to get the names of those in attendance who were cold. About 9 o'clock the next morning on Feb. 7, he complained to Dr. Lewis about the heat. The witness never went down stairs to see whether the doctor had coal or not. The witness suggested to Dr. Lewis that the heater be started at 1 o'clock. The witness was not at the theatre between 5 and 6 o'clock on the afternoon of Feb. 7 so he could not tell whether the windows were open or not.

The theatre manager, Max Levine, testified that he was in the theatre at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Feb. 7. At 5.45 the theatre was still cold and the thermometer was only 55. He asked the fireman about heat and the fireman said he would do the best he could. On Feb. 7 there were about 500 present at the theatre. Dr. Lewis came to the boiler room about 7.55 o'clock. He then told Dr. Lewis about the heat. Mr. Davidson opens the windows each Sunday morning to air out the theatre, stated the witness.

Officer Daniel O'Neil testified to being on duty at the theatre and about 9 o'clock in the evening he looked at the thermometer and it registered 60 degrees.

Charles Bowker, Edward Wright, Otis Fairbanks and Michael Foster all testified to the theatre being cold.

The defendant, Dr. Lewis, called to the stand, testified that he went to the theatre about 8 o'clock in the evening of Feb. 7th to see the janitor. Both fires were running. When the witness arrived Max Levine was in the boiler room.

He went up to the theatre with Levine and found the steam pipes hot. The thermometer is located in the coldest place in the theatre, being in the door casing and not seven or eight feet from the door. Mr. Levine stated to the witness that the thermometer was less than 60. Dr. Lewis said that he had received one complaint by telephone and one by letter. When he went to the fireman about the telephone complaint, the fireman said that the windows and doors had been open blowing out all of the steam. The witness had given the fireman orders to put steam on in the theatre in the morning and to keep it on. The steam equipment heats several stores, rooms, etc.

The theatre fireman, Matthew Brown, was called to the stand. He said that on Feb. 7th there was about 12 tons of coal on hand. He was in the theatre three times Feb. 7th. At 1 o'clock the temperature registered 45. At 5.30 o'clock it had reached 62.

Steam was still in the pipes when Mr. Levine came to the boiler room about 5 o'clock and said there was no steam on. There was then three pounds pressure of steam showing on the gauge. Dr. Lewis has told me to give the heat to the theatre as best I could and to start it no later than 12 o'clock.

Fred H. Roath, plumber, testified that the heater was in good condition Feb. 7th. Defendant then rested.

Judge Libby stated that there was apparently no attempt upon the part of the defendant to show that the temperature ever registered 68 degrees. A failure week after week becomes willful. A fine of $25 and costs was imposed and an appeal was taken, the bond being fixed at $200.

WAS LARGE LAND OWNER IN GALES FERRY SECTION

Decatur farm, this being a part of the original grant made to Robert Allyn, the first settler there about the year 1651. It was here that much of his time was spent during the later active years of his life in improving his property, and where he delighted in entertaining his friends, many picnic parties in former years having enjoyed his hospitality and the parks which he laid out in beautifying his grounds. NORWICH TOWN

"The Human Side of Jesus," was the theme of the Sunday morning sermon, at the First Congregational church by the pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey who chose for his text, Mark 10:47 to 49. And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me. And many charged him that he should hold his peace; but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David have mercy on me. And Jesus stood still and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, be of good comfort, rise; He calleth thee.

The first half of the Sunday school period was devoted to a Lincoln day programme, prepared by the American Missionary association, entitled "Lincoln and You". The programme which was successfully carried out by a company of thirteen young women opened with the singing of the first stanza of America.

The director, Miss Esther Durr, addressing the school said: "America today, even more than in Lincoln's time, is the land of all nations. Some of our classes will help us understand how the races make up the world family of mankind from which America has sprung." Then nine of the girls, standing on the platform divided in two groups, six in one and three in the other, repeated the following: First group, "We represent the colored races of the world. More than two-thirds of the human family; one billion, one hundred and fifty million people." Second group, "We represent the white people of the world. Less than a third of the human family; five hundred and fifty million people." Each of the nine pupils had a chair on the platform which was to represent the nine tenths of the surface of the earth ruled by the white people. A single pupil, Miss Rose Durr, stated that her chair represented one-tenth of the surface of the earth under the full control of the people who were not white. At this point, the group of six pupils representing the colored races, all tried to occupy the single chair, while the group of three, who represented the white races, took the nine chairs and tried to sit on all of them.

After the director had said: "God must love the colored people, he made so many of them in the world; lots of them are in America," the pupils explained how the American family is divided between white and colored, black, red, brown and yellow. The single pupil stated that she represented the ninth person in America, as one out of every nine persons in America is colored. The other eight pupils on the platform at this time said: "We represent the white people in America." The many different kinds of Americans were represented by the following: The Spirit of Abraham Lincoln, Ruth Sterry; The White People in America, Dorothea Buckley; The Red Indians, Dorothy Waterman; The Negroes in America, Ruth Barber; The Japanese in America, Bessie Whaley; The Mexicans in America, Eleanor Smith; The Porto Ricans in America, Louise Avery; The Hawaiians in America, Louise Sterry; The Filipinos in America, Lucile Browning; The Chinese in America, Grace Wheeler; The Jews in America, Victoria St. Martin.

When the first pupil, The Spirit of Lincoln, asked of the other ten: "How did you all get here, my fellow Americans?" each in rotation replied with interesting answers as to why and for what they came to America. When asked how they liked America since they had become a part of the nation, all replied with enthusiasm, "We love America."

After many more interesting questions and answers pertaining to the programme, the participants saluted the flag.

The director said in closing: "Whenever you find injustice done you, you will know that it does not represent the true America of Abraham Lincoln and the Stars and Stripes. The true American wants you to have justice and liberty—a square deal and the same chances to make good as any other citizen—no matter what his color. The entire school then sang "America the Beautiful."

Dwight W. Avery explained that the American Missionary association represents us all and gives all a chance to crown America's good with brotherhood. "Let us show our good will and our desire to carry on what was really Lincoln's work," he said, "by contributing our gifts today to help give a better chance to white, black, red, brown and yellow boys and girls who are in our A. M. A., from sea to shining sea."

After the offering was taken and prayer in concert, the last stanza of America sung by the entire school concluded the programme.

Reginald Avery was leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service Sunday evening, when the topic was "What is Faith and What Does it do for us?" Hebrews 11:1-10.

At the First Methodist Episcopal church, Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich preached from Acts 8:34. And the eunuch answered Philip and said; I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

Preceding the morning worship, Rev. Mr. Aldrich conducted a brief religious service for patients at Norwich State Insane Hospital. His talk there was practically along the same lines as that used at the Methodist church and from the same text.

In the evening at the Methodist church, Rev. Mr. Aldrich spoke on "Three Things Necessary in Life—Vision, Venture and Victory." This was preceded by the Young People's Christian Endeavor service when the leader was Mrs. James B. Aldrich. The topic assigned was "What is Faith and What Does it do for us"? scripture references were in Hebrews.

This morning (Ash Wednesday) the beginning of Lent, mass will be at seven-thirty at the Sacred Heart church. At the close the penitential ashes will be blessed and distributed. Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament at this church in the evening will be followed also by the distribution of ashes.

GILPATRIC GIVES DETAILS OF EVENTS THAT LED TO HIS HUGE DEFALCATION

Questioned For Four Hours in Room in Putnam Bank That He Wrecked—The Former Banker Gave a Satisfactory Explanation of Claims Valued at $100,000 That Stand Against the Wrecked Bank—Failed to Explain What Became of $137,000 of Embezzled Funds—Peculations Began in 1918—Diverted $100,000 of State Liberty Bonds to Play With as He Saw Fit—Had Often Taken Securities From the Bank to Meet Pressing Demands.

PUTNAM, Feb. 17—(AP)—Seated in the directors' room of the Citizens National bank, formerly the First National bank, where as cashier he once wielded a far reaching financial power in this thriving community, and surrounded by former employes, G. Harold Gilpatric, former state treasurer, today told the story of his fall from that financial throne through huge embezzlements. The former cashier's manipulations of the bank's funds wrecked the institution, caused him to suffer blindness through an attempt at suicide and sent him to Atlanta prison for a fifteen year term.

A Dramatic Scene

It was the first time the former banker had stepped inside the door of the directors' room since the financial crash that for a time nearly crippled the business life of this city. He hesitated as, led by his guard, he crossed the threshold and then a smile lighted up his face, indicating to those around him that he was recalling memories of many eventful days in that room when he was looked upon as Putnam's foremost citizen. Advancing to the big table he passed his hand over it and then continued to his chair at the far side of the room remarking that he could visualize it all. He turned to chat with his former secretary who sat at his side and called by her first name a stenographer who sat opposite him. It was a scene that presented a dramatic background to the story that followed from the lips of the federal prisoner.

Story of Losing Battle

It was the second time that the former banker had told of his frenzied but losing battle against rapidly mounting debts that finally engulfed him. Again he described his policy of grasping at every financial straw that might be converted into ready cash to turn back the wave of dishonor and disgrace that was sweeping in on him; once more he repeated his declaration that he wished to make a clean breast of every dishonest act he had made, to take full responsibility for every penny lost to the bank and to his friends and to help his creditors in every way possible to recover some of their money that had been swept away through his embezzlements.

Questioned for Four Hours

Appearing today before George M. Coffin, receiver of the First National bank, Gilpatric was questioned for four hours regarding a maze of bonds, notes, mortgages, claims and trust funds the receiver is now trying to untangle. Admitting that his last few months in the bank were months of constant financial upheaval in his life with bonds and funds and loans transferred here and there and everywhere to keep the books in passable shape, Mr. Gilpatric displayed an amazing knowledge of the scores of deals he was connected with during the years preceding the bank crash. Yet at the conclusion of four hours of questioning Mr. Coffin had failed to receive from the former banker a satisfactory explanation of claims valued at nearly $100,000 that stand against the wrecked bank.

Clinton H. Scovell, of the firm of accountants engaged by the state of Connecticut to investigate Gilpatric's manipulations of state owned bonds also took part in the questioning today. The hearing was adjourned late this afternoon to be continued tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock.

Downfall Began in 1918

Gilpatric placed the time of the beginning of his downfall at the date of his nomination for state treasurer back in 1918. While there were irregularities before that date, he declared that when he took over the duties of state treasurer he could have stepped out of his position with every irregularity settled and covered, with everything clear and with the books of the bank in excellent shape. He characterized the Trumbull market deal in Hartford and his connections with John J. Burns of that city, as the two largest stumbling blocks that led him deeper into the financial tangle that finally overwhelmed him.

The former bank cashier stated emphatically that the state of Connecticut secured every bond purchased through his bank, but he admitted freely that he had manipulated these state purchases, often using the proceeds of one purchase to make delivery on a purchase previously made.

Transactions in Liberty Bonds

Describing these transactions by the state Gilpatric said that the $200,000 in Liberty bonds purchased for the teachers' retirement fund were delivered by a later purchase of $300,000 bonds for the sinking fund. He characterized the remaining $100,000 in bonds from these purchases as a fund "to play with as I saw fit." The final adjustment of the $100,000 in bonds and $30,000 undelivered bonds for the annuity fund was made from the bank.

The question of Liberty bonds played an important part in the day's proceedings and brought from Gilpatric the admission that his bank had no system whatever to care for securities of this nature. Liberty bonds were looked upon as so much currency and were given little more attention that a five dollar bill. No attempt was made to keep a record of the serial numbers of such bonds and rarely did a customer get back the same bonds he had deposited with the institution for safe keeping.

Methods of Raising Cash

Explaining one of his methods of raising ready cash, Gilpatric said that bonds on deposit at the bank were kept in envelopes and that he had often taken securities from these envelopes to meet pressing demands. He was trying to replace these bonds when the crash came.

Receiver Coffin said that claims filed and approved disclose that $283,000 of the bank's funds had been misapplied. There is still a discrepancy of $137,000 unaccounted for, the receiver continued.

The former banker could account for but a small portion of this sum. He said that he had attempted "to do a hundred and one things at the same time and had not done one properly." He mentioned $10,000 as having been taken by him as a loss in the sale of municipal and city bonds which had been deposited in Washington as security for postal savings; the payment of interest on Liberty bonds took a considerable amount and several losses suffered by the bank during the past ten years and not been written off.

Gilpatric recalled that $15,000 in bonds he had pledged as security were the property of the Putnam Foundry Machine company, of which he was treasurer. He later made these good to the company by crediting that amount to the company's account at the time of a disposal of preferred stock.

Reticent About Three $10,000 Bonds

Gilpatric could give no information as to what happened to three $10,000 bonds purchased on December 16, 1920, for the Putnam Cemetery association, but before delivery the order for which was changed to the state of Connecticut and paid for by the state.

Everything possible was done by Receiver Coffin to make Gilpatric's ordeal as pleasant as possible. The former bank cashier and the receiver sat side by side at the long table. "There were no attorneys present and Gilpatric was told several times by Mr. Coffin that no traps were being laid, that Gilpatric could take as much time as he wished to think and had the privilege of asking as many questions as he desired.

ACTIVITY RENEWED BY GERALD CHAPMAN'S COUNSEL

HARTFORD, Feb. 17—(AP)—The probability that plans for the continuance of the legal fight to save Gerald Chapman from the gallows are at present being made, should the bandit lose his appeal to the United States supreme court, were foreshadowed today by renewed activity of two of his lawyers, Charles W. Murphy, of Danbury, and Joseph M. Freedman, of Hartford.

Mr. Murphy visited him at the state prison today with a copy of the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals denying his petition for a writ of habeas corpus which, if granted, would permit Chapman to spend 25 years in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., before he was hanged at Wethersfield for the murder of a New Britain policeman.

Mr. Freedman followed Mr. Murphy's visit with the announcement that he would call on Chapman tomorrow for a "secret purpose." Questioned, he declined to disclose the nature of the purpose.

HEROISM OF BOOTLEGGER ACKNOWLEDGED BY FRIENDS

BIDDEFORD, Me., Feb. 17—(AP)—The heroism of Joseph Labbe, coastguardsman, has atoned for anything that Joseph Labbe may have done in his previous career as private citizen, his fellow townsmen have decided. A movement to obtain for him a hero medal for his work in saving a shipwrecked coastguard crew off Narragansett pier last Thursday was in full swing despite the fact that the man earlier in the day was convicted in police court on an old charge of bootlegging.

Several months ago, Labbe left his Biddeford home to escape arrest for bootlegging. In a great blizzard last Thursday Labbe, now in the coastguard service, walked barefoot 12 hours through snowdrifts to bring help to the crew of the coastguard boat C-126, wrecked on the Rhode Island coast. The lives of five men depended on his struggle, and he won.

TO SEEK LAND FOR FLYING BASE NORTH OF ALASKA

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—A race with the air squadrons of Bolshevik Russia to dial mland which might be used as a military flying base north of Alaska or Siberia probably will be the result of the polar flying expedition which he will command, Lieut. Leigh Wade, round-the-world army flyer, told the Associated Press today.

"It is the firm opinion of every man of our party," Lieut. Wade said, "that the bolsheviks plan to beat us to it in finding the continent which we feel assured lies in the uncharted seas above Alaska. While we have no direct evidence of this, there is so much circumstantial evidence that we are planning our trip definitely with the idea of getting there ahead of the bolsheviks if we can.

"When one stops to think, that a military flying base could be established in the Arctic basin within a day's flying of the most important cities of the northern hemisphere, the menace of a bolshevik base is clear enough."

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—Four robbers held up the jewelry store of J. Brill, in East Broadway this afternoon and escaped in an automobile with $75,000 worth of diamonds and other jewels.

A woman passerby defied the threats of the robbers and took the number of the automobile as they sped away. As she wrote down the number, one of the robbers, standing on the running board of the automobile and brandishing his pistol, said to her: "Get inside if you don't want to get plugged."

The woman, who refused to make known her name, ignored the robber's command and before the automobile passed out of sight she hurried into a store and notified the police.

The robbers looted the jewelry store safe and showcases in almost record time. The burglar alarm on the front door was turned on as they were leaving but they had fled from the district when police had arrived.

Major Arnold will "be sent to another station" while Major Dargue will be left, so far as is known, to carry on at his present post as chief of the war plans division of the air service.

Countess Cathcart Excluded From U. S.

Order Issued by Labor Department, Under the Immigration Law.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The Countess of Cathcart was ordered excluded from the United States today by the labor department.

The announcement of the department's ruling said that the exclusion of the countess was mandatory under the immigration law.

The statement announcing the action said:

"The department of labor has affirmed, on appeal, the exclusion decision of the Ellis Island board of special inquiry in the case of Vera E. Cathcart.

"This action is based on that part of section three of the immigration act of February 20, 1917, known as the general immigration law, which provides in part as follows:

"That the following classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States: * * * Persons who have been convicted of or admit having committed a felony or other crime or disdemeanor involving moral turpitude.'

"The alien admitted the commission of such an offense, and that being the case, the exclusion is mandatory under the practice of the department, which has prevailed since 1907, when the above provision was added to the general immigration law.

"During the past 19 years, considerable numbers of aliens have been excluded under this provision for the admission of the same offense as in the instant case. Prior to the enactment of the immigration law of 1924, the government was obliged to sustain the burden of proof in cases of this nature, but since the act referred to became effective, the burden of proof has been placed on the alien applicant for admission, and in this respect, the alien did not produce any evidence to sustain her right to enter.

"It should be explained in considering immigration cases on appeals from boards of special inquiry at ports of arrival that the secretary of labor is bound to consider the question involved solely on the evidence submitted before such board and cannot exercise discretion. He can, and in this case has, considered legal arguments based on the law and the record, but he could not consider the extraneous influences from many sources urged for or against the admission of alien."

HEROIC AMERICAN SEAMEN BOOST U. S. MERCHANT MARINE

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—American seamen, by their courageous rescues of foreign seamen from sinking ships during the past three months have done more to build up trade for the American merchant marine than the United States government with all its millions of dollars of resources, the officers and men of the steamship President Roosevelt were told today.

J. Barstow Smull, chairman of the local Chamber of Commerce committee on harbor and shipping, speaking at a luncheon in honor of Captain George Fried and the crew of the Roosevelt, said that in the last three months inland freight from London carried by American ships, has increased 55 per cent. This was due, he said, to the faith in American seamen which had been installed in foreign nations by the heroic rescues by American seamen in recent months.

Following the luncheon they were guests of honor at a musical comedy matinee and tonight they attended the regular performance at the Hippodrome, as guests of the theatre.

26 BODIES RECOVERED FROM DEBRIS OF AN AVALANCHE

Snow Slide Occurred at Sap Gulch, Near Bingham, Utah—Thirty Persons Have Been Taken Out Alive, 15 of Them Injured—A Small Church and Twenty Miners' Camps Were Burried or Swept Away—Men, Women and Children Were Caught Unaware—Moving Mass Carried Trees and Rocks With It Into a Narrow Canyon—Rescue Parties Are at Work.

BINGHAM, Utah, Feb. 17—(AP)—An avalanche of snow and debris that swept down the steep mountainside in Sap Gulch, near here, this morning resulted in 26 known deaths, with the possibility of the toll being swelled considerably with the estimate buried. In addition to the 26 bodies removed during the day, 30 persons were taken out alive, 15 of them injured.

As the mass of snow, accumulated from the heaviest snow storm of the winter, let loose on the mountainside above the gulch, in which are located the Utah-Delaware and Uta Apex mines, it swept trees and rocks with it and filled the narrow canyon which is only several hundred feet long.

Men, women and children were caught without warning when the avalanche struck the McDonald boarding house and a smaller one nearby conducted by a Mrs. Rimby. A small church and about 20 miners' cabins, lining both sides of the gulch, were buried or swept away. The boarding house and cabins, heated with stoves, caught fire as they were crushed in the snowslide. Many of the victims were terribly burned and identification of the bodies was extremely difficult.

Virtually the entire first shift of the Utah-Delaware mine was coming off duty when the slide swept the gulch sides clean and filled it with debris. It was with a sudden thundering roar that the slide tore down the mountainside, said persons outside its path. As the mass gravitated down, houses that had glistened in the snow caved in like egg shells and became a part of the moving mass.

Rescue crews plied their shovels in limited areas that had been roped off. Their efforts were speeded up late today as the fires died down under the mass of snow. More than two thousand persons from the country-side and neighboring towns had gathered about the scene before dusk.

The avalanche is believed to have been the result of unusually "wet" character of the snow that had been falling for 24 hours, adding fourteen inches to previous snows on the surrounding heights.

Sap Gulch, a mile from here, is one of several off-shoot gulches clustered about this city of 4,000 population, which is noted for the largest "open" copper ore mine in the world, that of the Utah Copper company.

The distance to Salt Lake City is 19 miles.

N. Y. ACCLAIMS 19-YEAR-OLD AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—The Metropolitan Opear House threw open its doors tonight to the thousands who had fought for seats to witness the debut of 19-year-old Marion Talley, the youngest American girl ever to make her debut on its stage.

An eager delegation from her home town, Kansas City, arrived early to be on hand for the opening curtain of Verdi's "Rigoletto." Firm in their faith in the girl whose youthful talent they had underwritten since she was sixteen, they had come from their Missouri homes to behold the first triumphs of her career which to them had become a municipal enterprise.

Her role tonight, that of "Gilda," was one of the favorites of Patti, with whom she has been compared. It also was one of the famous parts for Lilian Nordica, another girl singer, whose operatic debut was made in Italy at 20, and in America four years later.

The American singer who most nearly approaches the record set by Miss Talley is Geraldine Farrar, who made a concert debut at 15, appeared in "Faust" in Berlin at 19, and was introduced to New York audiences at the age of 24.

According to police he became acquainted with Chapman and Anderson while an inmate of Auburn prison.

INSISTENT CURTAIN CALLS FOR MARION TALLEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Despite the furore attending tonight's debut of the young prima donna, Marion Talley of Kansas City, Maria Jeritza, for several seasons the idol of opera goers, proved this afternoon that she still commanded a devoted following.

Taking her farewell of her opera audiences for this season with a special non-subscription production of "Tannhauser" the Viennese soprano consented to appear before the final curtain only after ten calls had been answered by Lauritz Melchior and Friedrich Schorr, who supported her. Then, in dressing gown and flowing hair, Jeritza harkened to the scores calling for her by name and took ten more curtain calls of her own.

PROPOSE $85,078,000 NAVAL PLANE BUILDING PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—(AP)—The house naval committee gave its approval today to a five-year building program to cost $85,078,000 for the naval air service. It would become operative in the fiscal year beginning June 30.

The program, as recommended to the house, includes both heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air activities, and by the end of the period would assure the service of 1,000 new airplanes and two dirigibles, each three times the size of the wrecked Shenandoah. The total cost of the two dirigibles would account for $8,000,000 of the total.

The committee also recommended an appropriation of $300,000 for the navy to contract with the Aircraft Development corporation, backed by Ford interests, for an all metal airship. This would be in addition to the total carried in the program.

The amount proposed in the program would be in addition to the $3,200,000 carried in the navy bill to provide for 78 new planes during the next fiscal year. Coupling this amount with the $12,285,000 recommended in the program, a total of $15,585,000 would be available for the fiscal year 1927, to provide 213 new planes.

Thereafter the program would make the following apportionments:

1928—$16,223,000, providing 313 planes.
1929—$17,582,000, providing 339 planes.
1930—$18,941,000, providing 365 planes.
1931—$20,046,000, providing 374 planes.

This would give a total of 1,692 planes, including the 78 already provided for.

CONFEREES TO FIGHT OUT VARIATIONS IN TAX BILLS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—(AP)—After three days of wrangling over differences in the administrative provisions of the revenue bills, senate and house conferees prepared tonight to fight out the variations in tax reductions voted by their respective chambers.

The $125,000,000 in reductions written into the bill by the senate, in addition to those approved by the house has provided the issues on which neither side thus far has yielded.

There are definite indications, however, that both will make some concessions in the discussion of the rate schedules beginning tomorrow.

House conferees are determined to have restored to the bill the inheritance tax elimination by the senate and are expected to win Senate conferees, however, are expected to obtain their provision for greater reductions than voted by the house in the surtax rates applying on incomes between $24,000 and $100,000.

The senate is expected to yield on its proposals to wipe out entirely, the taxes on automobiles and admissions in favor of reductions in these rates from the present level.

The senate and house conferees planned to hold separate meetings on the question of the rates tomorrow morning before resuming their joint conference, which is held behind closed doors.

BOSTON, Feb. 17—(AP)—Colcedonio Alviti, Boston agent of Charles Ponzi's Florida real estate syndicate changed his plea to guilty today when arraigned in superior court for violation of the state "blue sky" laws and was fined $300. Alviti had appealed a municipal court sentence of six months in jail after his arrest here for selling certificates of indebtedness without being registered by the public utilities department.

In changing his plea, Alviti admitted giving out circulars describing Ponzi's Charpon Land syndicate, but denied selling any stock. The operations of the syndicate in Florida recently were halted when Ponzi, Alviti and their wives were indicted in Jacksonville for violation of a state law. All four made bail.

FRANCE IN FAIR WAY TO BALANCE BUDGET

PARIS, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The financial measures passed by the chamber of deputies, which were the subject of a conference today between M. Doumer, the minister of finance, and M. Millies-Lacroix, chairman, and Henry Cheron, reporter, of the senate finance committee, will, according to the best information, be voted promptly by the upper house with such additions as will produce the 2,500,000,000 francs extra revenue needed to balance the budget. In the opinion of the leaders of the different groups in the chamber, the lower house will vote the measures with the senate amendments.

The most aggressive leaders of the groups of the coalition of the left, who heretofore have been loud in their assertions that they would not allow the upper house to overthrow the chamber, elected by universal suffrage have modified their tone. Possible dissolution in case of a conflict between the two houses is regarded with apprehension, and it was admitted by one of the most active opponents of the government today that the chamber would vote whatever amendments the senate makes. The finance committee of the senate has agreed to work night and day on the bills to have them ready for consideration before the end of the week.

The budget deficit which must be covered totalled 5,525,000,000 francs, M. Doumer informed the committee, and the chamber had voted only 1,600,000,000 additional resources, he asked the senators to vote 100,000,000 francs alcohol taxes, 35,000,000 on salt, 50,000,000 on coffee, augment the customs revenues by 400,000,000, increase tobacco prices 20 per cent., which it calculated would bring in 800,000,000 francs, while he hoped to recover 200,000,000 from the disposal of state property and accumulated merchandise, and make up the balance with the 1.20 per cent. stamp tax on industrial transactions, yielding 2,400,000,000 francs.

M. Doumer also asked the senate committee to adopt the bills the chamber has already voted.

MANSFIELD-WINDHAM SCHOOL FIGHT IS ENDED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 17—The final chapter of the Mansfield-Windham town school controversy came to a close this week when the Mansfield committee voted to abide by the decision of Commissioner of Schools Dr. A. B. Meredith and pay up the tuition bill of $255 due Windham. A Windham high school pupil residing in the Ridges, town of Mansfield, was certified and given a permit retroactive from the beginning of the term and the troubled period was declared closed. There were three points in Commissioner Meredith's decision which was given wholly in favor of Windham. The first was the unpaid tuition bill of the Beers girl of $100 for attendance during 1924 at Windham high and the unpaid tuition balance of $155 due in June 1925 for the pupil residing at The Ridges and the refusal of the Mansfield board to certify that pupil for attendance at school. The board further voted to recall a counter bill of $320 sent by Secretary William F. Kirkpatrick of the Mansfield board to the Windham school board for reimbursement due the town of Mansfield on the amount paid for the tuition of two children at The Ridges school, one of these children being one involved in the high school controversy.

The Portable school house, combined with the Brick schoolhouse in Plainfield was entirely burned to the ground, at about 3 o'clock Wednesday morning. The Lawton Fire brigade was the first to be notified but their efforts were useless. The origin of the fire is unknown. A good deal of criticism has been heard about the new Volunteer Fire Co., since the fire. In an interview with the fire chief it is learned that an arrangement was agreed upon by the Lawton mill officials and the new fire company some months ago, to co-operate with them by sounding a fire alarm outside mill property, but for the last two fires, through the neglect, or misunderstanding of someone, it has failed to sound. The chief thinks that had he been notified in sufficient time, with the men of his company available at that hour, he could possibly have saved the building. Not being notified until the building was on the ground he feels that his company should not suffer any of the criticism.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

John Comfort, Tolland county's 84 year old fiddler, who lives in Stafford Springs, won first prize in an old adders' contest at Warren Memorial hall Tuesday evening. Arthur Wood, 55, of Mansfield Center, won second prize the prize in each case being a silver loving cup. The other contestants were James Doherty, 66, of Rockville; John L. Solderbury, 54, of Manchester; Ernest St. Louis, 56, of Rockville; Hickory Abern, 50, of Rockville; Robert Russell, 67, of Manchester; Charles Ungewitter, 53 of Stafford Springs, and Arthur Wood, of Mansfield Center. Each of the contestants lead off with Turkey in the Straw and then played two selections of his own choice. The violin used by John Comfort was made by Ellery Neff, son of George Neff, and is from wood grown on the Neff farm in Tolland. It is a very fine-toned violin. In addition to awarding the two prizes, honorable mention was given to Robert Russell. Uncle John Comfort, as he is now familiarly known, easily won the hearts of his audience not only by his playing, but because his age and feeble steps gained for him the sympathy of the audience from the start. He is almost blind and older people in the audience remembered more than 50 years back, when, with keen eye and agil step, he was the master fiddler at all the dances in this section. The contest was very close between Mr. Comfort, Mr. Wood and Mr. Russell, and after the other contestants had been eliminated by the judges, these three were each requested to play another selection. John Comfort played an old time quadrille, Robert Russell played Money Musk and Arthur Wood, The Irish Washerwoman. The judges were George Neff, of Tolland; Thomas Moran and Frank Haigh, of Stafford Springs.

After the contest George Neff, accompanied on the piano by his son, Harold Neff, gave a splendid exhibition of old time music. After Mr. Neff had completed his part of the programme, which was very much appreciated, there was dancing until midnight. The affair was in charge of the local council of the Knights of Columbus.

There have been no automobiles running here for a week.

DANIELSON

NEW WHEEL FOR PUMPER HAS NOT YET ARRIVED

DANIELSON, Feb. 17—There was delay Wednesday in the arrival here of a new wheel to replace one that collapsed Tuesday on the big motor pumper of the fire pumper. The wheel did not come through on the boat train, as had been promised by the pumper people in Boston, Tuesday afternoon, nor did it show up in the morning express shipments Wednesday. However its arrival was to be followed immediately by its being placed on the truck, a matter of only a few minutes' work.

Shrinkage in gasoline sales are reported as heavy since heavy snow came to block the highways. Many machines have been used very little or not at all during the past two weeks though they were operating almost daily up to the time of the blockade. There is some compensation for the filling stations, nevertheless. The going has been so hard that such machines as have continued in use have burned more gas—much more—than under ordinary traveling conditions One man tells of using up 18 gallons of gas in bucking the drifts two weeks ago today, and that he averaged more than a gallon a mile while doing it.

The Lenten season will be marked in Danielson by a practical suspension of public social activities, especially dances. So many people refrain from dancing during Lent that promoters of such diversions find them unprofitable. Many other social activities also will be suspended or curtailed, so Danielson will have a period of about six weks with very little doing along such lines.

Snake Meadow brook, one of those leased by the state for intensive stocking, likely will get 3,500 seven to eight inch trout from the state hatcheries within the next 30 days. This estimate is based on 500 such trout to the mile, and there is about seven miles of Snake Meadow brook from its source to its mouth. Incidentally, following a conference held at Hartford, Tuesday, and fully reported in The Bulletin, Wednesday morning, Snake Meadow, as a leased brook, likely will be closed to fishing until April 15, two weeks after the opening of the regular trout fishing season. There is good reason for this. It will keep out the Massachusetts fishermen who have flocked into this territory in the early days in April for several years past, while awaiting the opening of the season in their own state, which changes plenty if a Connecticut man wants a fishing license up there. In the meantime Snake Meadow will be under continuous patrol and no one will have much of a chance of getting away with advance fishing. When the season opens any licensed fisherman will have the privilege of the brook.

One who has just returned here after serving 30 days at the county jail in Brooklyn, was not too grateful for the expressions of good will extended him. He relates that he would prefer to remain at the jail during the remainder of the cold weather season It's pleasant over there just now, he relates. A radio brings entertainment each evening, there is on old circus performer and two very good harmonica players doing time over there and they all contribute to making very pleasant early evening hours for the other prisoners.

"Be thankful for the condition of the state highways in Windham county," says Sidney W. Bard, after a motor trip to Bridgeport, by way of Hartford and Meriden. Windham county's section of that route is in better condition than any other section. The going to Hartford is all fair enough, but between Hartford and Meriden and Meriden and New Haven and from there on to Bridgeport, there is some mighty tough going. There are miles of one-way going in that part of the state. No great progress has been made in removing drifts and such parts of the highways as have been opened are covered with several inches of snow. It is not taken off as clean out there as is the rule in Windham county, Mr. Bard says. Conditions are particularly poor in Cheshire and vicinity.

Mr. Bard says that those who complain about the condition of state highways hereabouts have not been far from home the past two weeks. He found one "through route" between New Haven and Bridgeport this week, with but wheel ruts in the deep snow There is no state highway in that condition in this county.

The craze for old-time dances and old-time fiddling to go with it is ungoated hereabouts. Announcement was made Wednesday of a sort of double-header attraction scheduled for mid-Lent. This affair will bring both Uncle Joe Shippee, of Plainfield and Henry Pray, of Ballouville, to Danielson, to play in the same orchestra. Both have won championships in contests since the first of the year and achieved very considerable fame The fact that they are to play here and together is great news to those who like the ancient dances and the fiddling that made them so well thought of in the long ago.

A finely attended meeting of Killingly grange was held in the I. O. O. F. hall, Monday night, with Mrs. Harriet Wood, master, presiding. Visiting patrons were present from Brooklyn, Abington, Moosup Valley, Patchaug any South Killingly. The program was entitled Musical Valentine Night. Mrs. Maud Keech and Hugh Garragher, who were to have had a prominent part in the program, were unable to be present on account of illness. The program as given was: Instruction in the secret work, Worthy Master Wood: violin solo and encore, Thelma Cogan; reading, Mrs. Eva Bradford; ladies' vocal quartette, Helen Keech, Mrs. C. A. Downs, Ruth Clark, Helen Kelley; paper, First Aid for the Love lorn, Charles A. Downs; violin solo, Thelma Cogan; violin and vocal duet, Helen Keech and Thelma Cogan; piano solo, Mrs. John Gallup; surprise number, Kitchen Orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Downs, Helen Kelley, Helen Keech, Thelma Cogan, Ruth Clark, Mrs. Bradford and Mrs. Grace Enos.

An excellent assortment of cake with coffee, was served under the direction of Mrs. Rose Boswell, chairman of the entertainment committee for the evening. Uncle Joe Shippee was on hand with his famous fiddle. He was ably assisted by his daughter at the piano, with Alton Elderidge as prompter, for the social dance at the close of the meeting. It is safe to say that Killingly grange has had few occasions when everyone seemed to so thoroughly enjoy themselves.

Milder weather Wednesday, contributed to the sloughing off of a bit more of the ice and snow that burdens this region and aided workers still engaged in clearing highways. Some roads in country districts remain untouched since the blockade of two weeks ago today.

All but two miles of the rural route out of the Danielson postoffice is now being covered daily. Arthur Choquette is covering the route during the absence of Carrier A. W. Loges.

Charles Berzuc has arrived at his home in Putnam after serving one year of his sentence in Wethersfield prison. He was released on parole.

Berzuc is one of the eighteen violators of the liquor laws who were arrested in the closing days of 1924. This wholesale raid followed an investigation by two "spotters" who had spent several weeks here obtaining evidence. All of the accused were Polish. At their trial in city court they were assessed heavy fines and some of them were given short terms of imprisonment in the county jail. Nearly all of them appealed from this judgment to the superior court in which tribunal their cases were heard a month later.

Berzuc had been found guilty of liquor law violations on two previous occasions. He elected to be tried by a jury and was defended by Charles L. Torrey of this city and George Sheehan of Providence. Judge Newell L. Jennings, who was the trial judge at the conviction of Gerald Chapman a few weeks later, presided at the hearing of the liquor law violators. The jury promptly returned a verdict of guilty against Berzuc and his sentence of not less than three or more than four years in state's prison and a fine of $1,500 was the most severe that had been imposed up to that time against people for selling liquor illegally. The sentence was as follows:

On the first count a fine of $500 and not less than one year nor more than two years in prison. On the second count, a fine of $500 and imprisonment of one year, the term to begin after the expiration of the first sentence. Third count, a fine of $500 and one year's imprisonment, to begin after the expiration of the second sentence.

The others who had appealed their cases from the city court changed their pleas to guilty and all were given a suspended imprisonment sentence and among them was Berzuc's wife.

He has made two or three applications for parole prior to its being granted a few days ago.

We want you to make this test

We want every weak, puny, fagged-out man and woman in America to make this test: buy one bottle of Tanlac at your druggist's, take it according to directions for one week and see how quickly you get started back to full strength and vigor.

We know what we are talking about. Tanlac has helped millions. In our files are more than 100,000 letters of praise from grateful users.

Don't confuse Tanlac with ordinary patent nostrums. It is Nature's own tonic and builder, compounded from roots, barks, and herbs that we gather at great expense from the four corners of the earth.

Tanlac goes straight to the seat of your trouble; cleanses and purifies the blood stream; puts your digestion in proper shape. First thing you know you have an appetite like a starved child. You rest at night and your whole body begins to feel the stir of strength and energy.

Don't you be discouraged. Don't put off testing Tanlac another day. Get a bottle now and in a week you should notice signs of real improvement. Then you will feel like your old self again. Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation.

G. A. R. Veteran Gives Credit to Tanlac

"Seven years ago my hip pained so intensely I had to use a cane when walking. I became played out, nervous and discouraged. Had also bad blotches on skin. Tanlac banished pain and blotches. At 77 I need no cane now."

WINTER CUTS DOWN STORRS EGG LAYING

Another decline in egg production was recorded on the Storrs Egg Laying contest in the fifteenth week, when the 1,400 pullets laid a total of 3,819 eggs, or thirty-nine per cent. This is 285 eggs less than were laid last week, but when compared with the production for the corresponding week a year ago, it represents a gain of 371 eggs. This makes the fourth consecutive week that the contest flock has fallen off in production. A grand total of 55,653 eggs have been laid to date, which is 6,486 eggs more than were laid at the end of the fifteenth week a year ago.

Heading the honor roll for this week is the Rhode Island Red entry of George B. Treadwell from Spencer, Mass., with the high score of fifty-one eggs. Another pen of Rhode Island Reds entered by John Z. LaBelle from Ballouville, Conn., at present the leading pen in the contest, made the second best score for the week with a lay of forty-eight eggs. Following close behind for third place was the White Leghorn entry of Pentocost Poultry Plant from Telford, Pa., with a record of forty-seven egs. Thre pens were tied for fourth place, each with a production of forty-four eggs. They are the White Leghorn entries of R. W. Colman from Medina, N. Y., and Henry Rapp, Jr., from Farmingdale, N. J., and the Barred Rock entry of the Ontario Agricultural College from Guelph, Ontario.

With a record of 736 eggs to date, the Rhode Island Red entry of John Z. LaBelle continues to maintain its position as the leading pen in the contest. They have a forty-two egg lead over their nearest competitor, the White Leghorn entry of Dudley Poultry Farm from Webster, Mass., which to date has made a record of 692 eggs. Three changes took place among the leading pens. In the White Leghorn class, the entry of Henry Rapp, Jr., from Farmingdale, N. J., went into fifth position, displacing the entry of Toivonen Leghorn Farm from Girard, Pa. George B. Treadwell's Rhode Island Reds from Spencer, Mass., went into third position in their class, displacing the entry of Shell Crest Farm from Hollaston, Mass. In the Barred Rock class the entry of R. W. CHANGING INAUGURATION DATE

Constitutional amendments are proposed much oftener than they are adopted and yet the mere proposal is not enough to condemn them. There are changes which experience seems to call for and just now it is the opinion of the United States senate, if we can judge by the vote of 72 to 2, that the date for a new president, or a re-elected one, to be inaugurated and a new congress to meet should be on the third Monday in January instead of the fourth day of March.

The reason for this change lies in the fact that following national elections members of congress continue to legislate even though they act contrary to the demands of the people as voiced at the November election. They represent another sentiment and they continue to act accordingly instead of responding to the expressed desire of the people. It gives an opportunity to those who desire to handicap and obstruct to disregard the will of the voters and to embarrass an administration.

The inauguration day and the time for the meeting of a new congress is fixed by the Constitution. If there is to be a change there must be a change in the Constitution. That isn't such a difficult thing if it is desired and the vote in the senate in favor of the amendment speaks rather plainly as to what the sentiment is. The senate certainly knows what the situation is and how desirable a change would be. What the house will say remains to be seen, but even there it is quite as obvious that undesirable conditions should be removed.

When it comes to the submission of the change to the states, if it gets that far there is reason to expect that sentiment will run quite as one sided as it did in the senate. Certainly the situation which is permitted by the present requirements is the cause of frequent criticism and the desire for its elimination through a constitutional change ought to be widespread. Thus far all features of the amendment make a good impression and are not offset by bad ones.

DEPORTABLE ALIENS

Dealing with the aliens is a problem that calls for attention most of the time. There are not only those who are seeking admission in spite of the restrictions, but those within the country who have gotten in illegally or who have shown that under the law they can and should be deported.

Some idea of the extent of this latter class is furnished by the statement before the immigration committee of the house of representatives by Commissioner of Immigration Hull when he places the number of those deportable at 1,200,000. That is almost as many people as there are in the state of Connecticut.

There are many insane and criminal aliens being maintained in institutions about the country, who may have been legally admitted but who are under the law deportable, and the action of the house committee in providing $7,000,000 with which to pay the cost of deportation and relieve the country of such people indicates its appreciation of the situation and the need for relieving it.

Getting such persons out of the country isn't as easy and inexpensive as might be thought. Cases vary, of course, but some idea of what is involved is indicated by the statement before the immigration committee that there have probably been 250,000 bootlegged into the country since 1921 and that the deportation of that number would cost about $25,000,000. This it can be appreciated that the $7,000,000, if it were all applied to that purpose would not remove all who are deportable though it would help to make a good beginning. The increase in the appropriation for such a purpose shows the attitude of the committee and we have no doubt it reflects the view of the public in general.

With institutions crowded because of the alien inmates such action has been proceeding too slowly. Likewise the importance of giving those who get in in defiance of the law to understand that they can expect to be deported cannot be too clearly set forth. A wholesale deportation may be expensive but it will be wholesome and cheapest in the end.

SHIPPING BOARD FUNDS

Just because the shipping board's president has asked for a fund of $15,000,000 to assure the maintenance of certain steamship lines which otherwise fair to succumb to foreign competition does not mean that he is certain to get it. What President O'Connor seeks is virtually a subsidy. President Harding was a strong advocate of a ship subsidy for the merchant marine under which it could be more economically operated, but he failed to get it. That the president of the shipping board will be treated any better, even though the amount is less, seems hardly probable. The fact is, of course, that the shipping board does not stand in as good a position as it did during President Harding's time.

Under the O'Connor plan the fund would be left to the administration of the shipping board, a feature which will not appear wise in view of the defiant manner in which the board has been conducting itself and the independence which it has shown regardless of administration policies and the known desires of the country.

It is to be remembered that there is a widespread feeling to the effect that the shipping board should go and that its duties should be taken over by the emergency fleet corporation and no doubt efforts will be made to bring about that end. This means of course that more than the usual careful scrutiny will be given to the proposal and its effect. In fact shipping board recommendations must be extra good and certain of results before much faith is going to be placed in them. Millions have been poured out through the shipping board and even though it is charged with big responsibilities and a hard job the conduct of the board has not been such as to command confidence. It may not be possible to deny it the appropriations that are absolutely necessary, unless its existence is ended, but certainly there will be no disposition to throw millions its way without pretty good proof that the equivalent will be returned. The board has lost rather than gained public confidence.

COUNTESS CATHCART

Countess Cathcart must go back home. Admission to this country, has been denied in accordance with the law of this country. The department of labor has no option in the matter and if it did have the case is not one that calls for the exercise of it. The mere fact that she figured in a divorce case would not be sufficient ground to exclude her or anyone else. It was the character of the case, the notoriety she seemed to delight in, the apparent display of pride over the sensational conduct, the evident endorsement of such conduct and the fact that she had apparently come to this country for the purpose of capitalizing her moral code that weighed so heavily against her.

Certainly if there are others who have been excluded from the country under the law on the same grounds there is no reason why one who has done as she has and continues to boast about it should have an exception shown in her case.

If it were a case where she was being discriminated against there could be more sympathy for her and a greater feeling that the ruling was unjust. It is a case where the law exists and is being enforced. If the law is a poor one that does not affect the case in question. Instead of trying to have the law winked at the law should be changed. Undoubtedly the law leaves big enough loophole so that just such individuals can dodge it in many instances. But this was a conspicuous case, a case where the moral conduct was being advertised and much of the purpose of the visit might have been lots had it been dodged. The country will suffer none by the loss of a visit from Countess Cathcart.

THE CHAPMAN CASE

In spite of the resort that has been made to all kinds of technicalities in an effort to have Gerald Chapman escape the death sentence in this state there has been no success either in state courts or in federal courts up to this time. Higher courts have sustained the action of the jury and upheld the sentence and the federal courts have refused to interfere. There may have been unsual features in connection with the release of Chapman by the federal authorities to be tried for murder while he was under federal sentence, but it was a complication which Chapman rushed into himself following his escape from Atlanta and in no move that has been made has there been any other purpose than to see that justice was done.

It is believed that the decision of the federal circuit court of appeals was commonly expected and that by it justice is being done under the law and as it deserved. For a prisoner to be able to say that he cannot be tried for other crimes while under sentence seems to reach the height of the ridiculous.

There remains the possibility of one more appeal, that to the supreme court of the United States. Decision as to that has apparently not been made as yet. Slight encouragement would seem to exist for such action but that would of course serve to extend the life of Chapman since another change in the execution date would probably be made in such an event. The indications point very strongly to the fact that Chapman is now in a predicament from which he is not going to escape, either by his own cunning or through some weak spot in the law.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Whether intended as a January thaw or not, it is quite as welcome in February.

Those who have found substitutes cheaper and better are not taking much interest in the coal strike settlement.

The government chemist who declares only one sample in a thousand of bootleg liquor is genuine liquor isn't guided by looks, taste or kick.

Countess Cathcart says the Earl of Craven had other affairs with men but that doesn't reflect any credit upon her conduct or offer any excuse for it.

There is an effort to have paper money made two-thirds the present size. As long as the purchasing power is not decreased there can be no serious objection.

Three cops have been suspended in New York on extortion charges and one is under sentence to death for cold blooded murder. And yet they wonder why there is so much crime in the big city.

One British concern in ordering American autos demanded them transported in British ships or not at all. If all goods bought in England were ordered in American vessels some of the idle ships might be put to work.

MAKING PEACE

On his way to his office Willis stopped to call upon his mother. The moment she saw him she knew that something was troubling him. But she asked no questions, merely seeking advice about the trimming of the tree in her yard.

"I didn't come here to discuss forestry," he said after a few minutes' talk about the offending branches. "Peggy and I've had a hundred-percent row."

"Nonsense, Jimmy," said Willis' mother. "I don't believe it."

"Well, we have all right."

"What have you been doing, Jimmy boy to annoy Peggy?" Mrs. Willis smiled at her son. "You know teasing always was your worst fault. You mustn't tease that child. She wasn't brought up with brothers. She isn't used to it."

"It isn't a small matter like teasing. I tell you we have had a real row. You see—"

"But, son, you—"

"Now, mother, listen. You see, for a week Peg has been politely cool to me, and when I've asked her what was the matter she said, 'Oh, nothing,' in a tone of injured innocence that's simply maddening. When I took her some candy night before last she received it with studied disdain and asked me if I were sure that I could afford to buy candy for her.

"'Why not?' I asked.

"'Well,' she said frostily, 'your expenses are so great lately.'

"'But no greater than for some time past,' I remarked, and she gave me a strange look and said, 'Oh, is that so?' with much emphasis, which I couldn't in the least understand. She ostentatiously neglected the candy, and last night when I brought her flowers she purposely forgot to put them in water. 'What's got into you, Peggy?' I asked this morning when I saw those withered blossoms lying just where I had them before dinner last evening. 'You used to be wild over flowers.'

"'I'm wild,' she said, beginning to cry, 'but not over your flowers.' Of course then I demanded an explanation.

"'Jim Willis,' she said tragically, 'before I say another word, you must tell me who Petty is. Who is she?'

"'I don't know any Petty,' I said. 'What are you talking about?'

"'Jim,' she said, wiping her eyes and trying to speak with composure. 'There's no use trying to deceive me about Petty. I know all. Petty! How could you call any woman Petty?'

"'I couldn't,' I said angrily. 'What's that darn silly name got to do with us? I never called any one Petty in my whole life.'

"'It's no use trying to deceive me, Jim,' she said, again, 'I've seen your checkbook!'

"'My checkbook!' I repeated. 'What's my checkbook got to do with any woman called Petty, I'd like to know?'

"'Jim Willis, how can you talk like that way after all the checks you've made out to her? It's—it's just awful,' and then she gave way to sobs, and a great light came to me—mother, and I roared with laughter.

"'You little goose,' I said, 'those checks were made out for petty cash, not on the stub I just wrote petty. That's the biggest joke of the season.'

"'Maybe you think it's a joke,' she sobbed, 'but if you had any feeling you wouldn't laugh after all I've suffered.'

"'If you had any proper confidence in me you wouldn't ever have imagined for a second that I was making out checks to some woman I called Petty,' I said and I went on and just told her what I thought of her, and she said I was cruel, and we had it hot and heavy, and I just made up my mind to come over here and tell you how silly she acts and ask you what to do, mother."

"Go home and apologize to her. Probably she's dying to tell you that she's sorry, and don't you ever let her know that you criticised her to her mother-in-law. That's no way to do, Jimmy, boy. There's the telephone—why, it's Peggy. Of course, dear, I'll be delighted to dine with you and Jimmy this evening. You wish to do something special for Jimmy? If my coming will please him, he'll be as happy as a lark, for I'll be there."

Mrs. Willis grinned at her son as she put down the telephone. "Try bringing Peggy flowers tonight, and I'll wager she won't forget to put them in water."

"Righto," agreed Jim, and as he hurried away his mother smiled and sighed all at once.—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Rev. Dr. James Empringham, who has become the storm center of the "wet" and "dry" controversy by putting the Church Temperance Society of the Protestant Episcopal church on record against absolute prohibition, has been the general secretary of that society for the past ten years. Previously he had served as metropolitan district superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York. When, in 1916, he was invited by the temperance society to become its secretary, he accepted on the express condition that he was to execute a policy of hearty co-operation with the Anti-Saloon League in its effort to rid the state and the nation of saloons. This pledge the church had given a short time before by resolutions adopted at its general convention, the same marking an epoch in the history of the temperance movement in a church always regarded as conservative and disinclined to take radical positions with respect to temperance policies.

Stories That Recall Others

Just Stood Still

Lincoln's birthday had been celebrated with the usual patriotic exercises in the schools. Kathleen's mother was ill and had been unable to go to hear her daughter's recitation. When the child returned from school her mother asked her for an account of the program and this is the way Kathleen told it:

"Well, we just sang some songs, and a lot of us recited poems. Then at the end, we all stood up and sang America and one boy carried in the flag and all of the boys saluted." At this point her mother interrupted the story with, "Didn't the little girls salute, too?" Oh, no, mother, you don't understand. The little girls just stood still in solution.

The Trials of a Teacher

Charles is the owner of a parrot. When it was obtained he made an attempt to teach the bird to talk. Each morning he toiled diligently for a half hour with the bird, and several times he became so disgusted that he orally condemned the bird to a better place. All the instructions, however, seemed of no avail. All the answer he could obtain was a raucous squawk. One morning a visitor came in and walking to the cage remarked: "Good morning, Polly." Polly looked at him sideways and, seeming to wink, replied "Go to the devil."

From Small Beginnings

Dwight L. Moody, the Shoe Clerk, the Great Revivalist

If in 1854 you had gone into a Boston shoe store you might have been waited on by a plump, bright-eyed, 17-year-old boy, Dwight L. Moody. Perhaps you would have found him fooling with the other clerks, for he was too active in mind and body to be what is called "well behaved." Cast on the world by the loss of his father, he was doing the best he knew how to make a living, and was as generally careless and irresponsible as most boys are.

A year after he had begun to sell shoes he attended a religious meeting that made a deep effect upon him. From being an ordinary, "live-wire" boy he became an intense, eager evangelist. Three years later he was preaching on the streets of Chicago and urging the chance passers-by to follow him into a place of meeting. That first missionary work, carried on in connection with work for his daily support, grew into a full-fledged church with Dwight L. Moody at its head.

From that time on, Moody gave himself to the consecrated work of preaching, right-living and a sense of worship. When he was 23 he was joined in his vigorous work by a man almost as remarkable as he, Ira D. Sankey, the great leader of choral singing. The two men spoke and sang throughout the United States and England, and everywhere drew great crowds to hear them. No one who ever saw the huge form of Dwight L. Moody, making every platform tremble, and who heard his powerful preaching can ever forget it. He touched the heart, just as Ira D. Sankey did with his singing of hymns. The two were unique figures in American life.

Not content with the great work for good that he was doing, Moody established a Bible training school and a seminary near his boyhood home, and another somewhat similar school in Chicago. In many ways he gave himself devotedly to his work and made himself a powerful force for good. He died in 1899 at the age of 63. Of him, as of John Brown, it can be said that "his soul carried on at Northfield, Mass., where he established it, and his converts throughout the United States and England are forwarding his labors. It paid to convert a shoe clerk.

Cross Husbands Often Victims of Chronic Fatigue

Many a wife thinks that because her husband is always cross and irritable, criticizing and complaining, that he does not love her any longer or is working too hard—when in most cases he is really suffering from chronic fatigue.

Chronic fatigue is an unnatural tired feeling—usually due to lack of sufficient organic iron in the blood. Nuxated Iron, which contains true organic iron like that in the blood and in spinach and lentils, quickly restores this iron and banishes chronic fatigue. It gives new strength and energy in 2 weeks or money back. Will not injure teeth or disturb the stomach like mineral iron. At all good druggists.

Why the "EASY" Washes dainty things so satisfactorily

Women who once would never have dreamed of washing their own precious georgettes and underthings, their own treasured sweaters and scarfs except by hand, now confidently commit them to the gentle action of and its three nickel plated cups. There are good reasons for this change.

1 Fine things of this sort cannot be entrusted to unskilled hands and rough treatment.

2 Delicate silks should be washed as soon as they become soiled. To leave such garments for several days in a damp, dark hamper or bag is to cut months fom their life. It is so convenient to wash with the "EASY" that many women cleanse these important things as soon as they become soiled.

3 The "EASY" washes without friction. Air is the medium used to impel the warm suday solution thru the meshes of these finer garments. Carefully conducted tests have demonstrated that clothes actually last longer when washed the Easy way than if washed by hand.

For delicate modern things, only the Easy air pressure and vacuum cup method—so gentle, yet so throughly cleansing—will do.

Don't dope YOUR COUGH

It is not wise to use remedies which depend upon "dope" such as narcotics, chloroform, cannabis or tar products. They may stop your cough temporarily by numbing the tissues, as most cough mixtures do, but this is not enough.

The inflamed air passages must be soothed naturally, the germ-laden mucus loosened and expelled in order to effect a lasting recovery.

GETTING UP NIGHTS

Tells you there is danger ahead. A healthy bladder does not act at night. J. H Dorton, W. Graham, Va., says: "I had to get up seven or eight times at night for forty years. I thought it was my age. After taking Lithiated Buchu a short time, I am all right." Lithiated Buchu cleanses the bladder as Epsom Salts do the bowels, thereby relieving irritation, driving out foreign matter and neutralizing excessive acids. These are the causes of unnatural action of the bladder at night. Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) is not a cheap medicine. The tablets cost 2 cents each. Sold at all leading drug stores or Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at Geo. Engler's Drug Store.

SENATE PASSED $423,577,162 DEFICIENCY MEASURE

EXTRA SERVICE FOR FIRST CLASS MAIL SECURED BY POSTMASTER

Special postal arrangements have been put into effect this week which remedy for patrons of the Norwich post office the loss of late afternoon incoming and outgoing mails which resulted when the New Haven road put a new timetable into effect on the Norwich & Worcester branch on January 17.

That schedule made the 11.56 a. m. train, the last southbound train to leave here on the Norwich & Worcester branch, and the 3.30 in the afternoon the last northbound train to reach here. Postmaster Casper E. Bailey realized at once the serious curtailment in the mail service which this involved for Norwich business men, and he set about to remedy it. When he took up the matter with the postal director for this division, he found a very ready spirit to do all that was possible for Norwich business interests, and the plan has been worked out and put into operation of having the trolley line between here and New London carry pouches of first class mail on two afternoon trips, one northbound and the other southbound.

All the first class mail in the office is accordingly made up in time to be taken to New London on the 3.45 p. m. trolley from here, while first class mail is brought from New London on the trolley leaving there at 5.45. This leaves New London in time to include the late afternoon arrival of mail there and reaches Norwich in time to be worked that night.

This additional facility for receiving and dispatching first class mail matter will be recognized by Norwich business interests as an important service which Postmaster Bailey has been able to accomplish in order that Norwich should not have its mail facilities curtailed by the decreased train schedule.

FORMER POMFRET CLERGYMAN SOLD HOUSE TO LINCOLN

How Abraham Lincoln acquired the only home he ever owned and how his method of purchasing it revealed the kindliness of his character is told by "The Christian Science Monitor."

A former Pomfret man Dr. Charles Dresser, an Episcopal clergyman, sold the house to Lincoln in Springfield, Ill., in 1844. The year before, early in the morning of Nov. 4, Lincoln had called at the house and engaged Dr. Dresser to marry him and Mary Todd that day. Lincoln found the rector at breakfast in the midst of the comfort of the house and probably made up his mind at that time to possess the place.

Dr. Dresser was born in Pomfret, February 24, 1800, and thirty-eight years later went to Springfield, Ill., to take charge of a struggling little group of Episcopalians. Lincoln and Dresser became friends. The doctor, rounded in the principles and ideals of Yankee New England, seems to have adapted himself to his new environment and a year after his arrival purchased the 40-foot lot, known as Lot 8, Block 10, Elijah Iles addition to Springfield.

Later he added more land and upon the property, in 1839, erected a story and a half white frame cottage with green shutters, following closely the style and methods of construction of the period.

Not long after Lincoln's marriage Dr. Dresser faced a financial obligation that forced him on Feb. 15, 1843, to place a mortgage for $900 on his home to secure a note of equal sum which he had given to Ebenezer Sawyer at Pomfret in 1840. It was evident that the remuneration of his Springfield charge had not been sufficient to meet all of his expenses, including the new home, and Mr. Sawyer loaned the minister $900 on an unsecured note which, later, the clergyman secured by the mortgage on his home.

After Lincoln's marriage in the parlors of the Ninian Edwards mansion six blocks west of the Dresser home, he and his bride went to the Globe Tavern to live. There, Robert T. Lincoln, their eldest son, was born. Soon after this event the Lincoln's determined to have their own home and entered into written agreement with Dr. Dresser for the transfer of his property.

Lincoln's consideration of Dr. Dresser is shown in his part in the transaction. Although the property was mortgaged he permitted no mention of the fact to enter any of the writings or legal documents pertaining to the sale. He even paid his money for the house and moved into it with an unsatisfied mortgage upon it. Lincoln took Dr. Dresser's word that he would pay off the mortgage out of the money received for the property. It required more than three months to do this. Rather than disclose Dr. Dresser's poverty Lincoln did what in this day and age, would be regarded very unbusinesslike and hazardous.

William J. Milligan of Thompsonville, who is serving his third term as state deputy, will be asked to serve again although he has repeatedly said he would not be a candidate. McDonough of Waterbury have been mentioned for state deputy, yet these men desire that Mr. Milligan serve for another year and it is likely the choice will be unanimous.

AMERICAN WOOLEN WILL OPEN ITS FALL LINES

The American Woolen company has announced in New York that the formal opening of its remaining fall lines of men's wear fabrics will be made on Monday, Feb. 22. The supplemental assortments will comprise worsted-mixture and fancy-weave piece-dye suitings in Department 1, fancy worsteds in Department 28, fancy woolens and staple mixtures in Department 3 and fancy worsteds and woolens in Department 7.

The new fancies in woolens and worsteds will be studied to note whether the low price basis of staples will become fixed on the fancier goods. The competitive trade, which has been waiting for the American Woolen, will get fully under way early next week. It is generally expected that the leaders will establish the lowest prices possible to stimulate new business.

Judging from the present style trend, though still somewhat confusing and not at all clearly defined, it seems that considerable number of browns will be sponsored, ranging from tan-browns to chestnut and tobacco. They are likely to appear strongly in both woolens and worsteds. Many authorities are trying to veer away from blues.

CONTINUANCE TAKEN IN ARREST ON ARSON CHARGE

John Vallas, 28, an auto mechanic employed in the Modern Lunch Car, who was arrested Tuesday, was presented in the city court Wednesday morning in connection with the alleged incendiary fire at the Olympia Candy Kitchen, Norwich Town, on Feb. 6th. Acting City Attorney Tolles E. Babcock asked that the case be continued for two weeks and this was done. Vallas is at liberty under a bond of $3,000 furnished by Alex Pandis.

The continuance was made upon request of County Investigator William E. Lewis, who is conducting a thorough investigation of the arson case. It is now thought that three men are implicated in the attempt to burn the candy kitchen which has been conducted by Zases (Charlie) Costides. Vallas is charged with aiding and abetting Costides to burn his store. Costides has already been presented in the city court and is now awaiting trial in the superior court on the arson charge.

Investigation revealed the fact that the fire was in the restaurant and was caused by hot ashes from the restaurant range. It was necessary to pull up part of the flooring to get at the blaze which was extinguished by six gallons of chemical. Squad A responded to the call.

MISS WILLS WILL PROBABLY CLASH WITH SUZANNE IN NICE FINALS

NICE, France, Feb. 18—(AP)—A return match between Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills now seems assured for the second week in March at the Nice tennis tournament, which begins on March 7.

Mlle. Lenglen today maintained her decision to play in the Nice singles, while Miss Wills' Riviera schedule takes in that tournament. The French champion informed The Associated Press correspondent today that she will play in no singles until that time. Miss Wills informed friends previous to leaving for Beaulieu, where she still participate in the tournament, although she did not play today, that she would be on hand at Nice.

Interest in the next match between these great players did not die through the defeat of the California girl yesterday, but Suzanne will no longer be an overwhelming favorite. Miss Wills' showing in their first meeting opened the eyes of those who were blind to any outcome but a Lenglen victory and were ready to bet on the match as a foregone conclusion. It is likely to be even money and take your pick when the girls meet again. Many look for Miss Wills to make her best bid for the crown when and if she meets Mlle. Lenglen at Wimbledon.

Suzanne spent most of the day in bed in her home at Nice, and when The Associated Press correspondent called, her father greeted him with the word: "Poor little one; she is very tired. But she wants to see you; she wants to talk to someone who has been impartial. She will see you."

Suzanne's cozy little room was furnished in Louis XV style, glittering with silver and gold cups won on the world's tennis courts. Mademoiselle herself wore a simple blue kimono, trimmed with bruges lace. Hundreds of telegrams and messages of congratulations were strewn around. Mademoiselle's face lit up when she saw the correspondent.

"How is Miss Wills?" was her first question, and when informed that Miss Wills was so tired that she had to request a postponement of her match at Beaulieu, she remarked sympathetically, "Poor little girl; I know how it feels. Look at me. I have stayed in bed all day. But I am getting to be an old woman; she is a mere child. I will be twenty-seven next Monday.

"She is a good sport, a nice little girl. If ever I lose my title before I retire for good and all from the courts, there is no one to whom I would like better to pass it on than Miss Wills."

Mlle. Lenglen rattled on in an animated manner.

"Be quiet; don't get excited," said her father, stroking her hair. "You are a good little girl; you are all right. Don't cry," as tears swelled up in Suzanne's eyes.

"Please don't be angry at what I said yesterday after the match. I was nervous and excited when I said I knew you would have to congratulate me on victory. Please do not think I am so conceited that I do not know I must be beaten sometime. But it was the crowds, environment and reaction —I do not know."

Her father drew the covers around her, saying soothingly: "All right, all right, my little one. I think you had better try to sleep now."

Suzanne buried her face in a cushion, encompassed by desolation and despair. She did not at the moment quite fittingly exemplify the fame and splendor of the world's tennis champion, as generally pictured.

"Poor child, I would like to assure her future against want," said her father, as he escorted the correspondent downstairs and discussed an offer of $30,000 received from a well known promoter in the United States if Mlle. Lenglen would turn professional and play five matches.

"We are comfortably off, but not rich," added the father. "I am getting old. Twenty thousand dollars is a lot of francs; it would be wealth for my little girl. But we cannot turn professional; this is not boxing. She won't hear of it."

Miss Wills, unruffled, moved from her hotel to Beaulieu today. She stopped in Nice for a few hours and was promptly recognised from her picture printed in the local newspapers and was pointed out in the streets as "the American champion who was defeated by Suzanne."

She reached Beaulieu and requested that her match in the singles be postponed until tomorrow, which was granted without question.

MAKE-SHIFT AGGIE FROSH TEAM LOSES TO ROXBURY

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Feb. 17—Connecticut Aggie Freshmen, weakened by the loss of four regulars, was defeated here tonight by the Roxbury school quintet, the score being 34 to 16 with the prep school boys leading throughout the game. The Connecticut offense was unable to get under way in the first half, Roxbury leading 10 to 5 at half time.

A faculty ruling today declared Hewitt, Grose and Sahagin ineligible because of scholastic difficulties. Schildgren, another regular, was also unable to play because of an injury received last week which made it necessary for Coach Alexander to put a new team on the floor. Capt. White was the only regular to play in tonight's game.

The Aggies rallied in the third quarter mainly because of the shooting of White and Carlin and as the period ended, Roxbury had a narrow 14 to 12 lead. The Prep school boys put the game on ice in the last period, however, when Left Guard Peterson came down the floor to make three pretty baskets.

VAN RYN FURNISHES SURPRISE IN INDOOR TENNIS PLAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—John Van Ryn, 21-year-old Princeton undergraduate of East Orange, N. J., reached the semi-final bracket in the national indoor tennis championships on the board courts of the Seventh Regiment armory today by defeating the veteran internationalist, Erik Worm of Denmark, 6-0, 6-2.

At the same time the three French Davis cup stars, Jean Borotra, Rene La Coste and Jacques Brugnon, won their third round matches and gained the quarter-final round. Francis T. Hunter of New Rochelle, Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y. and William T. Tilden, 2nd, of Philadelphia, are the other quarter-finalists.

Today's matches narrowed the field down to seven players and tomorrow will see the stars of the tournament battling across the corded barrier for semi-final ranking. Borotra, 1925 indoor champion, faces his first real test tomorrow when he meets Tilden while Friday will see Richards facing La Coste and Hunter opposing Brugnon.

Van Ryn's feat in eliminating Worm today is the second upset of the week's play. The first reversal was the defeat of Fred C. Anderson of New York, runner-up in 1925, by Merritt Cutler, a Seventh Regiment armory star, in a first round match.

Employing a twisting, high-bounding service as his most deadly offensive weapon and following up with a severe net attack, Van Ryn swept Worm before him, winning the first set at love and coasting along to win the second set with the loss of but three games.

Van Ryn is playing his second year in senior ranks, while a junior player he held the national junior indoor doubles title with Kenneth Appel also of East Orange, N. J. The Princeton youth will meet the winner of the Richards-LaCoste match in the semi-finals Saturday.

Maurice Ferrier of Switzerland was the second international star to be cast into the discards today, bowing to the consistent stroking of Vincent Richards, 6-2, 6-2. LaCoste was forced to extra games to defeat William Aydelotte of New York 6-2, 8-6 while Borotra eliminated Dr. William Rosenbaum of New York, 6-4, 6-3 and Brugnon defeated Ernest Kuhn of New York, 7-5, 6-1. Francis T. Hunter gained his verdict over H. C. Brunie of New York, 6-2, 6-1.

The doubles reached the third round today without an upset, favorites winning in every instance.

DEMPSEY SAYS IT'S UP TO FITZSIMMONS NOW

WILMINGTON, Del., Feb. 17—(AP)—"It's up to Floyd Fitzsimmons. He's promoting the bout," was Jack Dempsey's reply to an inquiry regarding the proposed Wills-Dempsey fight in Philadelphia, when he arrived in this city today with his wife, Estelle Taylor, star, and his trainer, Gus Wilson.

Several hundred persons crowded the platform at the station to greet the champion and his wife. Continuing his comment on the proposed Philadelphia bout, he said:

"Wherever Fitzsimmons wants to stage the bout it is up to him. He's promoting the fight and I propose to abide by my agreement with him. I am anxious to fight and get it over with.

"I am bound to Fitzsimmons for the Wills encounter and while it is possible that Fitzsimmons may find it possible to stage the bout in Philadelphia, I know nothing of any arrangements of this kind."

The Dempseys went to the home of Mrs. Dempsey's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Barret. Mr. and Mrs. Dempsey will leave here late tomorrow night or early Thursday for Richmond, Va., where the champion will stage an exhibition Friday.

HARRINGTON WILL NOT COMPETE AGAINST HOFF

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 17—(AP)—Paul J. Harrington will not compete against Charles Hoff, Norwegian pole vaulter in the track and field games at New York next Tuesday, it was announced by the Notre Dame athletic board of control tonight. Harrington set a new intercollegiate pole vault record at Urbana, Illinois last Saturday.

University authorities let Harrington make his own decision regarding participation in the New York meet. He said he felt Notre Dame needed him in the meet with Marquette here Friday night and that he also wanted to make the senior class.

Harrington said he was eager to meet Hoff and hoped to do so in Chicago March 6 at the National A. A. U. games. He asserted however, that he would compete only where there is a dirt runway and dirt take-off.

The defeat broke a winning streak of nine straight games for the Aggie team which is pointing toward the New England championship.

CHARLEY HOFF BREAKS POLE VAULT RECORD FOR FIFTH TIME AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—In a brilliant exhibition of his all-around prowess, Charley Hoff of Norway tonight placed second to Vincent Lally of New York in a 600-meter invitation run after breaking his own world indoor pole vault record at the Norwegian Turn society track meet.

The race established a new world's indoor record of 1 minute, 24 seconds.

Hoff was beaten by only two yards as Lally finished with a great burst of speed after the European runner had set the early pace. Johnny Holden of the New York A. C. passed Hoff on the second round of the four-lap event, but the Norwegian pulled up in the home stretch and was pressing Lally strong at the end.

The time for the event, which proved one of the best middle distance records of the indoor season, was recognized as a record, this distance never having been run previously indoors.

Track officials regarded the time as exceptional, as the distance is approximately 660 yards, the mark for which is 1:21 1-5, and they described Hoff as a "very game runner." Less than an hour after he had raised his pole vault record to 13 feet, 4 inches in a single leap, he finished this middle distance event only a few yards behind one of the nation's greatest 600-yard performers.

With Roy Slagle of the University of Pennsylvania as his only opponent, Hoff leaped to his new record on the first attempt after the American had knocked off the bar at 12 feet, 6 inches. Hoff's former record was 13 feet 2 inches.

Hoff began at 11 feet, after which the bar was moved up successively to 11 feet, 6 inches; 12 feet, 12 feet 6 inches; 13 feet, 11 inches, and then to a height never before reached in this country. The Norwegian cleared the bar by several inches in his final jump.

De Hart Hubbard, former university of Michigan star, equalled the world indoor record of seven seconds for 65 yards in outsprinting a field of five contestants in the second feature event.

Hubbard was a step in front of Chet Bowman of the Newark A. C., Louis Clark, also of the Newark A. C., was third.

Overcoming 65ons handicaps allotted to 21 other runners, Willie Ritola of the Finnish-American A. C., scratch starter, won the two-mile race in 9 minutes, 24 seconds. Abe Silverstein of the Glencoe A. C., with a 145-yard advantage, was second, and S. McNeil, an unattached runner, third.

ROSENBERG IS SUSPENDED BY N. Y. COMMISSION

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—Charley (Phil) Rosenberg of New York, world's bantamweight champion, was indefinitely suspended today by the state athletic commission for failure to accept the challenge of Bushey Graham, youthful Utica, N. Y., contender.

The 118-pound titleholder had been warned by the boxing solons to sign for the match before February 15. He failed to heed this edict, however, and his suspension will stand until he agrees to meet Graham, selected by the commission as his outstanding challenger.

The commission altered its stand on the three-corner light-heavyweight controversy by sanctioning a match between Jack Delaney and Mike McTigue, with the provision that champion Paul Berlenbach meet the winner. All three boxers have agreed to the arrangement and the commission instructed Jess McMahon, match maker at Madison Square Garden, to match Delaney and McTigue for March 15.

Details of the contest, however, are expected to prove a stumbling block as the managers of the principals are divided as to the number of rounds. McTigue seeks a contest over the 15-round route, while Delaney is holding out for a ten round limit. It is expected that the question will be threshed out before the commission Friday.

Jack Sharkey of Boston, Mass., was given a clean slate following a hearing on his match with Eddie Huffman of California at Madison Square Garden last Friday night.

Sharkey appeared with his left hand in splints and explained that he injured it early in the fight. This, he said, accounted for his inability to score a knockout over the Californian.

The Boston heavyweight also pointed to his record to show that he is not a knockout puncher. In his long career, he said, he has scored but five knockouts. He had been called for a hearing on charges that he did not give his best efforts. The purses of the two fighters, held up after the bout, were paid upon order of the board.

The long suspension of Leo P. Flynn and his entire stable was lifted.

BASS IS REINSTATED BY CLEVELAND COMMISSION

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 17—(AP)—The Cleveland boxing commission today lifted the ban on Benny Bass, Philadelphia, and approved a twelve round bout between Bass and Pete Sarmiento, Filipino featherweight, in the feature of an American legion show March first.

The ban on Bass was lifted, Edwin D. Barry, chairman of the boxing commission announced, upon receipt of a letter from Bass' manager stating that an "outsider" had misrepresented the situation. It originally had been planned to match Bass and Babe Herman, New York, but this match was cancelled when Bass held for a top price of $5 for tickets instead of the customary $3.00.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—Boon Companion, son of North Star, scored again at Miami today, taking the feature Manatee handicap at 1 1-16 miles over Overall and Buck. The time was 1:45 2-5. Cloudy skies made the attendance one of the smallest of the meeting.

Racing patrons at Tijuana appeared undisturbed at the government order at 6 o'clock and the attendance was average. The Falconer captured the feature event, a claiming race at a mile, with Isaman second and Betty Maloney third.

Jefferson Park at New Orleans opened a 35-day meeting with My Best Girl, paying $31.30 for $2, winning the fourth easily from Ferrash and Nettie Sweep. Ferrash was the favorite in the dash of 5 1-2 furlongs. The time was 1:05 4-5.

FOUR TEAMS SIGN FOR GRANGE'S FOOTBALL LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Feb. 17—(AP)—The American League of Professional Football clubs, sponsored by Red Grange and his manager, C. C. Pyle, was launched today with the admission of four teams and the filing of franchise bids by several others, three of whom were conditionally admitted.

Teams formally put on the roster of the new organization, with their sponsors were New York, Pyle and Grange; Philadelphia, Dr. J. G. Striegel and other interests; Milwaukee, Frank Mulkern, Johnny Bryan, E. A. Wetzel, and the Milwaukee Football and Athletic association; Newark, New Jersey, W. J. Cougiln and the New Jersey Athletic association.

The three clubs taken on conditionally were from St. Louis, J. W Yates; Cleveland, G. T. Jones, and F. B. Garden; Boston, John McCurdy.

Further consideration of the tentatively accepted teams and the selections of others to complete a circuit of ten is set for tomorrow. Chicago, Detroit and Brooklyn are the cities regarded as most likely to be taken in.

Five different interests appeared today in quest of a Chicago franchise, according to Pyle's plans, a franchise will be issued to the team sponsored on the Pacific coast by George Wilson, Washington All-American player.

DELANEY WILL MEET McTIGUE ON MARCH 12TH

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—Jack Delaney and Mike McTigue, rival contenders for Paul Berlenbach's light heavyweight title, both signed today for a 12-round match at Madison Square Garden on March 12 with the understanding that the winner will meet the champion.

The match was made by garden promoters after a ruling favorable to the elimination test made by the state athletic commission. Previously the commission had ruled that McTigue should have the next opportunity to win Berlenbach's title without any preliminaries.

Delaney immediately was installed a favorite over McTigue by experts because of the Bridgeport battler's more impressive record against Berlenbach. Delaney knocked out the present light heavyweight ring two years ago and lost a close decision to him last December. Berlenbach won his title from McTigue last May by a 15-round decision.

THUNBERG TO SAIL FOR HOME TODAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—Clas Thunberg of Finland, Olympic speed skating champion, booked passage today on the steamer United States, sailing tomorrow for Stockholm, after declining requests that he extend his tour of this country. Among the invitations to him was one to compete in the New Jersey championships at Long Branch, N. J., next Sunday.

Thunberg ended his North American invasion yesterday at Saranac Lake, N. Y., by completing his defeat of Charles Jewtraw in a series of special races. The Finn won six out of seven events contested with Jewtraw and set world's records in four of them.

These victories comprised Thunberg's only real conquest here. He was defeated twice indoors at Madison Square Garden besides being badly beaten in championships at St. Johns, N. B., and Binghamtop, N. Y.

JEWETT CITY PROS LOSE TO CHENEY TEAM BY MARGIN OF ONE BASKET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Feb. 17—In a fast and free-scoring game here tonight the Jewett City Pros lost to the Cheney silk team of South Manchester for the second time this season by the small margin of one basket, the score being 43 to 40. Jewett City looked like a sure winner in the first half of the game, the score being 24 to 8 in favor of the locals. The Silkmen then launched a fierce attack and before the midpoint in the game was reached the Jewett City boys lead by only six points.

The second half was nip and tuck, the visitors slowly creeping up on the locals and finally passing them a few minutes before the final whistle terminated the game. Mullins and Kerr, South Manchesters fleet forwards, starred and between them score 13 goals. For Jewett City Mills and Benjamin led the attack, mills shooting 7 baskets and Benjamin six.

In the preliminary game the Fisk Red Tops won from the Bears 28 to 14. The summary:

KILLINGLY DOWNS FIVE FROM PLAINFIELD HIGH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Feb. 17—Killingly threw her entire basketball squad into the game with Plainfield High here tonight and emerged a winner by a score of 26 to 16. Plainfield's forward line was weak and the Killingly guards kept them well covered through out the game. Plainfield scored but 4 baskets from the floor the remaining eight points being made on fouls.

Killingly played well after the first half which was slow and uninteresting. There was more action in the second half and Killingly forged so far out in front that it was a hopeless cause for the visitors.

Plainfield scored a sweet revenge when the girls' basketball team completely overwhelmed the locals 51 to 4 in a game where the visiting girls swept the floor at will. The summary:

POETRY

My Fatherland

The imperial boy had failed in his pride
Before the gates of golden Babylon.
The host, who deemed that priceless treasure won,
For many a day since then had wandered wide.
By famine thinned, by savage hordes defied,
In a deep vale, beneath the setting sun
They saw at last a swift black river run,
While shouting spearmen thronged the farther side.

Then eagerly, with startled, joyous eyes
Toward the desponding chief a soldier flew;
"I was a slave in Athens, never knew
My native country; now I understand
The meaning of yon wild barbarians cries.
And I believe this is my fatherland."

This glimpse have we no more. Did parents fond,
Brothers, or children hail his late return
Or did he, doubly exiled, only yearn
To greet the Euxine's waves at Trebisond.

The blue Aegean, and Pallas' towers beyond
Mute is the record. We shall never learn,
But as once more the well-worn page I turn,
Forever by reluctant schoolboys conned.
A parable to me the tale appears,
Of blacker waters in a drearier vale.
Ah me! When on the brink we exiles stand,
As earthly lights and mortal accents fail,
Shall voices long forgotten reach our ears,
To tell us we have found our fatherland

The Whirlwind Road

The muses wrapped in mystics of light
Came in a rush of music on the night.
And I was lifted wildly on quick wings
And borne away into the deep of things.
The dead doors of my being broke apart;
A wind of rapture blew across my heart.
The inward song of worlds rang still and clear;
I felt the Mystery the Uses fear;
Yet they went swiftening on the ways untrod,
And hurled me breathless at the feet of God.

I felt faint touches of the Final Truth,—
Moments of trembling love, moments of youth.
A vision swept away the human wall;
Slowly I saw the meaning of it all—
Meaning of life, and time, and death, and birth,—
But can not tell it to the men of earth.
I only point the way, and they must go
The whirlwind road of song if they would know.

—Edward Markham

A Lynn (Mass.) man serving a sentence in the Salem jail for stealing a light overcoat from Fred H. Ford, of Lynn, received a present of a heavy overcoat from Ford, the Boston Globe relates. Ford brought the coat to the jail and said that he felt sorry for the man, especially as he had heard that his term was up the day before Christmas and that he would have no overcoat when he left jail. The fall coat stolen from Ford was recovered three days after the theft.

There were once three species of pumpkins and squashes: now there are by actual count exactly 67 named varieties recognized by horticulturists. To untangle the botanical riddle presented by this situation was the task that Dr. E. F. Castetter, of Iowa State College, set for himself. He has arranged the 67 varieties in three groups, each under the head of the original species from which it sprang. Thus Cucurbita pepo is recognized as the ancestor of all pumpkins, scallops vegetables marrows and crooknecks squashes. Cucurbita maxima gave rise to the Hubbard squashes, orange marrows, turbans and a number of fancy varieties. Cucurbita moschata is the original stock of the cushaws and large cheese varieties, with some others.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Rabbit Is Cross

Jokes are jokes, somehow or other,
Only when they're on another.
—Mr. Mocker.

Peter Rabbit was excited. It was a long time since he had been so excited. He was so excited he couldn't keep still. He knew that the safest place for him at that time of day was in the bramble tangle on the edge of the Green Forest where he was then sitting. But he couldn't stay there. He just couldn't stay there, and that was all there was to it. Can you guess why? Well, over in the Old Orchard toward Farmer Brown's house a voice—a cheery voice—was singing "Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!" It was Welcome Robin's spring greeting. Do you wonder that Peter couldn't keep still?

Never had Welcome Robin returned from the Sunny South quite so early. At least, Peter couldn't remember that he ever had. It must mean that sweet Mistress Spring was on her way and would arrive extra early. Peter thrilled all over as he listened to that "Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!" How good it would be to have gentle Sister Southwind sweep away all the snow, and how very, very good it would be to have tender, green things to eat once more. Do you wonder that Peter thrilled all over as he listened?

But listening wasn't enough. He must see Welcome Robin. Yes, sir, he must see Welcome Robin. He wanted to be the very first to see Welcome Robin. So, though he knew it was a very foolish thing to do, Peter left the safety of the bramble tangle and scampered up through the Old Orchard, lipperty-lipperty-lip, as fast as his legs could take him. He did hope that Welcome Robbin would not fly away before he got there.

Looking up as he ran, Peter finally saw a bird on the tip-top twig of an apple tree. It was just the place that Welcome Robin would choose. When he first arrives he always delights in sitting in the top of a tree while he sends his message of cheer to all who will listen. "There he is!" exclaimed Peter under his breath, and ran faster.

When he got directly beneath the tree and looked up he saw only Mocker the Mocking Bird looking down at him. "Where's Welcome Robin?" gasped Peter, quite out of breath.

Mocker pretended to be surprised. "Is Welcome Robin here?" he exclaimed. "I haven't seen him."

"Of course, he is here!" exclaimed Peter. "He was right over here a few minutes ago. If you haven't seen him, you must have heard him, or else there is something wrong with your hearing."

"I haven't seen him and I haven't heard him," said Mocker. "That's funny. I've been here all the time."

"Is Welcome Robin here?" he asked

Peter sat down and stared up at Mocker. "You've been here all the time and mean to tell me that you didn't hear Welcome Robin?"

"Yes," said Mocker, "I've been here all the time and I didn't hear Welcome Robin. But never mind, Peter, let me say to you what Welcome Robin would say if he were here: 'Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer!'"

Peter almost fell over backward in his surprise. It was Welcome Robin's voice, but it was coming from the mouth of Mocker the Mocking Bird. Then Mocker began to laugh—how he did laugh! Peter grew angry. He grew very, very angry. He didn't like having a joke played on him. He quite forgot that only a short time before he had said that he couldn't understand why any one should be angry over a joke which wasn't a bad joke. He had said that he didn't mind having a joke played on him, and now he was so angry that he stamped his feet at Mocker, and Mocker laughed harder than ever.

ST. ALBANS MAN SPEAKS ON TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS

With President E. A. Harris presiding and Richard L. Tarrant acting as song-leader a very enthusiastic meeting of the Norwich Rotary club was held on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. The meeting was featured by two very interesting talks, one by E. LaRue Bliven, on "The Romance of the Uncas Paper Co.", and the other by John T. Cushing of St. Albans, Vt., a representative of the Railroad Presidents conference who spoke of Transportation Problems.

At the business session it was voted to instruct the programme committee of the club as a committee to take charge of the arrangements for Ladies' Night which will be held on the evening of April 14th.

At the meeting one of the guests was William J. Fortune of the Shawmut National Bank of Boston who spoke to the Chamber of Commerce meeting on Tuesday evening. Mr. Fortune spoke briefly regarding business conditions in New England.

Uncas Paper Co. History

E. LaRue Bliven was the five-minute speaker of the day and reviewed the history of the Uncas Paper Co., which was at one time one of Norwich's best paying industrial plants. Mr. Bliven said in part:

This is to be a synopsis of the doings of the old Uncas Paper Mill from the time it was organized up to the present time. I won't vouch for all the dates being exactly right but I think they will be near enough right for our use.

The Uncas Board Co., was organized in the year 1893 to operate in the town of Norwich, situated on the west bank of the Thames river just below the city line, or at least it was supposed to be below the city line for ten years, and then Solamon Lucas discovered that the city line extended as far down as Perch rock, and that being the case the Uncas had to pay city taxes as well as town.

Some of the original directors were, Col. H. H. Osgood, Adam Reid, E. R. Thompson, John Mitchell and Frank W. Browning. Mr. Thompson was the first president, Mr. Browning was the organizer of the business and also secretary, treasurer and general manager. The object of the Uncas Paper mill was the manufacture of news board, chip board, fibre board, card middles, jacquard, Manila lined and patent coated boards. The general foundation of these grades of board was old newspapers, over issue mill ground wood and sulphite or wood fibre. The Uncas mill was one of the first mills to use newspapers as the foundation for card board.

The first building that was built was constructed of wood, and the first machine that was installed was a 90-inch machine made by Smith & Winchester in South Windham, Conn. This was considered a very large machine in those days with an output of about 18 tons in 24 hours. This machine cost about $20,000, to install, and was especially good in manufacturing the heavier weights of board. From the start the mill was successful and in a short while a second machine was added, to be placed in the original wooden building. This second machine was a second hand machine and was bought from a mill in New York city, this machine was manufactured by Black & Clausson, and had a trim of 72 inches; the price paid for it was $6,000.

The mill had been running several years and was paying dividends to its stock holders and had a good demand for its product. In the year 1898 it was decided to build a new mill much larger than the first, to be constructed of brick and steel and was located just south of the original mill. The first machine to be bought for the new mill was manufactured by Pussy & Jones of Wilmington, Del., and had a trim of 132 inches. This machine cost about $40,000 and was the very last word in board making equipment. This No. 3 machine, as it was known, has been one of the best machines that was ever made for the better grades of board; other machines made by the same company, of the same kind, haven't been able to produce the high grade of board that this machine has been turning out for years. The mill continued to produce a high quality of board and the demand was so great for their product that they were able to get a premium of two to three dollars a ton over the market price.

In 1902 it was decided to install a fourth machine in the new mill, and this new machine was to manufacture much thinner grades of board than the three previous machines, the new machine was manufactured by Pussy & Jones and was to trim 120 inches and at that time the largest machine in the world making card board. The cost of this machine was $50,000. Instead of being a cylinder machine which makes a board with the grain all running one way, the same as the first three machines, this last machine was to be a Fourdrinier machine, which makes a board with the grain going both ways, or in others words, the fibre or strength of the board is just as great length ways as cross ways.

Trouble With New Machine

Here is where the mill had its first serious trouble; they could not get the new grade of board to run through the machine without breaking, and day after day saw them carting the broken unfinished board back to the beaters to be reground and come through the machines again.

The machine tenders were sent into other mills where Fourdrinier machines were running, to see if they could find out what was wrong with their machine; they even went so far as to hire new crews that had successfully operated Fourdrinier machines in other mills, but with all their trouble and expense they could not make that No. 4 machine produce board, so it was finally changed over to a cylinder machine, and from that time on everything was lovely and the goose hung high.

Product Sold Abroad

In the summer of the year 1900, Mr. Browning made a trip abroad for the purpose of locating one or two large consumers out of the country. In England he was able to sell Lever Bros., large quantities of board to be used in packing Sunlight soap and for advertising purposes. Some of this board was shipped as far as Australia, but most of it was shipped to Liverpool, England. The mill continued to be very prosperous, paying dividends to its stockholders as high as 20 per cent. per annum. E. R. Thompson was followed in the presidency of Col. Osgood and later by Adam Reid.

Mill Was Sold

In the year 1904 the mill was sold out to a combine known as the United Box Board & Paper Co. Personally I have always thought this was a great mistake, as the mill had been, and was at that time a paying investment.

A man by the name of Barber, who was president of the Diamond Match Co., was made president of The United Box Board & Paper Co. Mr. Browning was given a position as buyer for the combine with offices in New York city, and also continued as manager of the Uncas Mill, spending two days a week in Norwich.

In 1908 Mr. Browning was succeeded as manager of the Uncas mill by a gentleman whose name was Job Taylor. Job had a number of letters after his name, which had been conferred upon him at Oxford, Cambridge and a few other universities, but what he didn't know about running a paper mill would fill a large book.

American Straw Board in Control

About this time the American Straw Board Co., got control of the combine and for several years the combine was ruled by one concern and then the other. I think the only dividend that was ever paid by either one of these concerns was one dividend of one per cent. and I have always understood that the money was borrowed to pay that with. The combine was made up of 15 or 20 mills but with the exception of the Uncas and a mill at Piermont, N. Y. the others were second rate affairs, and the two good mills weren't good enough to overcome the losses of the other mills.

About 1916 the combine gave up the ghost and sold the Uncas mill to a concern known as the Ironsides Board Corp. This concern was made up of Canadian capitalists and they operated the mill through the war period when chip board went from $20 to $110 per ton. This concern operated the mill until 1919 when they sold out to a New York concern known as Schuttleworth & Keeler, which concern brought a large folding box plant here to Norwich which operated in part of the Uncas plant and this concern was known as The Kolb Carton Co.

Bought at Peak Prices

Schuttleworth & Keeler bought the Uncas Mill when everything was at peak prices; this condition changed very shortly after Schuttleworth & Keeler assumed control of the mill, and in about a month's time chip board which had been selling at $110 per ton dropped to $30 per ton, and with it dropped Schuttleworth & Keelers chances of ever being able to float the mill.

They were finally compelled to turn the mill over to the banks, which same banks shortly after put the mill up at auction and it was sold to a man by the name of James Smith of Baltimore. Mr. Smith got a mill that was presumably worth from a million to a million and a half dollars for $208,000. Mr. Smith renamed the mill the Uncas Paper Board Co., and started to make improvements. I have understood that he spent about $400,000 in this way. Board was selling at a low price and Mr. Smith could not make money fast enough to meet his obligations, so his creditors appealed to a judge of the superior court to appoint a receiver to handle the affairs of the mill and Frank W Browning was appointed to fill that position.

There have been and are certain other concerns in this same line of business which have been anxious to get hold of the Uncas Paper Mill and dismantle it, principally to take their product out of the eastern market. The mill as it stands today is able to produce about 150 tons of board per day. We all know what happens to the price of any commodity when competition is taken away.

I should not care to see the Uncas Paper Mill cease to exist. Mr. Browning filled the position of reciver for several months but was finally ordered by the court to put the mill up at auction once more, which was done, and on the first day of February, 1926, the mill was sold to a gentleman from Montreal for the sum of $250,000.

Mr. Browning Successful Manager

The Uncas mill has had a great many managers but of them all Mr. Browning is the only man who has ever successfully operated the mill. And I have always hoped that some way might be provided so that he could once more get control of this plant and keep a splendid concern for Norwich, in Norwich.

Give Transportation Talk

Following the talk by Mr. Bliven, President Harris introduced Mr. Cushing who is a member of the St. Albans's Rotary club. Mr. Cushing showed vividly the conditions that the railroads have to meet and the benefit to the manufacturing centers of railroad transportation. In his talk he said that there was a time when the railroads or anyone connected with them was in bad repute but today there is an entirely different attitude. It seems that the less knowledge one has of the railroad conditions the more likely he is to knock the railroad. The majority of people regard the railroad simply through freight and passenger rates, not taking into consideration the cost of maintenance and the investment involved. There is not a railroad that is turning in six per cent on the investment which it will be admitted is not an enormous profit.

A railroad aims to do three things, provide cars for the shipper on time, get them through to their destination with all possible speed and to see that there is as little damage as possible to the goods in transit. In 1925 the railroads supplied 99 per cent of the cars asked for by shippers and the rapidity of movement of freight was materially increased, thereby saving the shippers millions of dollars. The damage in transit was greatly reduced due to increased efficiency in handling the freight.

Railroad ownership should be an economic rather than a political matter. Government control would mean that when one section or industry in the country sought relief through political channels and secured it another section would be hit. The railroads are trying to give the best service possible to every community with equal fairness to every section. Government ownership would not better the user of the railroad in any way and I think the public would suffer far greater if the railroads were under political control.

Occasionally a small boy tries to keep clean so that he won't have to be washed.

PETER M. ROSE KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO TRUCK

WESTERLY, R. I., Feb. 17—The sudden death of Peter M. Rose, one of Westerly's best known barbers and a resident of 8 Rose avenue, occurred shortly before 1 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, when he was hit by an automobile truck in front of the residence at 21 Canal street. The truck belongs to the Westerly Ice company and was operated by Percy L. Perry, of 45 Pierce street.

Mr. Rose was returning to his work accompanied by his daughter Mary, when the accident happened. According to information given the police who were investigating the accident Mr. Rose and his daughter were walking in the highway between a team wagon of L. C. Purtill and the Westerly Ice company truck. It is claimed that Perry sounded the horn on the automobile and that the Rose girl left the highway, and just as Mr. Rose started to step to one side he was hit by the machine.

The surface of the highway at the point where the accident occurred showed no blood stains or did the automobile and it is thought Mr. Rose's head came in contact with the ground with such force as to cause death. The body was removed to the undertaking rooms of Leo C. Gaffney, on Canal street, where an examination was made by Dr. M. H. Scanlon, who was called into the case. Dr. Scanlon, who is medical examiner, found that death was due to violence to the head from without, and possible internal injuries to the chest. As there were a number of eye witnesses no autopsy at coroner's inquest will be called for.

Peter M. Rose was a native of Italy, born in that country 57 years ago. He came to this country 40 years ago and for the past 37 years had made his home in Westerly. He was a well known citizen here, being active in the Italian organizations of the town. He had been employed as a barber here practically since he came to Westerly, except for the time that he conducted a barbershop on Main street and later on Canal street.

He is survived by his wife, Maritta Rose, and two children, Mary and Joseph. There are a number of surviving children by a former marriage.

At Wednesday's session of the superior court for Washington county, Associate Justice Arthur P. Sumner on the bench, the attorney general's docket was first taken up when Frank E. Gorman, arraigned on an indictment which charged larceny, withdrew his former plea of not guilty and pleaded nolo. The case was continued for sentence. The case of State vs. John Zuzu was called and defaulted. A capias for Zuzu was ordered by the court. Zuzu, who was indicted Monday on a false pretense charge, is implicated with Gorman in the deal involving a sale of poultry by Charles M. Hall, Hope Valley farmer, to Providence parties, in which transaction, it is alleged, a worthless check was tendered by the purchasers.

Zuzu was thrice called to come into court by Deputy Sheriff Bull, to declare his bond forfeited.

Thomas Madison, charged with reckless driving, was arraigned and entered a plea of nolo. The case was continued for sentence.

The case of State vs. Giacomo Ricci, one of the men arrested in connection with the campaign against South County roadhouses, judgment was entered for the penal sum of the bond.

The cases of Abbie J. Morrow vs. Charles P. Clark and Elizabeth M. Smith vs. Arthur McGuire were assigned to Westerly.

Petty jurors were examined as to their qualifications. When thirty talesmen remained qualified for duty and were sworn, by T. P. Nichols of Westerly, making affirmation, William H. Tefft of North Kingstown and Albert E. Palmer, Hopkinton, not answering to their names and Robert M. Mills of Charlestown now being called, were excused. Jesse P. Lawton, clerk of Westerly told the court that he had neglected to register last year and Robert Drysdale, plumbing contractor also of Westerly said he was over 70 years of age and not electing to serve, both were excused from further jury duty by Judge Sumner.

At 11:35 o'clock the first jury trial case was taken up. It was an action at law in which two cases were tried as one, being George Downing vs. Malcolm Harvey, alias and Estelle Geneva Downing vs. Malcolm Harvey, an automobile damage suit in claim for damages sustained by being struck by an automobile. The parties to the suit were residents of South Kingstown and the accident occurred on the evening of Nov. 16, 1924, on High street, Peacedale, R. I.

Jurymen were called as follows:

Charles S. Adams, South Kingstown, excused; Charles W. Tandy, North Kingstown; Charles Bachelder, Hopkinton; Edward J. Butler, Westerly; Frederick R. Gould, South Kingstown; Gillette R. Franklin, North Kingstown; Harry H. Hoxsie, Hopkinton; Henry W. Sutcliffe, Westerly, excused; William J. Geary, Westerly; Hugh A. Dunning, Westerly named as foreman; Howard V. Kenyon, North Kingstown; Hiram C. Matterson, Narragansett, excused; Chester A. Sherman, Richmond; George G. Mitchell, Westerly; Oliver W. Green, South Kingstown, excused; Thomas P. Nichols, Westerly, excused and Kenneth C. Chappell, Narragansett. After the morning session and noon hour were passed the spare jurors were excused to report Friday.

Before an interested audience on Tuesday evening in the Broad Street High school hall was presented the three-act play, "The Ladies of Cranford," by an amateur cast of characters, and under the auspices of the Red Rose Troop of Girl Scouts.

The cast, comprising 12 members of the troop, follows: Matilda Jenkyns (the rector's daughter), Ruth Thompson; Mary Smith (a visitor), Mildred Fisher; Jessie Brown (a new resident) Susie Brooker; Miss Pole (a friend of Miss Jenkyns), Dorothy Carr; Mrs. Forrester (born a Tyrrell), Marjorie Chapman; Betty Barber (a retired milliner), Grace Thompson; the Hon. Mrs. Jamieson (a leader in society), Dagmar Smith; Martha (maid to Miss Jenkyns), Cecelia Bailey; Peggy (maid to Miss Barker), Mary Conway; Mrs. Jurkis (a country woman), Myrtle Evans; Little Susan, Ira Supplita; Jennie (a customer), Mary Marshall.

Mrs. William C. Clarke directed the play, assisted by Troop captain, Mrs. Raymond H. Hiscox, Mrs. Willard H. Burns, Miss H. Louise Ayers and Mrs. William C. Thompson.

Not much progress is reported toward recovery in the condition of Robert Collins, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Leo Nye, of 119 Main street, who was struck by an automobile in front of his home at about 11 o'clock Monday morning and who was taken Wednesday afternoon to the Westerly hospital for an X-ray examination and further treatment. He is suffering from internal injuries and painful bruises on the face and scalp.

C. Palmer Chapman of Avondale, R. I., returned home Wednesday afternoon from Springfield, Mass., where as Master of Rhode Island State Grange he attended the monthly board of managers meeting of the national grange.

John O. Mills and son, Olcott G. Mills, left Westerly Wednesday morning for a business visit in Boston.

Charles A. Morgan and Joseph U. McFarland returned to Westerly on Wednesday afternoon from Providence.

Rev. A. E. Davis of Ashaway was a visitor in Providence on Tuesday.

Man's failure in this world may often be attributed to the fact that he used blank cartridges when firing at the target of success.

EKONK
(STERLING HILL)

Gangs of men are working each day trying to open up the roads which have been filled by snow drifts since the last snow storm.

A severe rainstorm visited us Sunday afternoon ending with an electrical storm in the evening.

Helen Congdon is employed in a store in Danielson.

Byron P. Young, who has been on the sick list, is improving and is able to go outdoors a short time each day.

The schools observed Lincoln's birthday with appropriate exercises, also exchanged Valentines.

Byron P. Young and John E. Tanner attended a meeting of the school board in Sterling last week.

NEW LONDON STORE ROBBED WHEN OWNER RESPONDS TO TELEPHONE CALL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 17. — David Schneider, proprietor of a glass and hardware store at 196 Main street, was robbed this evening and in a rather suspicious manner, for it appears that the robbery was perpetuated by one or more persons, who had knowledge of his business conduct.

Shortly after 8 o'clock a telephone message was received at the store of S. Schaefner, next north of the Schneider establishment requesting that Schneider be called to the telephone. Schaefner went to the Schneider store and summoned the latter to the telephone. While the party that called Schneider on the phone engaged the merchant in conversation, the thief entered the store, which was without occupant, and going to the cash register removed all the money, a sum stated to be between $27 and and $8. When Schneider returned to the store he immediately inspected the cash register only to find that the money had been stolen. Schneider reported his loss at the police headquarters and Patrolman George Perkins was assigned to the case. The investigation of the officer makes it possible to anticipate an arrest within a day or two.

FLICK CASE IS ASSUMING LARGER PORPORTIONS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 17—Mrs. Helen Parzyck Flick, 19, wife of Eugene M. Flick, a sailor stationed at the Submarine Base, and her companion, Miss Myrtle Hunt, 18, residing at 11 Brewer street, were arrested this afternoon by Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith charged with lascivious carriage. They were unable to procure a surety on their respective bonds of $200 and were locked up pending being given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

The girls were arrested following their having made a lengthy confession of their conduct during their residence in New London the past few weeks and as a result of their confessions, Tony Caldrello, 40 Pearl street, a public service operator, who was arrested yesterday, was arraigned in the police court this morning charged with using his automobile for purposes of prostitution. His case was continued until next Saturday morning and he furnished a surety on his bond for his appearance at the later date.

The confessions of the girls has implicated and revealed the identity of eight men, who have enjoyed their company, and if the stories related by the girls become public property some prominent men will be brought into the limelight and it is possible that prosecutions will result.

The entire revelation of the habits and practices of the girls was brought about through a fight that started at the Brewer street residence last Sunday night between Flick and his wife The couple were married last December by Justice of the Peace Perry J. Hollanderasky and who will prosecute the couple, whom he united in wedlock, when court sits tomorrow. Flick alleges that his wife remains away from home much of the time and it was because of that act that he quarreled with the girl last Sunday night. During the quarrel the girl hurled a dinner plate at Flick and as a result he is now displaying a lacerated nose. The fight became so serious that the police were summoned by the landlady, and officers brought the couple to the police station. There both Flick and his wife talked much, so much so that Mrs. Flick and her girl companion are now facing a jail sentence for their conduct as is revealed by their signed confessions. The girls were grilled nearly three days by Sergeants Cavanaugh and Smith and during that period of time they related their exploits with sailors and civilians.

POLICE OUT TO "GET" JAMES E. JACKSON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 17—The police are after the proprietor of the house at 12 Richards street and claim they have evidence that will "get" him. Last night the police received a complaint that Sam Litvin had been received of $214 there and there was something doing immediately. The police went to the house and found the proprietor, James E. Jackson and his wife and four colored men alleged to have been frequenters of the house. The claim is that intoxicating liquor had been sold in the place and that it was a disorderly house. It was alleged also that Litvin had been assaulted. The parties were arraigned in the police court this morning, but the accused were not prepared to go on with the case as they had employed an attorney and he was not familiar with the facts. The case was continued till Saturday next when all the evidence in the possession of the police and Litvin will be disclosed. The house has been under suspicion some time, but until last night evidence against the place was not obtained. The reputation of the place as detailed by the police is such as is disreputable. Jackson and his wife are colored, and the men accused as frequenters are colored with the exception of Litvin.

DONOVAN DENIES THAT HE SIGNED FORGED CHECK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Feb. 17—Daniel J. Donovan of Groton, was arraigned in the police court this morning charged with having forged the name of Mrs. William Knowles, a resident at 56 Mitchell street, Groton, to a check for $22.50. It is represented that Donovan has been a roomer at the Knowles home and that he had the opportunity to get possession of the check. He denies that he is guilty and tells a somewhat uncertain story that another man named Donovan signed the name of Mrs. Knowles to the check as endorsement and cashed it. Donovan was committed to jail as he could not furnish a bail bond of $1,000 so he can explain the matter through an attorney tomorr.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Finn Theatre—Jewett City

All roads are sure going to lead to the Finn theatre, when the next old time fiddlers' contest is announced.

George Rathbun and Edmond Beshard are to be the contestants, with honors standing even so far. At the last contest, the uncertainty of the volume of applause made it impossible to pick the winner. Both men are over 60 years of age and for skill, old time melody and slap stick fiddle stun's, they can't be beaten in this section. Three judges, all musicians, have been selected by the management and this time they will select the winner. The fiddling exhibition is complimentary to the theatre's patrons, for there will be the usual screen features.

Palace Theater

Rin Tin Tin, the wonder dog of the screen in the "Clash of the Wolves," five acts of Paramount Vaudeville, is the program of the Palace starting this afternoon. The vaudeville will feature Lowe & Sargent Revue, Kendy & Tate, comedy singing, Kelly & Jean, comedy team and two other acts. Rin Tin Tin who is a big favorite at the Palace will be seen in one of the best pictures he has made up to date. The story is laid in the Southwest Cattle Country and Rin Tin Tin plays the role of Lobo, the wolf, who is one of the pack that is driven from the forest by a tremendous fire and who comes down upon the cattle country ravaging and spreading terror. Rin Tin Tin as Lobo is the leader of the pack and who is be-friended by a beautiful girl and who in turn shows his friendship to her when the time comes to rescue her from the hands of the villian. The old time fiddlers will hold the stage again tonight and many of the old local favorites are entered and will compete for the cash prize.

Bread Theatre

Though Norma Shearer has been elevated to stardom by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the actress declares she never intends to rest on her laurels and play straight leads in which she has nothing to do but "be herself."

The pictures in which she has played character roles have been Miss Shearer's favorites. In "Lady of the Night," her work in the title role was commended by all the critics, and as the Swedish peasant girl in "The Tower of Lies," she had a role that offered unusual opportunities for characterization.

Norma has the most unusual role of her career in "His Secretary," the Hobart Henley production which is coming to the Breed theatre Sunday. In the first few reels of the picture, she essays the role of a homely stenographer and has employed such eccentric makeup and costumes that all her beauty is concealed.

Even in the latter part of the picture, when she blossoms out as a butterfly, traces of the original character remain, though her appearance is in marked contrast to the homely girl of the first half of the picture.

Lew Cody is appearing with Miss Shearer in "His Secretary," and in the cast are Willard Louis, Mabel Van Buren, Gwen Lee, Karl Dane, Estelle Clark and Ernest Gillen.

Broadway Theatre

A new program of Keith Albee vaudeville opens at the Broadway theatre. Five superlative acts are featured, every one a standard hit.

Drama, real and potent, is something that is often spoken of, but seldom brought forward in the theatre, either on the screen or in the legitimate theatre.

There is always, however, the exception to the rule, and one of those rare exceptions will come when "Free to Love" the B. P. Schulberg production, featuring Clara Bow and Donald Keith is shown at the Broadway theatre commencing today.

With a cast that includes such fine actors as Raymond McKee, Hallam Cooley and Charles Hill Mailes and Winter Hall, to support the inimitable Clara Bow, this picture tells the story of a young girl's effort to live down a past—shady through no fault of her own, who is ready to make the supreme sacrifice for her own loved one.

If it's drama with a punch that is asked for this picture has it with an abundance.

If it is the real love drama that is the desire, "Free to Love" is about the finest example of the type possible.

It would be well to remember what a sensational hit was made by Clara Bow and Donald Keith in The Plastic Age. Here they are again in their latest smashing success.

Connecticut College Concert

At a recent chat in his New York hotel, Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist whose art will be enjoyed on Tuesday night, February 23 at Bulkeley auditorium, New London, told the following story of a photographic joke.

"I was touring in Europe a few years ago and when we reached England one of my photographic friends posed for what he considered a funny picture. It showed Cortot, the French pianist, at the violin; Pablo Casals, the Spanish cellist, at the piano and myself, the violinist playing the 'cello.

"To make matters worse the manager of the concert hall in which we played did not receive the proper advertising material and placed a great enlargement of the freak picture outside the concert hall entrance.

"The audience was very large and many of them honestly believed that we were actually able to change our instruments and give trio recitals alternately as pianists, violinists and 'cellists. To add to the public deception, two youthful critics wrote articles raving about the virtuosity and versatility of the Cortot-Thibaud-Casals trio in being able to change over night and at a moments notice. Unfortunately no credit was given to the photographer's imagination, the real cause of all the excitement."

As a matter of actual fact, Messrs. Cortot, Casals and Thibaud are pianists of no ordinary merit.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale at Starr Bros., drug store, State street, tomorrow.

Wives wonder why husbands are so pegrive and husbands wonder why their wives are so expensive.

Coming to the Palace

On Sunday Drusilla With a Million which as a story, was read by ten million people and is hailed by critics and newspapers as another "Over the Hill" will start a four days run. Mary Carr who had the mother role in "Over the Hill" plays the part of the old scrubwoman in the poor house who suddenly becomes a millionairess over night. Miss Carr's role, so the critics say, is greater and she handles it better than she did her famous role in "Over the Hill." The New York Times said Drusilla With a Millon "is a picture that should truly make a million dollars for the theatres because it gives a million dollars worth of entertainment for every type of an audience."

Piano Recital at Westerly

The Westerly Music club, of Westerly, is presenting Percy Grainger, celebrated Australian pianist, in recital at the new United theatre, on Wednesday evening, February 24. The club feels that it is performing a service for music-lovers in Norwich, New London and nearby towns, as well as for Westerly, in securing Mr. Grainger for their public recital, as he is fully booked this season, and comes no nearer this locality than Boston, except for the concert just announced.

His program is interesting, and contains many of the numbers which justly make him one of the most popular pianists of the day. Several of his own well-known compositions are included.

Tickets are on sale at Cranston's at $1 and $1.50 for the reserved seats, and 50 cents for the students' tickets. It is hoped that many Norwich people will take advantage of the opportunity of hearing Grainger when he appears in Westerly.

News About Women In Europe

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Blonde and blueeyed German mannequins are peeved because the crown of model queen rests on the black, bobbed head of an 18 year old lass, Sonja Jovanowitch.

Although a German citizen, Sonja is not a typical German beauty, the frauleins contend. Sonja, however, is not worrying over the criticism for the award, which was made by five German artists at the first annual mannequins' ball, has brought her fame and a contract with the German edition of the Follies.

With her father, court apothecary to the late Czar, and her mother, a native of Serbia, Sonja fled from Russia during the first revolution and settled in Berlin.

Elizabeth Bergner, who has starred two seasons in Shaw's St. Joan is the chief attraction in the cast Max Reinhardt has selected for performances in Moscow and other Russian cities.

Reinhardt will present the series of productions during spring under the sponsorship of the Society of Friends of New Russia.

The Turnverein, an athletic club in Saxe, has decreed notice that women can not wear bobbed hair and continue as members of the organization.

"Women members with bobbed hair must let their hair grow again," the executive committee has ordered, "and the others are warned not to ape this un-German folly of fashion."

Twelve Thousand Clocks

The other day the thousandth party was taken through the Vienna Museum of Clocks and Watches. It is the largest museum of this kind in the world; in Europe only Geneva and Stutgart can boast of similar collections, but these cannot rival with the one in Vienna. Until 1917 the collection was in the hands of Herr Hugo Kaftan, who is at present director of the museum; but it was not till 1932 that the public was able to see it, after it had been properly housed and arranged. The museum is not only charming in itself, but of historic and cultural importance, imagine the ticking and occasional chiming of some 12,000 clocks and watches, the gurgling and other strange noises of many centuries-old clocks before they strike. No fewer than 10,000 of the exhibits were handed over by Herr Kaftan—his private collection. The other 2,000 were presented by the municipality of Vienna. Specimens of every kind of clock and watch from the beginning of the sixteenth century are to be seen. Beautifully chiselled watches, old clocks with spindles, curious grandfather clocks, "night-clocks" dating from the seventeenth century, and many rare and complicated specimens, interesting from the technical standpoint, make up a collection unique in its way.

HOWARD W. GREENE'S TEAM WINS OUT IN DANCE CONTEST

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 17—(AP)—Over 1500 people, who crowded all available sitting and standing room and overflowed onto the stage of the New Capitol Theatre, Wednesday night, saw Howard W. Greene of this city in his set defeat the challenger, John B. Ethridge of Eastford and two other teams, in the old fashioned dance contest. Square and contra-dances were executed in the grand old style of 25 years ago, by all the teams. F. Greene's outfit appeared in gowns and suits reminiscent of the days of the square dance. The judges were J. A. Isham of Columbia, Ed Burgess of Lebanon and Constable Wilbur A. Stevens of North Windham. In giving their decision they admitted that the contest had been very closely fought. The other contesting teams besides those headed by Mr. Greene and Mr. Ethridge were led by John Wadsworth of Mansfield and C. C. Lonsbury of this city. Intermediate programs during the contest featured many oldtimers. Opening the program, Eugene Maynard, 55, of Lebanon, champion fiddler of Connecticut was introduced to the audience and met a salvo of applause. He played Turkey in the Straw and to encores responded with Washing Day and the Girl I Left Behind Me, tunes which he had played in winning the championship.

Mr. Maynard then fiddled for the contest with Winifred Thayer of Lebanon, as pianist and announcer. Anon Prohibition. The next in appearance of John T. Collins, 70, of South Chaplin, recognized as among the leading harmonica players in the world and old time vaudeville artist. Mr. Collins played Mocking Bird displaying remarkable ability and Dand Composition No. 6 by Sousa. To urgent calls for an encore he gave a brief but delightfully amusing stump speech on Prohibition. The next ni appearance was Joseph Zagara, who under the tutelage of Milo Lemus of this city has won recognition as a dance prodigy. The boy is five years old. He gave an exhibition Charleston and waltz clog, concluding with a novelty number and a magical stunt which took the house by storm. An exhibition of the genuine old Polka by Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bennett of Phoenixville was also a loudly applauded number. The concluding act, while the judges were in session, was an old Adam dance with Maurice Keese of Hebron, promptor. The prompters for the contest were William Bates of Eastford, directing the Ethridge team and Henry Humes of Hampton, promptly the other teams. The winning dance set, the women members of which received beautiful silk umbrellas as a prize, was composed of the following couples: Mrs. Robert Hannah and William M. Squires of Willimantic, Miss Clara Thompson of Andover and Howard W. Greene of this city, Mr. and Mrs. George LaBonte, Columbia, Miss Thelma Zandecarr and Charles A. Miner, Willimantic, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Walker, this city, Miss Ruth Slater, Columbia and Clarence Seager, this city, the John B. Ethridge set, John B. Ethridge, Mrs. Ida Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett, Elmer W. Howlett and Miss Lola Ethridge, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Curtiss, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Clemons, all of Eastford, John Wadsworth set, Mr. and Mrs. John Wadsworth, Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crostiwaite, this city, Maurice Keefe, Hebron and Helen Greene, Willimantic, Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Potter, this city, Rufus Rathbun and Mrs. Catherine Hannah, Hebron, Bert Greene, Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, this city; the C. C. Lounsbury team, Mr. Lounsbury, Florence Geer, Winfield Andrews and Emma Geer, Arthur Mott and Mrs. Luey Ives, Eugene Marrott, and Helen Maine and Henry Bressler and Mary Crostiwaite and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Baker, all of Willimantic. Special orchestra music was given by the Capitol theatre band. Due to the pressure of an overcrowded auditorium, Manager Bartlett was forced to cause the removal of special stage settings secured for the affair after the introductory number. A bill of motion pictures was furnished as an additional attraction. After the award had been made, Manager George A. Bartlett offered his thanks to those participating and to the audience for their excellent support of the contest.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—(AP)—Backing and filling movements characterized today's stock market which turned sharply upward toward the close on what appeared to be active short covering. Trading, which was confined largely to professionals again showed a marked falling off in volume, the day's sales aggregating only 1,355,600 shares, or nearly 1,000,000 below those during the sharp break on Monday.

Renewal of selling pressure against the equipments was in further reflection of the poor Baldwin joint earnings report. Baldwin was hammered down to 108, a new low for the year, but snapped back to 110, off 1 1-2 on the day American Locomotive closed fractionally lower at 107 after selling down to 103 1-2, American Brake Shoe and Foundry, which is believed to harbor a large short interest because of the loaning demand for the stock, closed 1 5-8 higher at 173 after having touched 171 1-2.

Steel shares held up well in view of the disappointing demand for steel reported by the Weekly Trade Reviews. United States Steel common showed a net gain of 1 1-4 at 130 and Republic closed a point higher at 56 1-2.

Banks called several million dollars in loans during the day, but the call money rate ruled unchanged at 4 3-4 per cent. New offerings today, which exceeded $140,000,000 met with a good reception, prompt oversubscription being reported of the $50,000,000 issue of General Motors Acceptance corporation five per cent. serial gold notes.

Rails displayed a firm undertone, despite the drop in car loadings in the week ended Feb. 6 as compared with the same week last year. Special strength of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, which closed over three points higher at 149 7-8, revived rumors of a special payment to stock holders either in the form of a stock dividend or a distribution of the Glen Alden bond holdings. Atchison, Union Pacific and Seaboard Air Line also closed a point or two higher.

Hudson Motors was run up 4 1-4 points to 117 1-2 largely at the expense of an overcrowded short interest. Other motors followed in its wake, net gain of a point or so being recorded by General Motors, Jordan and White.

American Can was an outstanding strong spot, soaring 6 5-8 points to 218 1-2, or within a point of the record high. Net gains of a point or more also were recorded by such diversified issues as Consolidated Gas, Famous Players, Remington Typewriter, Savage Arms, Tobacco Products, Kelsey Wheel, Kuppenheimer, F. G. Shattuck and Wright Aeroplane.

Among the soft spots scattered throughout the list were American Smelting, Marine preferred, California Packing, S. S. Kresge, Third Avenue railway, United Fruit and Utah Copper, the losses ranging from 1 to 6 points.

Prices of commodities again lacked a uniform trend. Wheat futures sagged about a cent a bushel in sympathy with the lower prices for the commodity in Liverpool. Cotton continued to move within a narrow trading area, closing 5 to 7 points net higher. Coffee advanced 14 to 20 points, but sugar prices were practically unchanged.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Another sharp rally of 50 points in Japanese yen which touched 46 1-4 cents, the highest rate since 1922, featured the firm foreign exchange market. Demand sterling ruled slightly higher around $4.86 and French francs at 3.64 1-3 cents. Polish sloty rallied 40 points to 18.80.

Cross currents of trading resulted in market irregularity in the industrial division. Copper bonds continued their recovery but profit taking continued in oil, steel and local traction bonds.

Trading in foreign and United States government obligations was unusually quiet, although Japanese issues were strengthened slightly by the rise in yen to the highest level of the year.

Many projects involving new financing are under consideration but few have reached the offering stage. Having failed to announce any stock financing at this time, the American telephone company is expected to float a large bond issue in the spring. A $30,000,000 loan for Uruguay within the next month is one of the possibilities in the foreign field.

TAFTVILLE

The property holders of the Merchants avenue and the Hunters avening section gave a chicken supper for the volunteer firemen of Fire company No. 2, at the fire house hall on Merchants avenue, Tuesday evening. Joseph C. Marsan acted as toastmaster, and welcomed those present, giving a brief history of the association and its founders, many of whom were able to be with the gathering that night. Solos were sung by Henri Boudron and J. Omer Tellier, Sr., under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. George Benoit, the following delicious menu was served:

Roast Chicken
Lettuce Celery Rolls
Ice Cream Fancy Cakes Coffee
Cigars

Among the guests were Mayor Milo Waters, Postmaster Casper K. Bailey, Alderman Sweeney, Deputy Fire Chief Taft, Selectman Murray, Selectman Bushnell, Rev. Henri F. Chagnon, Rev. John Malley, Richard B. Snow, A. E. Pingree and Louis J. Fontaine. After the dinner, there were speeches. The supper was served by a committee of the following ladies, Mrs. Mathias Paradis, chairman; Mrs. Gabriel Paquette, Mrs. Frank Mathieu, Mrs. Wilfred Leblanc, Mrs. George Gregory, Mrs. Louis Gregory and Mrs. Edward St. Amour.

The committee of property holders who arranged the pleasant affair was Frank Mathieu, president; Joseph C. Marsan, Edmund Burelle, Chief Louis Paquete and Edmund Proulx.

Harold Tarbuck of Norwich avenue is, as far as known, the only local radio receiving operator that succeeded in "getting" England during international radio week from January 24th to January 30th. Mr. Tarbuck heard the program on his Gilfillan set quite distinctly, but checked up on the program before making his experience public. As a result, he has been awarded an official certificate of verified international reception issued by the Radio Digest. The certificate reads "This certifies that Harold Tarbuck of Taftville, Connecticut, has submitted to the Radio Digest for official verification, evidence of international reception during the international radio week from January 24 to January 30, and this further certifies that the Radio Digest has verified the evidence submitted, by comparing with official confidential data on programs broadcasted by foreign stations cooperating in international radio week." The certificate bears the signature of F. H. Walsh, foreign tests editor.

The Ladies Benevolent society held its regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon in the parlors of the Taftville Congregational church. After the business session at which the president, Miss Gertrude M. Young presided, there was a social hour, refreshments being served by a committee in charge of the afternoon meeting.

The Ash Wednesday services at the Sacred Heart church included the reading of a low mass at 7.30 a. m., and recitation of the rosary, the litany and benediction of the blessed sacrament in the evening. At both services there was distribution of the penitential ashes obtained by burning the palms left over from Palm Sunday. The ashes were applied to the foreheads of the parishioners with the words, "Remember that thou are dust and to dust thou shalt return" in Latin.

Miss Mary Murphy of St. Francis hospital training school of Hartford is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Anthony Murphy of Merchants avenue.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

JUDGE TO CHARGE JURY IN TRIAL BROKER'S SUIT FOR COMMISSION

Before a jury in the superior court at New London with Judge Allyn L. Brown presiding, the trial was held Wednesday in the suit of John A. Moran, Norwich real estate broker, for a commission of $1,950 claimed to be due from the Central Building company of this city for selling the Central building on Broadway to William H. Murphy of this city.

Judge Brown is ready to charge the jury when court comes in this (Thursday) morning as the evidence was concluded Wednesday and the arguments were finished by Attorney Charles V. James for the plaintiff and Attorney Arthur F. Libby for the defendant.

In his suit Mr. Moran alleges that on Nov. 1, 1922, he was employed by the Central Building company to handle the property known as the Central building and in the agreement, all prospective purchasers were to be turned over to him. In the handling of the property, such as collecting the rents, etc., he was to receive a reasonable compensation.

In October, 1924, he alleges that Henry H. Gallup, president of the defendant company, requested him to sell, if possible, to William H. Murphy. He alleges that he went to see Mr. Murphy and Mr. Murphy offered $65,000, which offer he submitted to Mr. Gallup, who, he claims, proceeded to negotiate personally with Mr. Murphy and finally sold the building to him for $65,000. He alleges that on Jan. 6, 1925, the deeds of this property were conveyed to Mr. Murphy. He claims $1950 as his commission for the sale.

The Central Building company denies that they requested Mr. Moran to sell the building and deny that Mr. Moran sold it.

Besides the plaintiff, witnesses called to testify for him were his son, Richard Moran, William H. Murphy, the purchaser, and Archa W. Colt, a real estate agent.

Testimony for the defendant's side of the case was given by Henry H. Gallup, Edwin B. Miner and Walter H. Gallup.

The jury on the trial consists of Frank S. Green, George Ladd, New London; Benjamin A. Brown, William H. Trail, Groton; Angus B. Chesebro, Charles H. Eccleston, John H. Auston, Stonington; Samuel E. Holdridge, J. Kellogg Hall, Ledyard; Archer Beckwith, Waterford; Clifford Clark and Henry B. Morton, East Lyme.

COMFORT CIRCLE'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED ON WEDNESDAY

Comfort circle of the King's Daughters celebrated its 28th birthday Wednesday afternoon by a very enjoyable meeting held at the home of the leader, Mrs. Albert T. Utley on McKinley avenue. Twenty members attended.

A short devotional service was led by Mrs. Utley after which the usual apportionments were voted: $10 to the Margaret Bottome Home, New York and $5 to the Travelers' Aid. The circle was formed Feb. 19th, 1898, with five members, the organizers being Miss Frances Merriman and Miss Ella Utley. An outline of the work of the organization since its beginning was given by the secretary, Mrs. William F. Cole; this showed that the circle has always been active in charitable work, aiding the Sheltering Arms and Backus hospital from the first, furnishing a room in the Johnson Home, etc. The first year of its existence it raised $7.45; the past year the amount was over $110. The present membership is 25.

Following Mrs. Cole's interesting sketch there was a humorous reading by Mrs. E. Walter Phillips. Then the social committee, Mrs. Edward Adams, Mrs. Frank Case and Mrs. Fred Tourtellotte surprised the members with a Washington pie grab bag, each person pulling a string from the huge pie getting a prize. Later there was a game in which a red hatchet was to be pinned on the broken limb of a Washington cherry tree, the most successful in this test being Mrs. Utley. Her reward was a Washington hatchet with a hollow handle filled with candies.

The souvenirs were Washington baskets filled with candy hearts and cherries. The afternoon ended with a lunch of salads, rolls, pickles, ice cream, cake and coffee. Mrs. Utley had decorated the rooms with double and single daffodils and pussy willows. On the dining room table the flowers were yellow calendulas and white freesias, and the candles were yellow. A guest for the day was a former member of the circle, Miss Hemmings.

Mrs. Utley's cordial hospitality was greatly appreciated by the members of the circle.

ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICES ARE LARGELY ATTENDED

Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, the mass in St. Patrick's church at 8 o'clock was attended by a large congregation, while the evening devotions also attracted a great assemblage to the church. In the morning, the palms remaining from Palm Sunday were burned and the ashes blessed by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, who was assisted in their distribution by Rev. John J. Reilly. The members of the congregation moved up the center aisle and left the church by the side aisles, avoiding any confusion.

The mass began with the usual preparation and confession, the introit being Wisdom xi. The epistle was Joel 2, 12-19, and the gospel Matthew 6, 16-21. Sprinkling the ashes thrice with holy water the priest repeated the words of the Psalm: "Thou shalt sprinkle me with hyssop, O Lord, and I shall be cleansed; Thou shalt wash me and I shall be made whiter than snow." After incensing the ashes thrice, he marked them on the foreheads of each person kneeling at the altar railing, with the warning, in Latin, "Remember, O man, that thou art dust, and into dust thou shalt return."

The antiphon and responses of the mass began with the passages from Joel 2, "Let us change our garments for sackcloth and ashes; let us fast and lament before the Lord; for our God is plenteous in mercy to forgive our sins."

In the evening, after the usual services, again there was distribution of the penitential ashes. Many waited following both services to make the "Way of the Cross" meditating in turn before each of the fourteen Stations which depict Christ's sorrowful journey from Pilate's court to Calvary.

HOME SERVICE EXPERT BEGINS G. & E. FREE LECTURES

Nearly ninety interested women crowded the lecture room of the Norwich Gas and Electric company, 34 Shetucket street, Wednesday, between 2.30 and 3.30, for the opening lecture in the coure by Miss Gladys L. Peckham, home service expert. Miss Peckham was presented by Earl G. Taggart, sales manager of the company, and head of the service department.

Manager Taggart explained the aims of the department, emphasizing first that the good will of patrons was foremost in the thought of the department and that if the management can assist patrons in any way, it will be a great pleasure to do so. He expressed the hope that Norwich housewives will take full advantage of the opportunities offered through the opening of this new home service department and the company's maintaining of the home service expert.

Miss Peckham, attractive in her dainty uniform of white, went deftly about her afternoon task of instructing her attentive audience in approved methods of cake making. She especially took up the making of chocolate fudge cake, filling and frosting, also chocolate layer cake, caramel sauce and chocolate sauce. Handy and useful cards on which were printed the recipes demonstrated were distributed.

After the cakes were baked, appetizing samples were given those in attendance, who set the emphatic approval "good" on each.

Incidentally, Miss Peckham imparted much practical and valuable information regarding the use of the electric stove and electric appliances in general. She was peppered with questions, which she gladly welcomed and answered informingly. Her talk abounded in such useful hints as never to melt butter for cake, for chemical reasons; use tin pans for cake-baking; how to get the best results with the double boiler in sauce-making; careful reading of the recipe emphasized; necessity of sifting brown sugar for filling and confectioner's sugar for frosting. She demonstrated the merits of a cake cooler, of a spatula for stirring and strongly endorsed a rubber plate scraper. By the time her test cakes were ready to cut and to be distributed by Mrs. Clarence D. Sevin who was assisting her, Miss Peckham had her listeners all with her and enthusiastic for the following lectures in the course, every Wednesday at 2.30.

It was made known that since her arrival in Norwich, where she is permanently established as home service expert for the municipal G. & E. company, she has averaged seven or eight emergency calls a day, from housewives anxious for her aid or opinion in their cooking problems. This fact is very satisfactory to Miss Peckham, who is at 2830 for quick response whenever called upon.

It was given out Wednesday that, beginning Monday evening, March 8th, Miss Peckham is to conduct a "bride" class, for a series course of cooking lessons for inexperienced girls and women—past, present or future brides. This course will include first steps in preparation of foods, leading up to more complicated methods of cake decorating, pastry and the like.

For this class, registrations must be made at once, by calling 2830. The home service expert will begin with plain, practical instruction, leading up to special cooking, taking up meats, breads, pies, cake, et al.

It was also made known that for her public lecture next week Wednesday afternoon, Miss Peckham's instruction will be on baking powder biscuits, pop-overs and cream puffs. The free service is certainly appreciated by Norwich housewives, who left the lecture room enthused over the practical character of the instruction and delighted to have the helpful recipes furnished.

For future lectures there is to be special provision to accommodate even a larger number than made up the audience of Wednesday.

PRETTY VALENTINE PARTY GIVEN FOR DANCING CLUB

Tuesday evening, the "Dancing Club La Vel" held a very successful and enjoyable valentine party, at Odd Fellows' Hall, with Mrs. W. R. Duffy as hostess. Club members, and their friends, arrived shortly after 8 o'clock, where they were greeted by the hostess, who was attired in pink satin and silver lace. The hall was beautifully arranged in brilliant shower lights, varicolored streamers, and from the center light was suspended a huge red heart, from which hung a shower of small hearts.

Dancing was general to the music of Milton Osborn's orchestra, until the formal opening of the evening by the hostess, in the form of a cotillion. The lovely gowns of the ladies added greatly to the brilliance of this figure, and the favors distributed during the dance were most unusual, and mirth provoking. The Virginia Reel, tag dance, and always enjoyable Paul Jones were among the dances of the evening.

INTERESTING BIBLE STUDY BY CLASS AT Y. M. C. A.

Wednesday evening the regular session of the Men's Bible class at the Y. M. C. A., was held with a good attendance and interest. The subject of study and discussion was "A difficult, but possible ideal to reach," and the scripture used was Luke the 6th. chapter and the 27th. to the 38th. verse inclusive. In the discussion the following points were brought: Jesus knew that his disciples would surely have enemies, for all good men are sure to have some who do not like them, and generally some who practically hate them. Jesus had this same experience to a great extent. If we are sure to have enemies it is well to know the best way to treat them. A man may not be able to feel toward his enemy just as he feels toward his friend, yet he can be kind to him and do him a good turn. No man has a right to expect forgiveness of God if he refuses to forgive his enemies. Generally speaking, it is better to suffer wrong than to get even with an enemy, for in the attempt to get even the ill feeling is bound to continue. A blow for a blow does not appeal to one's best self. The world has a right to expect more kindness and unselfishness from a Christian man than from others, for he professes high ideals. In many cases there is too little difference between a so-called Christian and a worldly man. There was no "upper class" with the Master. A Christian man should show love for the man he works for by rendering faithful service and working for his interests.

While there are exceptions, generally speaking employers and employes have the right interests each for the other. A man should love his competitor in business at least to the extent than he will not "knock" him. A Christian man should especially love his friend and this means that he should live up to what his friend thinks he is; that he should not forsake him when reverses come, and that when others condemn him he should stand by him.

NOON MEETING HELD AT WEST SIDE SILK MILL

Y. M. C. A. representatives conducted a noon meeting at the plant of the West Side Silk Mill Wednesday, with pleasing results.

A three piece orchestra consisting of John M. Swahn, Frederick Geer and Ralph Marsh pleased the good sized audience with several selections and also played for the singing of several selections in which the employees joined heartily. Rev. J. Harlow Graham of the Trinity Methodist Church gave a brief and helpful talk, speaking in part as follows: "Four blind men looked at an elephant with their hands as it were, and each gave a different version as to what the elephant was like. So in regard to an individual; the opinion that a stranger has of one may not be the right measurement; it may be entirely different than a more intimate friend might have, for the friend knows us better, and therefore is better able to measure us correctly, though sometimes a friend may be mistaken in his estimate of us. Then there is the man as he knows himself; it is possible for a man to mistake even himself; it is certainly a good thing for a man to see himself as others see him as Robert Burns once said. Then of course there is the man as God sees and knows him; the all-seeing one, he sees us and knows us exactly as we are. Let us strive to be the person we should be, and that means to be our best.

Mrs. John O. Peckham pleased with a reading and the entire company including the members of the home family sang a number of old fashioned songs, with Mrs. Barber accompanying at the piano.

Following out an annual custom the members of the circle served an excellent dinner the latter part of the afternoon, every thing being cooked and in readiness to serve, preparatory to arrival at the home. QUESTIONING OF GILPATRIC FAILS TO CLARIFY FINANCIAL COMPLICATIONS

There Remains to Be Solved the Mystery of Two Items, Totaling $150,000, Involved in the Crash of the Putnam Bank—Misapplied Bonds Purchased by the State, Much as He Did Securities Deposited in the Bank—Gilpatric Appeared Distressed Because He Could Not Give More Information on Matters Brought Up By Receiver Coffin.

PUTNAM, Conn., Feb. 18—(AP)—The mystery of two large items, totaling approximately $150,000, involved in the crash of the First National bank here, remained unsolved when George M. Coffin, receiver of the institution, completed his questioning of C. Harold Gilpatric today. It was the huge embezzlements of Gilpatric that wrecked the institution and sent him to Atlanta prison for a fifteen year term.

Commenting on the other side of the ledger, Receiver Coffin reported that in his efforts to recover part of the gigantic sums misappropriated by Gilpatric, he had paid dividends of nearly a million dollars and had on hand at the present time $200,000 in cash that may be used to pay off future dividends.

State funds are involved in one of the items for $91,000 which Receiver Coffin has been trying for two days to get Gilpatric to explain. An explanation of this item is very important, the receiver pointed out, for if it can be shown that the State of Connecticut is in possession of Liberty Loan bonds paid for with funds taken from the First National bank of Putnam and for which the bank received no credit, he would be in a position to take steps to recover from the state.

Repeatedly Used State Funds

That Gilpatric repeatedly used state funds in connection with Liberty loan purchases, for his own use was shown by his testimony. Three purchases of Liberty Loan bonds were made by the state through the Putnam bank. The first was for $200,000 for the school fund, a second for $300,000 was for the banking fund while a smaller one for $5,000 was for the teachers' retirement fund.

Juggling the proceeds secured from these bond purchases, Gilpatric said he used one purchase to make deliveries to the state on previous purchases and finally when it was necessary to balance his account with the state in 1921 he was forced to take money in his possession as cashier of the bank to meet the shortages in his account with the state.

Covered by Bank Funds

The receiver through his investigations has accounted for all of but $91,000 of these bonds and repeated efforts were made by Mr. Coffin to get Gilpatric to throw light on the remainder. He met little success for Gilpatric could give but meager explanation. Bad bookkeeping was one of the excuses that he offered, declaring that during the Liberty Loan campaigns, the bank time after time was oversubscribed, bringing criticism from the Boston banks and from the federal reserve bank. Subscriptions for bonds tendered by Putnam patrons often remained unpaid and were covered by bank funds, according to his recital.

That many Boston persons are now holding bonds of large denomination purchased by the State of Connecticut was the opinion of Mr. Gilpatric. He said that these large denomination bonds often were exchanged for bonds of smaller denomination brought in by patrons. He suggested that an attempt be made to trace some of these large denomination bonds with the hope that they will result in an explanation of some of the shortages in question.

Tracing the $200,000 Liberty bond purchase by the state, Mr. Coffin found that $109,000 had been sold to the First National bank of Boston and placed to the credit of the Putnam bank. There was no doubt, the receiver said, that the Putnam bank had received the benefit of $109,000 of the state bonds. It is the remainder of this purchase that is unaccounted for.

Evidence that Gilpatric was using these state funds received from bond transactions to meet his pressing needs was shown by his admission that $100,000 in bonds purchased by the state had been deposited at a Boston bank for "him to play with." Pressure brought to bear however, it was brought out at the hearing, prevented him from using this "plaything."

Feared Exposure

The fear that he would be considered a bad bank official also accounted for losses of considerable magnitude to the bank, Gilpatric admitted. For years, he said, losses had been met by the bank through bad debts and unfortunate investments and rather than admit these losses, he had kept them a secret from the directors and had found methods of making them good so that the books of the bank would prove spotless.

The second large item, which remained unexplained and which Mr. Coffin believed might be traced back to state purchases of Liberty loans, was for $50,000. The receiver said he was mystified by this item however, and that it was "up in the air" at the present time.

The $50,000 was paid by Gilpatric to meet a pledge to A. Gilman and company of Putnam, when the latter concern needed funds to start in business. The receiver wanted to know when Gilpatric had found the funds to meet this pledge. At the hearing yesterday, Gilpatric expressed the opinion that he had appropriated bonds owned by R. H. Bradley of Putnam in his possession to meet the Gilman pledge. An investigation overnight by Receiver Coffin disclosed, however, that this could not have been possible. Mr. Bradley said he owned no Fourth Liberty Loan bonds in 1919 and that all of his securities were in a safe deposit box. Bradley said he had later turned over $54,000 in securities to Mr. Gilpatric and that the latter had returned them from time to time, making the last return in 1923. Mr. Coffin said his investigation had disclosed that Gilpatric did not benefit through the Gilman deal.

Gilpatric could make no further explanation.

A further attempt was also made today to learn what caused Gilpatric to restore to the First National bank in June, 1920, bonds valued at $47,000 and what other bonds were used to make the transfer possible. The bonds were placed on the records of the bank just before the arrival of a bank examiner, it was pointed out, but Gilpatric hastened to remark that he had no advanced information that this examiner was coming.

Going back to the $200,000 in bonds purchased by the state, Receiver Coffin pointed out to Gilpatric that the latter had not turned these bonds over to the State Treasury Department for eighteen months, Gilpatric paying the interest on them during this interval. The receiver was curious, he said, to learn what emergency caused Gilpatric to hold up the bonds so long.

Major Loan Accounts Not Balanced

The former banker declared he could think of no pressing event that caused him to take such action. He again mentioned that the bank's accounts for the five Liberty loan campaigns were never balanced and that possibly some of the bonds had been sent out to patrons of the bank to make good their purchases.

Gilpatric was positive that the question of his nomination as state treasurer at that time had nothing to do with it. He went to Hartford pledged for another man, he said, and argued with political leaders far into the night before he was persuaded to accept the nomination.

Gilpatric appeared depressed today because he could not give more information on matters brought up by Receiver Coffin. When Receiver Coffin asked the former banker to pardon him for being so insistent on certain points, Gilpatric replied that he wanted the receiver to be insistent, that he had come back to Connecticut to give every bit of information possible and that he regretted that he had not been of more help. He declared he would not be satisfied until he had accomplished what he came back to Putnam for, either to account for the discrepancies in the accounts or to make known where the money went.

The Overlock Bonds

The sale of bonds valued at $37,000 and owned by Dr. S. B. Overlock of Putnam in 1923 was brought up today. Gilpatric said he had not made this sale with any intention of keeping the money. He held at the fund as a cashier's check, he said, pointing out that the bank's funds were short and that he needed assets of a liquor nature. He intended to later repurchase the bonds for Dr. Overlock, he said.

That Gilpatric is looking forward to the time when he will get out of prison was shown by his remarks after the hearing had adjourned.

Commenting on his eyes, made blind by a bullet he fired into his head in an attempt at suicide after his embezzlements had become known, Gilpatric said he had been examined several times in Atlanta and that doctors had told him that he would never regain his sight.

Hopes to Make Restitution

"But I hope to overcome my blindness," he continued, "and hope to come back and make restitution for all of the losses I have caused."

The hearing today closed the open sessions to be held by Receiver Coffin. Gilpatric will remain in Putnam for several days ready to give assistance to the Receiver during another rechecking of the books of the bank in the light of disclosures made by Gilpatric during his appearance here. The receiver will then make his report to Referee in Bankruptcy Saul Berman in Hartford and the latter will decide when future hearings are to be held.

Attorney John Carpenter, counsel for the Gardner estate which has a large claim against the bank, attended today's hearing. Mr. Gilpatric is staying here at the home to his father, George W. Gilpatric.

HONOR FRENCH BUGLER WHO BLEW "CEASE FIRING" CALL

PARIS, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Corporal Pierre Sellier, the French bugler who blew the "cease firing!" call to permit the German plenipotentiaries to enter the French lines on November 7, 1918, to negotiate the armistice, was decorated a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor today by General Debeney, who commanded the troops which received the Germans on that memorable occasion and is now chief of the general staff.

The famous "bugle of victory," which Corporal Sellier blew and which since has been in his possession, was at the same time deposited in the Army Museum at the Hotel Des Invalides after impressive ceremonies presided over by General Gouraud, military governor of Paris.

The bugler, apparently "mid and nervous in the presence of so many distinguished men, nevertheless stood at attention in a soldierly manner with his bugle in hand as General Debeney gave him the accolade.

Captain L. Shullier, who ordered Sellier to sound "cease firing!" and who escorted the Germans to General Debeney's headquarters stood just behind the little corporal.

A large crowd gathered in the court of honor of the Invalides to witness the ceremony.

BOOTLEGGER PROVED TO BE BROTHER OF HERO

BIDDEFORD, Me., Feb. 18.—(AP)—A misunderstanding between court officials and a reporter led to the erroneous report of yesterday that Coastguardsman Joseph Labbe, hero of a coastguard patrol boat rescue near Narragansett Pier, had been convicted of bootlegging. It was Joseph's brother, Antonio Labbe, who was arraigned, found guilty and fined $100 with a two months' jail sentence.

It was explained that the reporter, who was not present during the Labbe trial, telephoned a deputy sheriff inquiring as to the case. The latter was said to have referred to the defendant as a "hero," but later denied this and said he had spoken of him as "the brother of a hero." Judge Snow who held court, said he knew that the defendant was the hero's brother.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE ILL, CANCELS ALL ENGAGEMENTS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—President Coolidge remained today in the seclusion of the white house, most of the time in bed, nursing the cold which has been bothering him for several days. Assurance was given that there was no cause for alarm.

Major James F. Coupal, the only physician in attendance, sent word from the president's room that his pulse and temperature were normal, and the explanation was made that he was remaining in bed chiefly to be in good trim for his engagement to address the department of superintendence of the National Education association here Monday night.

After arising at his usual hour for breakfast, Mr. Coolidge decided to go back to bed, and instructions were given to Secretary Sanders to cancel all engagements for the day. The president remained away from his office throughout the day, getting up for luncheon and again tonight for dinner, but staying in bed the rest of the time.

Determined to conserve his strength as much as possible, he made no effort to transact business in his sick room, he expects to be back at his desk tomorrow.

While the statement was made at the white house that Mr. Coolidge was merely suffering from a cold, the suggestion was given that he might have a touch of the grip. There are a large number of grip cases here.

COUNTESS OF CATHCART IS "UTTERLY EXHAUSTED"

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—(AP)—The strain of her ten-day battle with immigration authorities to gain admission to the United States was beginning to tell tonight on Vera, Countess of Cathcart. At Ellis Island, where she has been held since a special board of inquiry ordered her deportation, on grounds of moral turpitude, she said she was "utterly exhausted," and could not see anyone.

Mrs. Gordon Carr, a friend who has visited the countess daily at Ellis Island, expressed concern over her condition.

"The countess is extremely nervous and it is absolutely necessary that she have quiet," Mrs. Carr said, adding that the countess was lying down in her room, her hands swollen from nervous exhaustion.

In an interview with reporters today the countess expressed disappointment at the labor secretary's action in sustaining the recommendation of the board of inquiry. She said she had expected that the government "would consider the human elements and not only the terribly severity of the law." She said she was determined, however "to stick it out," and fight the case to the end.

OLIVER MOROSCO LEGALLY REGISTERS HIMSELF "BROKE"

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—(AP)—Oliver Morosco, who on several occasions during the past two years has intimated that he was impoverished through the failure of the Morosco Holding company, in which his associates defrauded him, today legally registered himself as "broke."

He filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing his liabilities as $1,033,000 against assets of two suits of clothes, two overcoats, one pair of shoes, two hats, underwear and haberdashery.

The Morosco Holding company, in which his name was used for an illegal stock promotion schema without his knowledge, failed in 1923, wiping out his personal fortune, which at one time was estimated at close to $5,000,000.

Four of the principals in the scheme went to prison for using the mails to defraud. Mr. Morosco appearing as a witness for the government at their trial.

Prohibition Subject of Comedy in House

Representative Hill Became Facetious as He Taunted Representative Blanton.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Prohibition flared up in the house today after Representative Deal, democrat, Virginia, had denounced methods used by enforcement agents.

A heated exchange between Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas an ardent dry, and Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, the wet leader, threw the floor into laughter and disorder.

Mr. Blanton, contending that "modificationists are nullificationists," said restoration of beer would destroy the eighteenth amendment. He added that he was glad Mr. Hill was present, as the speech was intended particularly for his ears.

"Did the gentleman ever taste Milwaukee beer?" asked Mr. Hill.

The Texas representative objected to the question and appealed to the chair for "order." He declared however that beer certainly was intoxicating and offered to take Mr. Hill "to his own city of Baltimore and feed him some beer so powerful he couldn't stand up. There are fifty 'wide open' saloons in Baltimore," he said.

"How do you know?" demanded Mr. Hill.

"Why I've been told by one of your colleagues that there are 300," retorted Mr. Blanton.

That," suggested the Maryland representative, "was confidential, furnished for your own information, not to be broadcast."

Representative Deal charged that "cold blooded murder" had been perpetrated in the name of the prohibition law, and attributed a "general wave of lawlessness in the country" to the restrictions brought about by the Volstead act.

"The government itself," he asserted, "is the chief law violator. Rather than setting the example, it is violating the basic amendments incorporating our bill of rights to focus attention upon the eighteenth. Government agents have committed cold blooded murder under the guise of enforcing sumptuary liquor restrictions."

WORST SNOW AND WIND OF WINTER IN MIDDLE WEST

CHICAGO, Feb. 18—(AP)—The middle west tonight was digging itself out of one of the heaviest snowfalls of the winter, which was left in the wake of a blizzard that swept across half a dozen central states last night and today.

While the worst of the snow and wind had passed, the storm, weather bureau reports indicated, would be followed by much colder weather, with near zero temperatures expected for some sections.

The storm caused at least two deaths, stopped air mail service for a time, blocked roads, delayed trains and hindered wire communications throughout the area affected. One of the deaths was at Hays, Kansas, where a woman was frozen to death, the other was in Chicago, where a man died of exposure.

The snow was general in northwestern Arkansas, Iowa, Missouri, Eastern Kansas, southwestern Nebraska and northern Illinois. Tonight it was moving northeastward. Flashes of lightning and muffled peals of thunder were features of the storm in Kansas and at some points in Iowa.

While the snow did considerable damage, Kansas farmers were undismayed because they said it would help the wheat crop. Many points reported six inches of snow for the 24 hours and in some sections it was much heavier.

BRITISH WIRELESS OPERATORS END STRIKE

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—The strike of the wireless operators which has deprived many ships of wireless service was settled at the ministry of labor tonight. Work will be resumed immediately.

Nearly 5,000 marine wireless operators, including virtually all those on British ships, were affected by the strike, called Nov. 26, last year, against a proposed wage cut. London despatches of a few days ago reported that while hundreds of British ships were at sea without wireless operators and the number was increasing weekly a deadlock had been reached in the negotiations for a settlement.

BOSTON MADE GUM DROPS FORBIDDEN IN PORTLAND, ME.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 18—(AP)—The sale of gum drops, a Boston made candy, was forbidden here today by Sheriff King F. Graham, who announced that he would prosecute all offenders in the future. The sheriff's action followed the analysis of a box of the candy sent to a prisoner of the county jail, which revealed a 1.16 per cent. alcoholic content.

The sheriff declared he did not believe the candy contained enough liquor to produce intoxication but expressed the opinion that it would create a desire for tasting alcohol among juvenile users. A state law provides a fine of from $50 to $100 for selling or offering for sale candy filled with brandy, wine, whiskey or rum.

BOSTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Former Chief of Police William L. Quinn, of Swampscott, arrested last Tuesday after he had failed to pay two years' state income taxes, amounting to $2,041, was released from the Charles Street jail today after being adjudged a bankrupt.

On Wednesday Quinn appeared before Chief Justice Bolster of municipal court and asked permission to take the poor debtor's oath. This was refused. Today his attorney appeared in federal court and filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

Junta in San Antonio For Revolt In Mexico

A Former Secretary of the Mexican Congress Has Been Placed in Jail.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 18—(AP)—Deciding that there was active revolutionary junta in San Antonio intent on overthrowing the Calles government of Mexico, a federal grand jury today returned an indictment against R. Esparza Martinez, who was cited as one of the leaders.

Martinez, a former secretary of the Mexican congress, whose home here was raided by department of justice agents last December, waived hearing and pleaded not guilty. Bond was fixed at $2,500, which Martinez could not meet, and he was sent to jail.

Federal authorities declined to state if others of the alleged junta had been indicted.

The indictment against Martinez detailed that he had participated in a conspiracy to set afoot an expedition against the United States of Mexico. It alleged that the junta planned the dynamiting of trains in Mexico to show to the world that a revolution was in progress and thereby raise funds for financing the revolt against the Calles administration. It was stated that the late Colonel Demetrio Torres and another leader had placed an order with a San Antonio firm for two electric dynamiting machines.

Torres was deported January 13 by United States immigration authorities and two weeks later was summarily shot in Mexico.

Martinez denies that he and his associates planned an armed revolt. While they are hostile to the Calles government because of its radical leanings, they were merely attempting to discredit it, he maintained.

Some of Martinez's close associates are reported to have fled San Antonio several days ago. He has been employed as an editorial writer on a Spanish language daily newspaper here.

The maximum penalty for violation of the neutrality law was five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

PROBLEM OF EDUCATION IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 18—(AP)—Hard work, less leisure time or leisure time better used would make for maturity of thought and knowledge of a college student, President James Rowland Angell, of Yale university declared in his annual report made public today.

The easy solution of the entire problem of education in American universities, he said, would be the imposition of tasks that would completely fill the time of the student with hard work. "But," he added, "the American college has rightly felt that a measure of leisure is an indispensable element in a liberal education and it must accept the consequences of the possible misuse of leisure."

President Angell condemned what he termed "lock step" methods of education which make identical demand upon all students irrespective of intelligence, suggested ways of eliminating the additional year spent in educating the American as contrasted with the European student and reiterated that Yale is seeking quality rather than quantity. He went on to say that Yale proposes "a system of vocational guidance and personnel study to place men during college and afterward in the work for which their abilities fit them."

Critics have complained of lack of mental endeavor and alleged frivolity of the average undergraduate interests in our college, the president said, and that it was admitted that American students are guilty of a "pose said to be imported" which assumes that they never give attention to study.

Coming to the defense of the student President Angell said undergraduates are growing constantly more "sensible to finer values of college life." At Yale, he said there is breadth and seriousness in literature and drama which is "refreshing, and a ready response to religious and philanthropic appeal."

FRENCH GOV'T FINANCIAL BILLS PRESENTED IN SENATE

PARIS, Feb. 18—(AP)—The finance minister, M. Doumer, today presented the government financial bills in the senate. These will be considered by the finance committee of that body along with the bills voted by the chamber of deputies.

Some of the radical-socialist leaders insist that under the constitution the senate can act only on bills which the chamber has passed, amending them as it sees fit, without adding any new features or increasing the amounts provided for in the chamber projects.

The finance committee, however, takes the view that while financial measures must originate in the lower house, the senate can take into account government measures which were in fact proposes to the finance committee of the chamber.

Describing the increase in the scope of trust work, he asserted that in 25 years, the number of trust companies has increased from 300 to 2,700 and their resources from $1,300,000 to eighteen billion dollars.

He pictured an optimistic outlook for business, pointing to the economic adjustment resulting from the re-establishment of international confidence throughout the general stabilization of currency, physical rehabilitation and provision for the settlement of international debts.

MAY REACH AN AGREEMENT TODAY ON TAX REDUCTION

Senator Smoot, Head of the Senate Conferees, Predicts That the Differences Will Be Compromised—Senate Has Adjourned Until Monday—Possible For the House to Act on the Compromise Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—An agreement on the tax reduction bill, between the senate and house conferees by tomorrow night, permitting final ratification and enactment of the measure early next week, was predicted tonight.

At the conclusion of the fourth day of conferences on the bill, Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, head of the senate conferees, made the prediction that the differences between the two branches of congress would be compromised.

Both sides stood firm again today however on their differences involving $125,000,000 in additional tax reductions voted by the senate above those approved by the house.

Adjournment of the senate tonight until Monday made it impossible for final action by congress on the bill before next week, but if the hope of the conferees for an agreement tomorrow is fulfilled, it will be possible for the house to act on the compromise Saturday. This would permit senate action Monday.

The measure will become law when President Coolidge signs it, and many of the reductions, including those on income taxes, and a large number of sections repealing excise levies, will become effective immediately.

CONFEREES ON TAX BILL ON POINT OF BREAKING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.(AP) — The dispute between the house and senate revenue bill conferees over the proposed repeal of the inheritance tax reached such a stage today that at one time managers for the house walked out of the conference.

Senate conferees flatly declared they would insist upon repeal of the tax and the spokesmen of the house took an equally determined position insisting upon restoration of this tax to the measure as approved by the house. An impasse developed and house members announced they would retire until the senate was ready to yield.

Some of the house conferees left the room and the others refused to discuss the matter further. At the end of 45 minutes, however, the conference was re-opened and all members left tonight smiling, although no agreement yet had been reached on the inheritance tax.

The row was the culmination of many spirited disputes which have marked the conference and was one of the few times in recent legislative history that such a situation has developed. It also differed from most congressional disputes in that it was a distinct fight between the senate and house without party lines.

The three republican and two democratic members of the senate group all had voted for repeal of the inheritance tax when it was up for decision in the senate. While the house had voted to modify considerably the present inheritance rates it has never voted for repeal of this tax and its representatives in the conference insisted sentiment there was strongly against such action.

The return of the house managers to the conference was taken generally tonight to indicate they would win their fight for restoration of the levy to the bill. The conference is expected to act on this as well as the other rate schedules before the end of the week.

JUSTICES OF PEACE LINKED WITH RIVAL RUM RINGS

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 18—(AP)—Linking of several justices of the peace and rival rum rings, whose underworld warfare here has resulted in six unsolved murders, with the alleged nation-wide bootleg alcohol conspiracy under investigation by the federal grand jury, was seen tonight, when it was learned that persons heretofore unsuspected are being mentioned by witnesses.

The justices of the peace are alleged to have worked with both groups, and with men in federal, railroad and police departments, which would tip them off and the consignment would be confiscated or hijacked.

The first indictments in the investigation, which centers around the operations of the Superior Industrial Alcohol company are expected next week. United States Attorney A. E. Bernstein said he expects the jury to return twenty indictments in a partial report which will be made to clean up certain phases of the investigation before the jurors become confused with the mass of the testimony and evidence.

Stills and stores seized by justices in raids on the rival gangs are alleged to have been turned over to their own gang for sale. On other occasions, they are said to have taken only part of the liquor found, and notified other justices, who raided the same address and confiscated what was left.

Employes from five railroads are here to testify as to shipments of alcohol. The railroads are not involved.

SEIZURE OF DISTILLING MACHINERY IN WATERBURY

WATERBURY, Feb. 18—(AP)—A hunt that started in New Haven this morning ended here late today with the seizure of more than $2,000 worth of alcohol and distilling machinery valued at $1,000, and the arrest of two men on charges of violating the prohibition law. Through the raid police believe they have stopped one of the chief liquor sources in the Naugatuck valley.

Joseph Pavano of New Britain, alleged by police to have been arrested five times on booze running charges, and Antonio Varlouli, also of New Britain were the men caught when state and Waterbury police raided a garage in the rear of 25 Chatfield avenue. Varlouli was caught standing by a running 100-gallon still and Pavano was found hiding behind a door in the cellar. Both are held in $2,000 bonds for appearance in city court tomorrow.

TO SUSPEND TROLLEY SERVICE IN SAN JUAN

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Feb. 18—(AP)—Carl C. Giles, president of the Porto Rico Railway, Light and Power company which is Canadian owned, announced today that the trolley service in San Juan will be entirely suspended on February 28 after 27 years of continuous service. He gave operating losses as the reason.

Mr. Giles said his company wanted to double track its lines in order to give better service, but the public service commission would permit this only on conditions which would require expenditure of $2,000,000 and demanded the delivery of all property to the government at the end of 25 years.

"San Juan will have the distinction of being the only city of its size in the new world without trolley service," Mr. Giles said.

TRANSLATION OF STATEMENT LEADING TO BLASPHEMY CASE

BROCKTON, Mass., Feb. 18—(AP)—Particulars of the words attributed to Anthony Bimba of Brooklyn, N. Y., Lithuanian lecturer, on which a charge of blasphemy has been lodged against Bimba under a 300 year old Massachusetts statute, were filed in court here today by I. Manuel Rubin, city prosecutor, on motion of defense counsel.

An English translation of the statement said to have been made by Bimba at a meeting in Lithuanian hall here was given as follows:

"People have built churches for the last 2,000 years and we have sweated under Christian rule for 2,000 years and what have we got? The government is in the control of the priests and bishops, clerics and capitalists. They tell us there is a God. Where is he?

"There is no such thing. Who can prove it? There are still fools enough who believe in God. The priests tell us there is a soul. Why, I have a sole but that sole is in my shoe. Referring to Christ, the priests also tell us he is a God. Why, he is no more a God than you or I. He was just a plain man."

INDICTMENTS RETURNED IN BAY STATE BAR SCANDAL

BOSTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Warrants were issued today for eleven persons believed to have bought or sold questions and answers to the state's bar examination last July. Secret indictments were returned as the result of an investigation that has been in progress since last September, when the alleged frauds were discovered.

Some $17,000 was believed to have been spent by young law students who previously had been unable to pass the examination for copies of the questions, and in some instances their answers, which had been stolen from the state board of examiners. Suspicion was aroused during the examination when a number of previous unsuccessful candidates for bar appeared too well informed upon the subjects they were being asked about. Later the character committee of the Boston Bar association discovered the alleged fraud.

A re-examination for all candidates was held last month, and it was reported that most of the students had passed it.

No arrests in the case were made today.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SWAYED BY EARTHQUAKE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 18—(AP)—The coast area of southern California from Santa Barbara south to Los Angeles was gently swayed at 1.10 a. m. today by an earthquake of the rolling variety which apparently centered in the Simi valley, 13 miles inland from Ventura.

The quake varied in intensity from a sharp tremble at Santa Barbara to a light roll at Los Angeles. No damage could be confirmed on re-checking tonight. Early reports stated that minor damage had been done at the Southern California Edison company's plant at Saticoy, but company officials declared the shock was very light at that point and no damage resulted.

At Santa Barbara clocks were reported stopped and school sessions halted temporarily when the children marched from the buildings. A survey revealed no damage.

The tremor was felt all along the coast and at several inland points. The general movement was reported as north-south.

The police said that money orders, seventeen sets of automobile license plates, an electric drill and forty certified checks were found in his possession.

FATALLY INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY FALLING TREE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 18—William Upton, 23 of Chaplin was fatally injured about 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon when struck in the head by the limb of a falling tree on the John A. Donohue place in Howard Valley, town of Hampton. George E. Nichols of Hampton, his employer, called Dr. A. D. Marsh of Hampton but before he had arrived the young man had died. Medical Examiner Louis I. Mason of this city was then summoned. He found that death was accidental and was caused by the bursting of blood vessels and fractures. Permission was given for the removal of the body Avery and VanZandt of this city.

Cutters in the employe of Mr. Nichols, under the foremanship of Thomas Colburn of Canterbury, had been felling a line of large oak trees and in order to avoid their falling on adjoining property and causing damage were pulling the trees down with ropes making them fall along the fence. Samuel Stimpson of Hampton and William Upton were among those who came from the Nichols saw mill nearby to assist in felling the trees. The particular tree which caused Upton's death was the last one to be cut. As it was being pulled down Stimpson warned Upton that he was in danger and called out to him to run. The latter replied something to the effect that he could not and in the next instant a large limb of the tree had struck him at the base of the skull throwing him unconscious to the ground.

The injured man was rushed to the Donohue home where he expired without regaining consciousness. The scene of the accident is located on the Bigelow-Scotland road at the foot of Howard hill to the extreme south of the town of Hampton on the original Howard estate.

William Upton was born July 25, 1902, in Meriden, the son of Wilfred O. and Annie Upton. He is survived by his mother, with whom he made his home, two brothers, Willard Upton of Hartford and Allen Upton of Chaplin, also four sisters, Alice of Hartford Annie Ariene and Thelma Upton of Chaplin. His father died Dec. 1, 1925 after a brief attack of pneumonia.

EXCHANGITES HEARD FINE TALK ON RADIO

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Feb. 18—The Radio and how it was used in the recent MacMillan expedition to the North Pole, was the subject of an excellent talk given by John L. Reinarts of South Manchester, at the weekly meeting of the Willimantic Exchange club held Wednesday evening. Mr. Reinarts is one of the foremost radio experts of the country and is an authority on low wave transmission. He was chief operator with the MacMillan group. President Egbert A. Case was in charge of the meeting. Guests included William B. Sweeney and A. C. Persons.

The speaker was introduced by Edwin J. Donnelly, chairman of the entertainment committee. The summer expedition to Etah, Greenland was described and Mr. Reinarts exhibited some of the utensils and white-hunting weapons used by the Esquimeaux. In a humorous way he told of the hunter Arctic hares which are often as big as billygoats and which are shot from the summit of a mountain while they feed in the valley.

In relating the attempts of the naval airmen to discover a new continent in the northern regions, the speaker said that the main reason for their failure was due to lack of safe landing places, and not to the courage of the aviators. As a result of investigations and much research it is being determined that Greenland is the home of the terrific gales which sweep across the Atlantic. Scientists of Denmark are studying the wind conditions in Greenland, in conjunction with representatives of other countries. Mr. Reinarts presided at a forum in closing his talk. He was given a rising vote of thanks. Adjournment was taken at nine o'clock.

Joseph Burns, now of Hartford, who was fined $20 and costs of $14.28 by Flak of the Rockville police court early this week for issuing two small fraudulent checks, was a former resident of this city and is said to have people here seeking an adjustment with him. Burns came here from Kensington last summer and worked at the American Thread company plant. He went to Rockville for about one month and then again returned here seeking work. One local business concern would like to secure a settlement with Burns, who purchased over $100 worth of merchandise from them and gave a check totaling $16 on account. Burns had just $16 in the bank at the time. When the local police were asked to locate Burns in connection with the fraudulent Rockville checks it was discovered that he had left this city.

Arthur Noble of South Coventry was fined $20 and costs, with a remittance of $15 of the fine, when found guilty on a charge of reckless driving in the Mansfield town court Wednesday night. Noble's total assessment was $41.45 which he refused to pay and he took an appeal to the next term of the Tolland county superior court, furnishing bonds of $100. On the evening of Wednesday, January 27, his automobile and one owned and operated by Royal Rose of South Street, South Coventry, collided at Perkins' Corner. Rose stated to the court that Noble was traveling in the direction of Coventry and proceeding at a fast rate of speed. Rose said that he brought his own machine to a stop as he could foresee an accident, but the Noble machine ran into his and caused damage to the extent of $40.

In his behalf Noble said that it was snowing at the time and that Rose's machine was out of its proper course, causing th acollision. He pleaded not guilty to the charge. Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews imposed the fine.

This week one of his hens produced an egg which measured seven and one-quarter inches by eight and one-sixteenth inches and is considered a record egg.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

EUGENE YOUNG, OF UNION, SUICIDES BY HANGING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Feb. 18.—Eugene Young, 53, a farmer in Union, committed suicide by hanging himself to a beam in the barn Thursday. The body was found about noon by Harry Hathaway, a grandson. A son, Harry E. Young, died several months ago and the father has been very much depressed since that time. There seems to be no other reason for the tragic act. The local medical examiner was called soon after the discovery of the body and gave permission for its removal. Mr. Young had resided in Union about 15 years and was well and favorably known in Stafford Springs, to which borough he made frequent business trips. For several years he had been in the employ of the Quinnebaug Forestry company. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ora Young, and three daughters, Mrs. Russell I. Harmon, of Stafford Springs, Mrs. Harold Gelbronson of Union and Mrs. Raymond Hatheway, of Mashapaug.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

The check, which was for $40, was drawn to the order of E. J. Gleason, on the First National Bank of Stafford Springs. It was dated Jan. 27, 1926, and cashed at the Springfield National bank by Mr. Gleason. When the check reached the Stafford Springs bank there was no money with which to pay it and the check was protested. Assistant Cashier Wightman, of the local bank, testified that he had mailed Mrs. Gleason a notice of protest Feb. 2, and that the check had not been paid since. Mrs. Gleason was fined $10 and costs of $4.67 by Deputy Judge Taft and this she paid and agreed to take care of the check. Her husband, Ernest Gleason, paid a fine of $23 in the borough court three weeks ago for passing a worthless check.

JEWETT CITY

BIG BOILER IN PLACE AT THE GLASGO MILL

JEWETT CITY, Feb. 18—The big thirty ton steel boiler for the Glasgo Finishing Co., after a series of mishaps en route from the local freight yards, is safely fixed on its foundation at the new plant.

A local observer points out that while hard luck of many kinds came to thwart the best efforts of the Norwich contractors who undertook the task of moving it, yet they were at the same time being blessed with good luck of the most refined sort.

During the trip, the great boiler rolled off the draft gear, one night and landed in the Noah Wilcox trout brook. This stream was stocked last fall, and the next day after the mishap fingerling trout could be seen swimming through the flooded flues. Had that accident happened just ahead of the two recent snow storms, the big boiler would have become a fixture to Wilcox's brook. It would have been necessary to leave the boiler there until summer at which time this little traveled country road would become passable. Today no wheel or runner track tells that a single team or sled has passed that way since the storms.

Mrs. J. H. Kennedy of Sylvandale has a curiosity in the shape of a sword palm. Its general formation as to its foliage, is very well indicated by its name. Its peculiarity is seen in its blossom. As generally observed, a palm has no regular blossom, but Mrs. Kennedy's is different, for after many seasons of total floral inactivity, seemingly when it gets ready, it decides to blossom. Even then it makes a considerably hard job of it, and after a bud begins to show it is several weeks before the bloom comes. The Sylvandale plant has just blossomed, with another bud showing. Resembling a tiny white iris, the flower is as delicate as it is strange and it lasts but a day.

Passengers on the bus lines these days, between here and Norwich are getting fine closeups of the hardy shell-drake visitors from the north. The icy waters of the Quinebaug just above the tunnel, and in the seven mile curve, seem to hold out to them some special attraction for every winter they come to stay until well toward spring.

It is of interest to note the conditions in which they seem to enjoy life. The river bank is lined with snow and the stream is filled with small floes and anchor ice. Not the slightest indication of a bit to eat is seen. Mr. Sheildrake for these winter visitors are invariably males, rises from the surface of the water with considerable difficulty when one of the busses or a noisy train goes by, but when he gets under way, no motor or steam driven contrivance can pass him. The hunter who shoots a sheldrake has got to go some. Bird shot at over five rods range will rattle on his back like hail on a tin roof and he is up and away. The late W. C. Bliven, once shot an unwary specimen from a blind off Reed's island. There are people living in Jewett City today who tried a morsel after he had been baked. Salt mackerel stuffed with tallow candles, would be something like it for taste and a friend piece of old rope, for toughness.

The central section of the borough was thrown into a real furore of excitement during mid-forenoon Thursday. A handsome bus, the private property of the U. S. Finishing company, of Sterling drove down the state road, pulled up to the curb in front of the Finn block and stopped.

Inside were a couple of baker's dozens of girls, all sizes, all handsome, and all smiling. The younger members of the Main street craft got busy at once, including some of the old boys, too, and lined up to see the young women alight and troop up the stairs of the main entrance. Some said and many believed, that a burlesque troup had taken the Finn theatre by storm. The picture feature for the evening was to be Street Life in New York and sure enough here were the beauties to furnish the regular setting.

The driver of the bus was besieged for information. Manager Barnett was hunted up adn inplored to "give us a tip" as to what it was all about.

At this point, the bus charioteer broke the bubble. "It's only," he said "the girl pupils from the Sterling school, here by state health official direction, for the purpose of securing dental examination in accordance with the law. The street dropped back into its usual business activities, and some one murmured, "Well I swan."

Avoid Poorly Balanced Breakfasts

Start the day with Quaker Oats —food that "stands by" you.

If you feel tired, hungry, "fidgety," hours before lunch, don't jump to the conclusion of poor health. Thousands have unenergetic mornings because they start the day with wrong breakfasts.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Then Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 68% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamines and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Quick Quakers cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers you.

DANIELSON

NEW RATE BILLS SENT OUT BY TAX COMMISSIONER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Feb. 18—Town Tax Collector James R. Walsh has received from the office of the state tax commissioner new and carefully worked out rate bill and other forms that it is hoped will be generally adopted in the tax accounting systems of the towns of Connecticut. The commissioner's plan is to have standardized forms in use throughout Connecticut, although there is no obligation resting upon any town to adopt these forms. Collector Walsh some time since was made a member of a special council of tax collectors from various parts of the state who have from time to time met with the commissioner and discussed tax collection problems. The new set of forms is one of the results of these conferences. It has been found that many of the forms in use in towns of the state are inadequate and antiquated. Other towns have excellent forms, much after the style of those now being advocated for adoption, Killingly being one of the towns with a good rate bill form.

BARE FACTS ABOUT BEARS CAUSES MUCH DISCUSSION

(Special to The Bulletin.))

DANIELSON, Feb. 18—The proposal to introduce black bears into state forest reserves in Connecticut, as favored this week at a meeting of sportsment with the state fish and game commission in Hartford, has aroused lively interest in Killingly and other towns in this corner of the state. This it is held, would make good bear country. One has in mind how families of bears would love such homes as are to be found for winter quarters in the caves and caverns of Squaw Rocks, and about Half Hill, up around Old Kentuck in the East Killingly section, over at Castle ledges in Pomfret, in the Tatnic hill country and about the Wolf Den area, not to mention dozens of other wild and picturesques sections of northeastern Windham county.

It is assumed that bears introduced into state forest reserves would eventually find their way to all sections of the state. The sort of bear advocated for the Connecticut wilds is held to be harmless. Although naturalists and others familiar with bruin insist that this is true and that a bear will avoid whenever possible contact with human beings, this is hard for many timid people to believe. If bears are liable to be encountered afield hereabouts within two or three years, it will spoil the woodland roaming for the timerous and sort of put a damper on berrying parties and such other excursions into territory where a bear might be found. Against this, one finds a great many people who would love to have bears on the list of things they might hunt or view from time to time for purposes of nature study. Much is being said pro and con about the bear legions destined for the surrounding countryside.

Mrs. Susie G. Williams, Brooklyn, secretary of Quinebaug Pomona grange, has announced that the next regular meeting of this organization is to be held on Saturday, February 27, with Plainfield grange at Grange hall in that town.

The morning session, opening at 10:30 in the fifth degre, will be for the transaction of general business and the submission of reports of the treasurer, secretary and executive committee. At this session F. D. Spaulding, new assistant steward, will be installed. Dinner is to be served by Plainfield grange.

The afternoon session, opening at 1:30, is to be open to all patrons. Included in the program for this period will be two 30-minute illustrated addresses. E. W. Ellis, former county agent, now director of the extension service at the Connecticut Agricultural college. Other numbers on the program are a vocal solo by Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam, piano solo by Miss Helen Gallup of Plainfield, reading by Miss Ruth Lathrop, quartet, members of Plainfield grange, recitation.

Over across the Rhode Island border on the Providence pike "Bit Boy" is at rest in a snowbank. He has been there for the past two weeks and the storms have beaten about him and built mounds of snow and ice around him. He is inert and helpless, belying his name and all it portends. Big Boy, be it known, is a caterpillar tractor with a commanding looking snow plow attached. He is the property of the Rhode Island highway department. He received his name because of the prodigious things he could do in forcing his way thrugh any sort of a snow barricade. But eventually the snow won its battle with him. For a fortnight he has been out of commission with burned out bearings, replacements for which have been slow in arriving. Big Boy stands by the side of the road—left where he fought a losing battle.

A record of over 95 per cent in collections of taxes on the grand list of last year has been made by Collector James R. Walsh. There remains outstanding only $5,600. Of this amount, errors in assessment amount to approximately $300. Mr. Walsh said Thursday that practically all of the taxes due on the list mentioned eventually will be received by the town. Various reasons enter into the delay in the collecting of them.

At St. John's church in Plainfield Thursday morning there was a solemn high mass of requiem at the funeral of Mrs. Marie Gatineau, Rev. Richard P. Morrissey, Rev. J. C. Mathieu of Wauregan and Rev. MANAGER OF PERRY MILLS SUICIDES BY HANGING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 18—J. Perry Parsons, one of the owners and manager of the Perry mills, scion of a wealthy family and a graduate of Dartmouth college, committed suicide at his home in Perryville, this morning. He was unmarried and made his home with his mother and sister in one of the oldest colonial houses of New England. The body was discovered by Wilbur Therrian, caretaker at the home, when he went into the cellar at 6 o'clock this morning to attend to the furnace fire. Parsons was found hanging from a steam pipe clad in pajamas, bathrobe and slippers. The body was immediately cut down and physicians summoned. Although it was still warm life was extinct. Business worries is given as the only known cause of the young man taking his life.

J. Perry Parsons was born in Franklin Falls, N. H., 34 years ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben S. Parsons, but when he was quite young the family moved to Perryville where his father was manager of the Perry mills. The young man graduated from Dartmouth college in 1914 and because of the death of his father he was at once made manager of the mills. He was well known in Putnam and was very popular among a wide circle of acquaintances. Mr. Parsons is survived by his mother Mary J. Parsons, and four sisters, Mrs. Edgar Craber, of Webster, Mass., Mrs. Charles Blacket, of Newtonville, Mass., and the Misses Grace and Mary Parsons at home. His mother, with her sister, Miss Anna Perry, are in Florida, where they went to spend the winter.

CHIEF CLAIMS FIRE APPARATUS IS INADEQUATE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Feb. 18—At the meting of the city council the following amounts were recommended for the next year's expenses: Fire department, $9,000; police department, $11,500; city court, $2,200; highway department $9,000; sewer upkeep, $450; general expenses $5,000; street lights, $8,500; city clerk, $400; city treasurer $400; interest $9,000; janitor $480; fuel and light, $370; total $52,300.

At the meeting, Fire Chief Thurston recommended in his report that the city purchase a tractor or large truck with snow plow attachment for clearing the streets of snow. In the discussion of this recommendation the fire chief convinced the council that such a purchase was an absolute necessity of the city is to have the use of the fire trucks during and after heavy snow storms. Chief Thurston cited examples of some cities even smaller than smaller than Putnam which had been without a disastrous fire during storms in the past was due to good luck as it would have been impossible to have used the fire equipment had there been a fire during the recent storms. He also stated that considering that the property involved in fires during the past year, valued at nearly $500,000, the present equipment is inadequate.

The storage batteries supplying current for the fire alarm system have been re-charged by a motor generator since the stopping of the trolleys. Mr. Thurston also said that the most important addition to the system was a duplicate charging apparatus. Mr. Thayer recommended the replacing of three of the present boxes and said that the alarm system was now composed entirely of copper wire, the last of the iron wire having been replaced.

In the matter of appropriations the council reduced that of the fire department from $10,000 to $9,000. This they did not consider a great reduction as some expenditures have been made that it will not have to be repeated this year. The police department remains the same, $11,500 The increase in the city court salaries is from $1,800 to $2,200. The highway department and the sewer upkeep remains the same as last year. General expenses instead of $3,500 as last year, are now $5,000. The salaries of the city clerk and the treasurer remain the same. Interest on notes and bonds decreases from $5,400 to $5,000. The pay of the janitor remains the same but there is an increase in lights for the municipal building, from $300 to $370. The city council recommends no increase in the tax rate.

According to Superintendent Dumas the city has spent $800 in the removal of snow from the city streets after the recent storms.

Students of the textile department of the Putnam Trade school enjoyed a visit to the North Grosvernordale mills recently. Several months ago the Westerly Highway commissioners advertised a public hearing on a project for the widening of that part of High street between Canal street and the High street railroad bridge. All abutting property owners were notified to attend the meeting. At that meeting the property owners spoke practically as one against having their property taken into the highway. It is made of Japan Silk and fibre Silk, so skilfully combined that all the richness of the silk is retained. The tops, heels and toes are made of fine, strong, mercerized yarn. It is a stocking that will wear splendidly.

As with all Gordon Hosiery the fine appearance of these numbers is enhanced by perfection of fit. The ankles are tight, while the tops flare to correct proportions—stockings of refinement and character.

We are showing many other attractive and desirable numbers of these superior stockings, all possessing unusual wearing qualities, which, next to appearance, is after all the thing that counts.

The Ways of Memory

Strange are the ways of memory.
Who knoweth what her sheaf may be?
She gleans the while we sleep.
Devoid of reason and of rhyme,
She gathers from the scythe of Time
The treasure she would keep.

She threads her path through joy and grief,
Takes here a thorn and there a leaf,
There's nothing 'neath her ban.
'Tis very weird—her how and why;
Much that we prize she passeth by,
None may divine her plan.

Beneath the sun, beneath the moon,
At morning tide, at eve, at noon,
She weaves her quiet spell.
She chooseth here, rejecteth there;
And slowly grows her garland rare,
Each flower an immortelle.

Sometimes we strive with might and main
To guide her choice; 'tis all in vain.
Upon the land and sea
She follows us with haunting gaze,
And on our hearts her hand she lays—
No whither can we flee.

Strange are the ways of memory.
Who knoweth what her choice will be,
What treasure she will prize?
Perchance a rose dead many a year,
The light upon a silent tear
Within a loved one's eyes!

The garment was forwarded to him in an envelope. Sylvester said he left the coat buttoned around a rock for use as a signal when he completed surveying in that region in 1897. The peak was named from the coat.

WHAT RECKLESSNESS DOES

Just now the people of Washington are much exercised over the tragedy which occurred when an automobile skidded on a bridge in the national capital and plunging through the railing dropped into a valley 70 feet below causing the death of the woman at the wheel and serious injury to the woman with her. It was icy and there was but one skid chain on the car. The speed limit on the bridge is fixed at eight miles and the opinion of witnesses is that the car was making 20. There is criticism of the fact that the curbing on the sidewalk was not high enough and that the railing was not strong enough. So far it doesn't appear that much thought has been directed to the fact that had there been greater care exercised in protecting the car against skidding and had it been going at a lower rate of speed the accident would probably not have happened. Is Washington going to reconstruct its bridges so as to withstand the effects of a battering ram, or is it going to call for greater respect for the measures which are aimed at safety?

The situation concerning this tragedy is not so different from that which features too many of the grade crossing accidents. The means of prevention lies in the power of the bridge or the grade crossing users. It of course calls for the exercise of care but where could it be more reasonably asked, or where would an individual be expected to show some respect for danger and his own welfare?

Grade crossings may be eliminated and overhead bridges constructed, but if that degree of reckless driving which causes so many fatalities at railroad crossings is displayed in negotiating the bridges aren't the same ones who refuse to stop, look and listen likely to plunge through the railings of the bridges which are erected for their protection?

Accidents at crossings or those like the Washington one are certainly deplorable. They ought not to happen, but there is certainly no small share of responsibility resting upon the users. Most of the motor accidents are due to reckless driving and it is that trait which needs to be cured.

CHECKING RAIL STRIKES

Because the country has gone through a record breaking coal strike does not mean that it would anticipate with pleasure the handicaps that would be imposed by a railroad strike. It is firmly believed that the country as a whole favors the adjustment of such disputes rather than the tying up of industry with the accompanying effect upon the public that is bound to follow when necessaries such as fuel and transportation are involved.

For such a treatment of labor disputes it was believed provision had been made through the establishment of the railroad labor board, but the teeth of the legislation were withdrawn before enactment and since then both sides have proceeded to defy its orders. Thus no little interest centers at the present time upon the plan to replace the railroad labor board by a plan whereby the differences of the railroads and their employes would be submitted to various boards for adjustment if direct negotiations failed.

This proposal is expected to be presented to congress in the form of the Watson-Parker bill and it naturally promises to be a measure that will get the close scrutiny not only of members of congress but of a great many individuals throughout the country. This it is indicated, is a plan which eventually means arbitration. It may be necessary to go through various boards of conciliation and mediation for the purpose of adjustment before getting there, but the machinery would be provided for that resort rather than a strike. Its purpose is apparently to overcome the inability of the railroad labor board to enforce its decisions and to avoid strikes.

Had such an arrangement existed in regard to the coal industry, or had the recommendations of the coal commission been adopted the strike would have been prevented and production would have continued during adjustment. The railroad labor board was expected to protect the public's interest and the same must be insisted upon in any new legislation.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

Not for some years has there been indulgence by congress in a public buildings bill. There was reason for the use of money in other directions. It may not be possible to say that the government is flush with funds at the present time, but different conditions are faced and recognition is given to the fact that some provision should be made for meeting the situation which has been created by the failure to keep up with public building requirements.

By a vote of more than two to one the house has passed a general public buildings bill which involves the use of $165,000,000, $50,000,000 of which would be for new structures in Washington. This latter expenditure would in all probability cover a period of five years, a fifth of the sum being used each year, under the direction of the secretary of the treasury.

What the senate will do with the bill no one knows. It is in no way to be regarded as a pork barrel measure. The needs of the country have been carefully considered and the expenditures will be made where it has been shown they are needed. The national capital it has been repeatedly set forth what handicaps exist at the present time and how dependent the government is upon leased property, where they are subject to constant rent increases and the great inconvenience of having departments distributed all over the city instead of being housed in one building. There is no reason why these annual rentals should not be turned toward government owned buildings. This would not be wise in every community but the importance of it can be easily recognized concerning the various government departments.

Building by the government has been kept down by war and after that the need for economy. Gradually we are emerging from that situation and getting to the point where it can be appreciated that more economy lies in properly providing for the existing needs.

OUR HIGHWAY PROBLEM

Some idea of what the motor vehicle is demanding in the way of highway construction is furnished by the statement made before the state civil engineers meeting this week at New Haven where the reasons were given for the widening of the Boston post road between Greenwich and New Haven.

When Engineer Bushnell pointed out that traffic was increasing at the rate of 20 per cent a year, and that over 16,000 vehicles passed through Greenwich one day last summer while a census of the road was being taken, it can be readily seen that highways which were first built or even those which had been widened were bound to be cramped by the automobile traffic. Automobiles are gaining every year in the state and the visitors from other states coming here in motor cars are more numerous from year to year, so that with the highway rated as three or four years behind traffic demands the state is providing relief none too soon.

But where are we going to stop in this road building work? Engineer Bushnell figures "on the curve of population increase and registration rates. In 20 years three and one half times the present traffic can be expected, so that, even if the present highway were doubled in width, a parallel route would soon be necessary."

We have seen great strides made in road building in Connecticut. There is no indication of a let-up but with the highways being more and more used for transportation purposes one is at a loss to understand what a half or a full century may bring forth.

MEXICO'S NEW ENFORCEMENT

To most people it might seem that Mexico had enough trouble without dipping into the religious situation as it is, but Mexico is relying on the claim that it is called for under its constitution and therefore must be carried out. However late this discovery may seem to be, and however impartial Mexico may be in closing the religious educational institutions that are not headed by Mexicans, it must realize that it is inevitable that it should bring forth a protest from many directions.

Mexico is apparently determined that there shall be a reduction in the foreign influence now prevalent in that country. It disregards the benefits that may be intended for the youth of that country through the educational institutions sponsored by religious organizations, and it seems to be unmindful of the fact that Mexico's one great need at the present time, and has been for a long period, is education.

When Mexico tells the foreigners engaged in such work that they must stop and get out it indicates a government control which might mean that that government intended to establish substitute schools, but just how far Mexico plans to go in that direction is uncertain.

How Mexico is going to react to the protests that are being made is awaited. It apparently wants to have it understood that it proposes to handle such matters in its own way, but it is no small step. Can Mexico afford to adopt any such policy? Isn't the time coming when it will have cause to regret that it so ruthlessly ousted the influences from other countries which were working for the good of Mexico and its people. Good neighbors are not always appreciated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The predictions of New England are: Continuation of substitutes but increasing coal.

A deadlocked conference commission isn't what is needed to give us a tax reduction bill before the 15th of March.

Of course every train load of anthracite that leaves the coal fields "immediately" will not be stopped to fill your order.

The big job of the officials of the mine workers' union will be to convince the men that they do not need some new officers.

Regardless of what he says Mussolini knows that it takes two to make a fight and Germany isn't in that business just now.

The man on the corner says: Where are those people who used to recognize the necessity of saying, "But to make a long story short?"

Whatever else may be said of the Earl of Craven he didn't ask favoritism and the breaking of the law to permit him to remain here.

The fact that dancing the Charleston is regarded as particularly dangerous to young women will probably mean greater indulgence than ever.

Countess Cathcart says she hasn't run away like the Earl of Craven, but it might be far better if she had. Boasting of her conduct doesn't impress.

SUMMER'S END.

Russet leaves of the oak, golden leaves of the beech were thick upon the ground around the garden seat where the two sat, the slim girl in the orange and white sports suit glancing every now and then in meditative fashion at the good looking young man in golf togs.

"Well," the man said with a quick smile in her direction, "it's been a fine summer after all, hasn't it, Lila? Three months of good weather, good golf and sailing—remember our morning horseback rides through the wood paths?"

"Yes," said the girl in orange and white, "I remember."

He looked at her quickly, but she met his gaze with calm openness. He leaned back as though relieved. "Well," he said, opening a cigarette case, "I think you and I have had the best of it this season—we've been pals and had no end of a good time and we're still friends, which is more than you can say for the rest of the crowd up here at the lake! They're either engaged or sworn enemies—about the same thing, I guess."

He laughed comfortably with an upward inflection and she smiled a bit.

"That's what I like about you," he told her. "You're sensible and you have humor—Lord, a woman without humor! You comprehend because of it, see all sides of a situation, you know! I'm telling you right now that the main reason Gates and Barbara had an engagement party last night to announce it is because little Barbe worked that wide-eyed, trusting, expectant look. And he hadn't the nerve not to respond as was evidently expected—it's true!"

"Barbara is a dear," she defended, "and he seems to care a lot—people do, sometimes, Bill!"

"Of course," he admitted, striking another match. "But that isn't all! A man who marries before he is on his feet in business and independently well-to-do is simply short-sighted, asinine and stupid! I've explained that fact plenty of times! When a man settles down he should have no secret regrets for travel he didn't get or things like that to haunt him when the butchers' and grocers' and doctor's bills begin to roll in!"

She laughed out softly. "Oh it isn't as simple and easy as that," she said. "Your far-sighted man is quite likely to find he's forgotten all about how to fall in love when he has tried everything else and attempts that last!"

"I hope you aren't going to turn cynical," the man reproved with a slight frown. "Doesn't go with your type—you're the sweet and gentle kind really, Lila, in spite of your modern veneer! You—you have a way of making a man fearfully—fond of you, you know!"

"Oh, thank you," she said in what seemed pretty deprecation. He started to lay his hand on her arm but thought better of it. "One thing," he said, "is odd about you! A man can't tell in the least what's going on inside your head! I believe you might be quite crazy about a fellow and never give a hint"

"Why should I?" the girl asked amusedly

He turned on her a trifle roughly. "See here!" he said. "I like you a lot—you know it—and I won't deny—hang it all, Lila, you do like me, don't you?"

A color had risen in her cheeks, but her expression was merely friendly and kindly. "Of course!" she told him in evident surprise. "You've been the best sort of summer pal, and I'm really quite fond of you, Bill, and all that sort of thing! It was so comfortable to feel that neither of us was likely to misunderstand the other. We've had a pleasant summer with no incipient matrimonial tragedy hovering over us. So all's well! Give me a cigarette."

He passed the case, but his frown lingered. "I never heard you sound so hard," he pronounced with distaste. "I've always thought of you as exactly the opposite—"

She laughed idly. "Doesn't pay," she told him. "The tender, trusting line! Look at Barbara for example—engaged, poor child!"

He stared at her. "Wouldn't you—to you mean to say—"

The girl jumped to her feet and even patted his shoulder. "Hold hard, Bill!" she reproved. "You certainly aren't trying to ask me if I wouldn't have grabbed you if you had proposed to me! But between you and me—I wouldn't. You're quite safe, boy! Come on, it's time to go in!"

He did not see the one tear that blinked down the side of her nose as she tossed her head airily. Sometimes women weep not so much over losing a man as over losing their cherished, entirely mistaken idea of what the man really is.—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

John Burroughs, the Farm Boy, the Great Naturalist

Upon the shores of the Hudson river, back of the steep hills that command a wide view, is a cottage that is noted as the home of John Burroughs, the great naturalist. That little cottage is a wayside shrine both for those who love nature and for those who love books; for John Burroughs was both a great naturalist and a great writer. When he died at a ripe age, full of years and wisdom, he had gained the right to be called one of the best-loved of men and one of the most delightful of all modern essayists.

John Burroughs, like so many of the world's great men, was the product of the country farm. In summers he spent his time in the field work of the farm; in winters he trudged through the snow to the little school. He did not have the advantage of being surrounded by books and papers of all descriptions, of going to the theaters, of visiting museums, nor even of talking with educated people. He was surrounded by the kindly but more or less ignorant country people, who expected him to become a "person" like themselves. Behind him, in the same school, sat a boy named Jay Gould. What would the teacher have said if she could have looked into the book of the future and have read that one of her pupils would live to become a great naturalist and the other to gain mastery of railroads and of finance!

Even as a small boy John Burroughs had been fond of writing, and he had tried to imitate the great authors of English prose. With his natural love of books it was quite in the course of events that he should study further and become a teacher. In the days when school did not keep he worked at farm work, and thus grew close to the heart of nature. When he was 26 he obtained a position in the Treasury Department at Washington, and there worked at dull, routine work for nine years. After that he was a bank examiner. In spite of the fact that he dealt with prosaic facts and figures, he turned more and more to nature and literature. He wrote books, such as Wake Robin, Sharp Eyes, Birds and Bees, and the like, and made himself the friend of all people, because he was the friend of nature. Great men were proud to boast his acquaintance and came from far and near to visit him in his simple home on the hillside. As he grew older he wrote more and more on meditative and philosophic subjects his last book being called Accepting the Universe.

He who had the soul of love gained the love of all.

Stories That Recall Others

Pints, Not Gallons

Mr. X. wished to buy a new milch cow. He saw one advertised and went to see her. The owner, a woman, said she was a good cow, and gave eight gallons a day.

Mr. X. thought that was good enough and soon bargained for her. She did not give eight gallons, nor near it, so Mr. X. went back to see the woman.

When he drove up she was standing in the door and before he had time to say anything to her she said:

"O Mr. X., I sees my mistake; I sees my mistake. I said the cow gave eight gallons a day of milk, and I meant eight pints.

Time Goes on Apace

A certain man visits the city one evening a week on business and in order to get back home in time the next day he spends the night at the hotel and has a call between 5 and 6.

One morning recently when he was awakened from his dreams by the telephone bell, he found his watch had stopped. He dressed and went down to the grill and ordered oatmeal, toast and coffee for breakfast. The waiter informed him, however, that they had no cooked cereal at that time of day. One of the other occupants of the grill was getting a shrimp salad and he thought it absurd to have such a dish for breakfast.

After breakfast he went back to his room and soon started for the station. "What time is it?" he asked the elevator boy. "A quarter of one," was the answer and there was time for another nap before breakfast.

DECREASE IN DEATHS BY AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

Deaths from automobile accidents in two of the three Connecticut cities surveyed by the department of commerce at Washington, show decrease from the four weeks ending January 30, as compared with the previous four weeks' period. New Haven reported an increase, while Waterbury and Bridgeport each showed a decrease, the total number of deaths being nine in the three cities both periods.

In New Haven the number of deaths resulting from automobile accidents rose from five to eight; in Waterbury the number dropped from two to none at all, and in Bridgeport from two to one.

In giving the above figures the department points out that they include the deaths in each city regardless of the place of accident and regardless of residence.

JOLLY SIX SUPPER AND SOCIAL EVENING

The Jolly Six, the 1925 supper committee of Clara Barton Tent, No. 2, Daughters of Veterans, and a number of invited guests held a get-together dinner party Thursday evening at the home of one of the members, Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, 106 Broad street.

Arriving at 5:30 o'clock in colonial costume, they were immediately ushered into the spacious dining room, which was lavishly decorated in red, white and blue crepe paper festoned and lanterned. The table was in gala George Washington table cloth, candles and centerpiece of red and white tulips was most inviting. Each guest, 25 in number, found her place by place cards and with them were found fancy caps, napkins and dinner rings as favors.

The hostess, Mrs. Bogue, then read a poem composed by herself and presented their much loved chairman a handsome orchid baronet satin kimono. The recipient responded in a very fitting manner. Justice was then done to the following menu: Fruit cocktail, tomato bisque, chicken pie, mashed potato, mashed turnips, celery, olives, pickles, fruit salad, jelly rolls, French ice box pudding, and coffee.

The guests then adjourned to the parlor, where a delightful program was carried out, as follows: Piano selection, Lena O'Brien; solo, It's a Long, Long Trail, Alice Brinkman; reading, Elizabeth Mackey; solo, We Won't Go Home Until Morning, Annie Turner; poem, Reminiscent of 1924 and 1925, composed and read by Elizabeth Bogue. D. Louisa Atterbury interpreted the one-act play entitled the Unexpected Gift. Dancing with Miss Lena Lester at the piano brought a very pleasant evening to a close, the guests declaring Mrs. Bogue a very efficient hostess, giving her three rising cheers when leaving for their homes in the wee hours of the morning.

The committee, Mrs. J. Louisa Atterbury, chairman, Annie B. Turner, Elizabeth Bogue, Lena O'Brien, Elizabeth Mackey and Alice C. Brickman, who was president of the tent last year, was in charge of the successful affair.

WOMEN VOTERS HEAR STATE INSTITUTIONS DESCRIBED

Addresses by Walter J. Tucker, superintendent of the Mystic Oral school, and by Dr. M. B. Bailou, assistant superintendent of the Mansfield Training School and Hospital, were the features in the afternoon session of the one-day citizenship school held Wednesday at the Buckingham Memorial by the New London County League of Women Voters.

With the aid of about 30 slides, Dr. Bailou gave the members a clear and vivid idea of the care and training of mentally defective children with emphasis on the work being done by the Mansfield school. He mentioned briefly the wide-spread prevalence of feeble mindedness, pointing out some of the outstanding characteristics of mental defectives, and offering a few suggestions for the better understanding and care of the large number of such children who must receive their education and training in the public schools and in their own homes.

Mrs. R. J. Whitham, of Groton, the county chairman, introduced as the first speaker at the morning session, Miss Mary Bulkeley, state president of the League of Women Voters, and a trustee of Connecticut college. Miss Bulkeley explained the workings of the league from the locals up through the national body at Washington, and emphasized the fact that the league is a non-partisan organization.

Miss Emily S. Brown, only woman county commissioner in the state, was then introduced and gave a general outline of the administration of county institutions, explaining many details such as the widows' aid law.

Following a box luncheon, Mrs. Annie Porritt, state chairman of the committee on efficiency in government, proposed a means of training new members for the league by instituting a system of godmothers whereby each new member would be assigned to an old member of the political party with which the former wishes to be identified, and be instructed by the godmother on the principles and ideals of the party.

INSPECTING AUTOMOBILE LIGHTS POLICE LAND LOAD OF LIQUOR

Officers Albright and Kulowski, two of a squad of state police officers stationed in various sections of the city early Thursday evening inspecting headlights and tail lights on automobiles, discovered that one machine they stopped was carrying a load of beer. The driver and his companion, Clifford Adams, 26, and Fred Spencer, 25, both of Waterbury, were arrested and locked up at local police headquarters.

The officers were on duty on Laurel Hill stopping machines and inspecting the lights. Along came a Marmon, headed toward the city, bearing Waterbury numbers. The officers halted the Marmon and started their usual inspection for faulty lights. They found that the tail light was faulty and that National lenses, illegal, were on the headlights.

Then happening to glance into the machine Officer Albright saw a suspicious looking bag. He touched the bag and it gave signs of containing bottles. "What's in those bottles," asked the officer of the driver. "Oh, nothing much," came the reply. Investigation revealed the fact that the "nothing much" was beer.

There were 24 bottles labeled Canadian Ale, over 2 1-2% alcoholic content and there were 24 bottles of alleged home brew. The Canadian Ale bottles hold a little less than a quart each. The driver and the man with him were arrested and escorted to police headquarters. It is said that the beer was for delivery in Norwich.

Adams is charged with transporting liquor, with having no registration for the car he was driving and with using illegal lenses. Spencer was booked on a charge of transporting liquor. Bonds in each case were set at $1,000.

The inspection of headlights and tail lights also resulted in the arrest of a sailor charged with failure to have his auto registration with him. The three men will be presented in the city court today (Friday).

SOFT COAL DEMONSTRATIONS ARE GIVEN IN CITY

A demonstration in the use of soft coal is being carried out in various parts of the city in accordance with a plan indorsed by Gov. John H. Trumbull. A truck equipped with a regular kitchen stove is giving the demonstrations. The equipment is from the Soft Coal Service of Boston. Two demonstrations were held Thursday at Union Square, one at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and the other at 7 in the evening. The demonstrations are being given by experts who answer questions regarding the use of soft coal.

For the information of the public the following description of various kinds of soft coal is published herewith:

Lumpy "run-of-mine" low volatile bituminous coal is the most available and best suited low cost fuel for domestic purposes at the present time. A certain amount of fine coal is desirable for banking and holding the fire. The fine coal is not inferior in quality to the lumps; in many cases it is superior.

"Prepared sizes" refers to soft coal made from the lumps into different sizes similar to those of hard coal.

There are two distinct processes in burning soft coal—(a) to burn the gases given off, and (b) to burn the coke. In the first process it is necessary, in order to eliminate the possibility of excessive smoke, to allow a proper mixture of air and to leave a pilot flame.

Efficient—High in heat value.

Economical—Reasonable in price.

Plentiful—Shipped by rail and by water.

Convenient—Least ash. No clinkers.

Hints—Use slightly less, coal than with anthracite. Fine coal is purest and readily cakes into lumps. Leave ash on grates to slow up rate of burning. The colder the weather the deeper the fire. Dampen coal for easy, clean handling. Keep ash pit clean.

Besides the demonstrations at Union Square Thursday afternoon and evening there were demonstrations at the New Haven railroad station at 3 o'clock, Preston Bridge at 5 o'clock and the Central Vermont station entrance at 6 o'clock.

Today (Friday) there will be demonstrations at the corner of Sachem and Lafayette streets at 12:30, at the corner of Mechanic and Asylum streets at 3 o'clock, North Main street, near the Greeneville fire house at 5 o'clock and at Union square at 6 o'clock. The demonstrations are being directed by William Beasley of Boston.

Several pictures of the demonstration truck and local and town city officials were taken Thursday by Don Houghton and are to be sent to the company's headquarters at Boston as part of the records of towns visited. Those in the pictures included Mayor Milo R. Waters, First Selectman William S. Murray, John J. O'Rourke of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, Attorney Charles V. James and William Beasley, in charge of the demonstration.

That New England still has a considerable quantity of coal on hand is shown by replies to questionaires sent out by the New England affairs committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. The Boston Chamber's committee on fuel with the New England affairs committee of the Boston chamber are co-operating with local organizations throughout New England in an effort to assist in conserving coal and in the use of substitute fuels, especially low volatile bituminous coal. Leaflets showing the methods of most efficiently burning low volatile bituminous coal have been prepared by the Chamber and are available in quantities to all commercial organizations throughout New England and to the general public. They may be procured by addressing the Secretary, Committee on Fuel Economy, Boston Chamber of Commerce, 80 Federal street, Boston, Mass.

CONNECTICUT LIGHT ON PROHIBITION LAW VIOLATORS

Prohibition violators in Connecticut get off with the lightest time sentences, but fines rank third highest compared with the other New England states. This fact is brought out in figures issued Thursday by the department of justice for the fiscal year ending June 30. It is revealed also that the number of convictions in the Nutmeg state for the fiscal year was the lowest in New England.

Convictions for prohibition law violations during the first quarter of the present fiscal year were exactly half fewer than during the corresponding quarter in 1925.

A total of 114 persons were convicted in Connecticut during the past fiscal year for violating the prohibition laws and were fined to the total of $26,931, or an average fine of $236.23. The average sentence in days was 1.66.

New Hampshire imposed the heaviest average fine $273.33 and the third highest average sentence in days, 9.19, the total number of convictions in the state being third highest in New England, 367.

Massachusetts, reporting the highest number of convictions, 904, imposed the smallest average fine $120.02, the average sentence in days being 3.31, fourth highest.

In Rhode Island the number of convictions was second to the Bay state, 448, and the average fine was second highest, $271.57. The average sentence in days, however, was second smallest, 1.96.

Maine gave prohibition violators the highest sentence in days, 64.91, although the average fine was second lowest, $141.66, and the number of convictions 254, third lowest. Vermont, with 227 convictions, reported an average fine of $150.08 and sentence in days of 9.59.

The number of convictions in Connecticut for the first quarter of last year was eight, with fines totaling $1,250, while this quarter the number was four with fines aggregating $750.

NORWICH MAN AND WIFE WILL BE DEPORTED

Having become public charges, Guiseppe Vendelo of No. 139 Chestnut street this city and Francesco, 67, of Hartford, his wife, are to be deported to Italy and are scheduled to sail Saturday. Mr. Vendelo was taken in charge Wednesday by William Clark of the United States department of labor immigration service, who came here for that purpose. Vendelo was kept at police headquarters overnight and Thursday afternoon was taken to Hartford where he will be joined by Mrs. Vendelo who has been taken into custody there. From Hartford they will be taken to New York and placed aboard a ship bound for Italy.

The couple came to this country, arriving in New York, August 15, 1921, intending to make their home here. Some of their children, married, have homes of their own here and it is alleged that the children have declined to aid the elderly couple financially although it is said they have given the couple gifts now and then.

Neither of the couple have worked enough to support themselves. They have had aid from the town twice and have been in the habit of receiving aid from their neighbors. Italian friends of the couple appeared at the court Thursday and tried to secure their liberty but were unsuccessful.

FAMOUS POLISH ARCHBISHOP DIES IN PASSAIC, N. J.

Archbishop John Felix Cieplak of Vilna, Poland, who a week ago was to have visited Rev. S. A. Ickiek, pastor of St. Joseph's Polish Roman Catholic church in this city, died Wednesday night in St. Mary's hospital, Passaic, N. J. He had been sick for a week with influenza and pneumonia. Consul General Gruska and members of the Roman Catholic clergy were at his bedside. The archbishop, who had been in this country since November had expected to sail Saturday for Poland.

The noted prelate, who was 69, once became the center of world-wide sympathy and interest when he was sentenced to death by a soviet tribunal for resisting seizure of church property.

Monsignor Cieplak, formerly archbishop of Russia, was sentenced March 26, 1923, in Moscow to be shot by a firing squad. Vicar General Butchkavitch was tried and sentenced with him, and later executed.

The United States joined with other countries and the archbishop was commuted to 10 years' imprisonment. Through the efforts of Premier Mussolini of Italy and the Roman Catholic church in the United States, he was released from prison in March, 1924. He was the guest of Pope Pius in Rome for 18 months.

Archbishop Cieplak visited a number of American cities after his arrival, including Bridgeport, Worcester and Webster, Mass., Detroit and Green Bay, Wis., and New York. HEARING $15,000 SUIT FOR AUTOMOBILE DAMAGES

Thursday afternoon in the superior court at New London before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury the trial was started in the $15,000 suit of Gladys E. Palmer, a minor, of Hopkinton, R. I., against Owens C. Wolfe, of New London, for injuries she received when struck in Hopkinton by an automobile driven by Wolfe.

When court adjourned for the day at 5 o'clock, the plaintiff had two or three more witnesses to put on the stand. She brings the suit through her father, Albert E. Palmer, with Attorneys George R. McKenna and Clarence Roche as counsel for the plaintiff, Attorneys E. Victor Prince and Thomas R. Troland for the defendant.

The plaintiff alleges that on May 23, 1924, at 7 o'clock in the morning, she was crossing the highway at the intersection of High and Main streets in Hopkinton and in the exercise of due care, proceeded to cross Main street in an easterly direction. She alleges that at the same time the defendant was driving an automobile in a northerly direction in Main street, "recklessly, negligently and wantonly operated at a dangerous rate of speed, greater than was proper and reasonable under the circumstances."

She claims that he was driving at a high rate of speed as he approached the intersection of Main and High streets and failing to give any warning, the auto struck the plaintiff, throwing her to the ground with great force. As a result the plaintiff claims to have had her head cut, eyes bruised and lacerated, permanently impairing the same, teeth broken and damaged, both arms bruised and lacerated, nose and neck cut and injured, right leg injured, shoulders bruised and wrenched, concussion of the brain and other serious internal injuries.

The plaintiff claims that she was obliged to expend large sums of money for medical, dental and surgical treatment, for nursing and medicines and that she has been unable to work as a weaver since and will be deprived of such wages in the future.

The defendant denies the allegations regarding reckless driving and not giving warning while the extent of the injuries will remain to be proven. The defendant admits paragraph 1 of the complaint except for the statement that the plaintiff was proceeding across the street "in the exercise of due care."

Miss Palmer who is 20 years of age was the first witness called to the stand.

She described how she was hit by the automobile, which she said, was coming downhill towards her, and she told of the extent of her injuries and her inability to work.

The second witness was a neighbor of the plaintiff, who heard the crash as he was standing a short distance away, but was not looking at the moment of the accident. He told of the position of the injured woman and of the Wolfe automobile when he arrived a moment after the accident happened and he told what he did in assisting the plaintiff.

Three men who were in a truck which had just passed in front of Miss Palmer before she was hit testified to meeting the Wolfe car on the hill and one of them said she was struck by the left front mudguard. One of the men also testified to the speed at which the Wolfe machine was traveling.

Medical testimony as to the extent of the injuries and the testimony of the mother of the young woman will probably close the testimony for the plaintiff, it is expected.

CATCHING AUTOS WITH THEIR LIGHTS DEFECTIVE

Shrill whistles from state policemen at different points in the city brought numberless automobiles to a halt on Thursday night as the men from the Groton barracks went at their work of checking up on automobiles with defective headlights or taillights.

Scores of machines were caught with no taillights burning and were given orders to have these made right without delay. The policemen worked in pairs on Laurel Hill, Thames street and at Burnham square.

CATCHES YOUNG CRIMINALS ON THE WEST SIDE

Juvenile delinquency apparently crops out on the West Side more than in any other section of the city, but the offenders have been rounded up in short order in several recent cases by Officer John O'Neil who is on the day beat on the West Side. He has located the thieving boys and recovered the plunder as well, in a recent case he recovered four searchlights, two watches, six locks and other articles that had been stolen from a plumber's shop.

Though small in stature and few in years some of them are brazen in their defiance of the law and one youthful offended recently tried to lay down the law to the officer but failed to make good.

The boy's mother came to Officer O'Neil and told him that $14 was missing from her house and she felt sure her son had taken it. Accordingly the mother and the policeman went to the West Side school which the boy was attending and had him summoned out into the hallway to see them. He was charged with taking the money but he stoutly denied it. His pockets and his clothing were thoroughly searched but no money could be found.

"Take off your shoes," at length came the stern command from the officer.

"You can't search my shoes without a warrant," responded the defiant youngster, but he wilted when the officer repeated his command, and the shoes came off. In one of them was found $13 of the missing $14. The rest had been spent by the youthful plunderer of his mother's bureau drawer.

YALE CREW MAN DECLARED INELIGIBLE

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 18.—(AP)—A. E. Hudson, 27, of White Plains, N. Y., who rowed at number 4 on Yale's winning varsity crew last year, was ineligible under a provision of the Harvard-Yale-Princeton agreement on account of his previous loss of class rating in June, 1924, it has recently developed.

In a statement today Professor George H. Nettleton, chairman of the board of control of the Yale Athletic association, explained the situation, and announced the disqualification of Hudson from all intercollegiate contests for 1925-1926. The full evidence in the case was communicated at once to Harvard and Princeton, with apologies and deep regrets of Yale, Professor Nettleton says.

Yale last year defeated Pennsylvania, Columbia, Cornell, Princeton and Harvard on the water. Hudson who sat in the shell in each race left college June, 1924, not returning until the mid-term last year. He has been in good scholastic standing during his college work.

Professor Nettleton's statement follows:

"It has recently developed that Mr A. E. Hudson, 1927, though in good scholastic standing during the academic year 1924-1925, and so attested on the list of crew candidates duly submitted to the college office for approval or disqualification prior to the crew races of 1925, was ineligible under a provision of the Harvard-Yale-Princeton agreement on account of his previous loss of class rating in June, 1924.

"The full evidence in the case was communicated at once to Harvard and Princeton, with apologies and deep regrets of Yale. This evidence, written and otherwise, is conclusive that, though Mr. Hudson and all others individually concerned acted in entire good faith, Yale stands responsible for the error committed. Recognizing that responsibility, the Yale Athletic association proposed and has determined the disqualification of Mr. Hudson from all intercollegiate contests for the full current academic year, 1925-1926.

He has already had six months training with this famous regiment and as a student at Cambridge has been devoting himself to military subjects. He said, however, that he intends to continue athletic competition after entering the army.

Lord Burghley was a member of the British team at the 1924 Olympic games. He made two athletic invasions of the United States last year, when he chalked up victories in the 400-meter hurdles at the University of Pennsylvania relays and in the 120-yard high hurdles in the track meet between Yale, Harvard and Oxford-Cambridge teams. He is the son and heir of the Earl of Exeter.

CLOSE FINISH IN DOG DERBY AT QUEBEC

QUEBEC, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Speed and endurance both of dogs and drivers were demonstrated today in the first day's race of the Quebec International dog derby. Shorty Russick's wolfhounds and Emil St. Goddard's greyhound huskies, from The Pas, proved the best among the 147 dogs that started. G. Chevrette of Quebec, driving greyhounds, finished one minute ahead of Russick on the 41-mile run, but at the end he carried two of his dogs on his sled. His time was 3:56:15, and Russick made it in 3:57:15, with Emil St. Goddard, the youthful French-Canadian musher, only 45 seconds behind.

With Chevrette now two dogs short in his team starting tomorrow morning and Russick and St. Goddard with their full team of seven dogs in good condition there will be a battle royal for first place.

Eight dogs were carried across the finish line by various drivers on their sleds.

The course was not as heavy as expected. Only an odd snow drift was encountered and outside of the eight dogs brought back home on sleds, the remaining 139 racing hounds are not a bit the worse for the day's run.

OSTON TAKES FRANCHISE IN RED GRANGE'S LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Boston joined New York, Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Newark, New Jersey, today as the fifth franchise holder in the new American League of Professional Football clubs. The organization meeting here was adjourned to New York next month when rules and a schedule for next fall will be adopted.

Cleveland, St. Louis, Cincinnati Brooklyn and Chicago franchise seekers were given a week in which to prepare and submit certain information which C. C. Pyle, who with "Red" Grange is promoting the league, and the credentials committee regard as highly important.

The team which George Wilson University of Washington All-American is organizing on the west coast, will not be included in the ten-team membership. By agreement, his eleven will play a schedule which will include games with each of the league teams.

Leaving behind expressions of good faith in the form of three thousand dollar forfeits, the franchise holders adjourned late today to re-convene in the east next month on a date to be set by the temporary chairman.

MAJOR GOLF DATES FOR 1926 ARE ANNOUNCED

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—(AP) Dates for the major golf tournaments were announced today with the fixing of the western amateur at the White Bear Yacht club, St. Paul, for the week of July 18-24 and the western open at the Highland Country club, Indianapolis for August 26-28.

Most of the 1926 championships are set for later dates than usual this year, to allow American players to compete in the British amateur and open as well as the Walker team contest. The European classics will not end until June 5.

The earliest meet is the trans-Mississippi championship at the Algonquin Club, St. Louis, June 21. The national open is to be held at the Scioto club, Columbus, July 5, after regional elimination rounds. The national amateur does not come until September 13. At Baltimore, New Jersey, while the women's national will be held at Philadelphia September 26.

GEORGE DE MARR WINS OPENING FEATURE AT TAMPA

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(AP)—George DeMarr won the opening feature at Tampa today, the inaugural handicap, beating Gliding Fox and Just David over a mile in 1:48 3-5.

One of the best fields of three-year-olds assembled at Miami this season saw Nassau dash to a six-furlong victory in the St. John's handicap. The G. D. Widener entry was two lengths ahead of George Ray, which outran Bookbinder by a nose for the place. The time was 1:13 1-5.

Cherry Tree, slightly favored in the mutuels, took the handicap of a mile and seventy yards at Tijuana easily after Nose Dive had set the pace into the stretch to take second place over Master Crump. The Desert, former stake winner, suffered a broken leg in the fifth race and had to be shot.

Tea Ball, a heavy choice, scored in the New Orleans feature at a mile and seventy yards, outpointing Cowheel and Outlaw in 1:48 flat.

THUNBERG HOPES TO RETURN ANOTHER SEASON

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Clas Thunberg, Olympic speed skating champion, hopes to return for another tour of the rinks of the United States and Canada, he declared today before sailing for his home in Finland.

"I do not feel that I did myself justice, except in a few races at Detroit, Lake Placid and Saranac Lake," said Thunberg. "Conditions were strange to me and I was handicapped by racing under rules and on tracks altogether different from those in Europe. However, I do not intend this as an alibi but hope to return some other season to meet your best skating speed."

MISS WILLS' RECENT DEFEAT DOES NOT AFFECT HER PLAY AT BEAULIEU

BEAULIEU, France, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Helen Wills returned to the tennis courts today for the first time since her valiant, though losing battle of Tuesday against Suzanne Lenglen, and although the effects of that struggle appeared in her rather pale and drawn face she played with a vigor which bespoke the recuperative power of youth. Two one-sided victories were her day's achievement, in the opening rounds of the singles and mixed doubles of the Beaulieu tournament.

The American champion defeated Miss Lilly Hamerton, a promising young English player, in two love sets, and then, with Charles H. Kingsley, of England, won from Miss Dorothy Thompson and Roger Duplaix, 6-1, 6-0.

Meanwhile her great rival, Mlle. Lenglen, remained indoors, asking further time to recover from the strain of her victory of Tuesday. She will not appear again until Sunday, when, with Mrs. Satterthwaite, she will play in the quarter finals of the women's doubles, having reached that stage through the default of opponents in the first and second rounds.

Miss Wills played as serenely today as if her strenuous battle with Mlle. Lenglen had never taken place, or at least as if it were already forgotten. Her exhibition in the doubles was the best she has yet given on the Riviera. In the singles her superiority was overwhelming; Miss Hamerton did not bring a single game to deuce and lost four love games.

The American champion said her knee, slightly injured last Monday, gave her very little trouble today and is healing nicely. She said she liked the Beaulieu courts better than those of the Carlton club, on which she met the French champion, as far as light is concerned.

"I am in for another month of tennis," she told the correspondent, "and I will go through with the schedule I have mapped out, which includes the Nice tournament the second week in March."

Since Mlle. Lenglen also is entered in the singles of that tournament, it is now expected that the second meeting of the girl champions will come in the finals. The organizers already are arranging to have extra seats erected and will be prepared to accommodate 10,000 spectators.

"My daughter is still very nervous," said Mlle. Lenglen's father today in explanation of her continued absence from the courts. He said Suzanne took an automobile ride in Cannes in the morning but preferred to remain at home in the afternoon."

"Miss Wills complained that a certain make of balls was used in our first tournament to which she was not accustomed," Mlle. Lenglen said. "We have given orders that the kind of ball with which Miss Wills always plays it, America shall be brought for our tournament at Nice in March. Suzanne is not satisfied with the score she made against your champion Tuesday, she feels that she can do better and asserts that she played below form. Miss Wills again and show that the Her most intense desire is to meet score of 6-3, 8-6 was wrong."

The point score of Miss Wills' singles match follows:

First Set.
Miss Wills ...6 4 4 4 4 6—28—6
Miss Hamerton 0 2 3 0 3 0—8—0
Second Set.
Miss Wills ...4 4 4 4 4 4—24—6
Miss Hamerton 0 0 2 3 2 1—7—0

PROMINENT TURF MAN DIES AT BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 18.—(AP)—Spalding Lowe Jenkins, one of the most prominent figures of the American turf, died at his home here of pneumonia late today. He was 51 years old. He was president of the Maryland State Fair, Inc., which operates Laurel race track, and formerly president of the Maryland Jockey club, which operates Pimlico race track. His marriage to Miss Sara Kennedy Boone in Paris, in 1905, was of widespread social interest.

Mr. Jenkins had suffered from a cold for several weeks, and was forced to take big bed last Monday.

As president of the Maryland State Fair, Inc., he arranged some of the most attractive race events in the history of Maryland tracks. It was through his efforts that Pierre Wertheimer's Epinard was brought to Laurel to compete with the best of this country's thoroughbreds. The Washington Handicap, Maryland Handicap, Maney Handicap, Laurel Stakes and Chevy Chase Steeplechase, now outstanding annual features of the Laurel card, were the direct results of Mr. Jenkins' work.

He directed a string of horses himself as one time, in addition to his self at one time, in addition to his work as a race track official. Most prominent was Polly Ann, a filly which gained fame by running a dead heat with Walter J. Salmon's Careful in a jimico serial weight for age race.

Mr. Jenkins was regarded as an expert horseman. During the war he was a captain in the army remount service.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

I remember when I was a young man and, like all other young men of reasonably natural tastes, devoured everything which Dickens wrote, that "Mrs. Jellyby" of "Bleak House" impressed herself very unpleasantly upon my imagination.

"Mrs. Jellyby," as all who have read that story will remember, was a London lady who devoted her life to the welfare of that portion of Africa known as "Borrioboola Gha." She neglected her home, her husband and her children. But she let nothing interfere with her sending flannel petticoats to the pickaninnies of "Borrioboola Gha," and second-hand parasols to their dusky mothers.

I used to think, as I read of her, that she was a triumph of the novelist's amazingly fecund imagination; that she must have been "made out of whole cloth," since no creature of the sort could possibly exist in reality. She was too utterly absurd for even an asylum of freaks.

Later experience led me to feel less admiration for Dickens' imagination and more for his powers of observation. I found that there really were Jellybys in the world and in both sexes; men and women whose souls were above the commonplace tasks which lay at their hands, but who were simply crazy to do something for somebody out of sight and far away.
